

Fall 2005

Mug Shot

Cate Marvin

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation

Marvin, Cate (2005) "Mug Shot," CutBank: Vol. 1 : Iss. 63 , Article 31.

Available at: <https://scholarworks.umt.edu/cutbank/vol1/iss63/31>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in CutBank by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.

Mug Shot

Face a distortion. Expression falling back into distance, as a crowd recedes behind a fleeing man. Iris's brown black back at the flash, and a hoard of curses perched on the brink of lip. The mouth cruelly fixed and stained with an outline of dark lipstick, and in her eyes a light stirred with the throb of siren's pulse, its mix of glee and negligence an affront to any decent citizen. A face crumbling like an old shed that begs to be knocked down.

with a single kick. Eyes roaming the room as one might survey land standing neck-deep in a pit, whisky-pitched and ether-lit. This, as a whole, pulled into the second's suck of lens: while mirth crawled the halls of countenance, sorrows flowered behind the brow, and apathy took up residence, a serious and true crime was being planned.