ACCREDITATION TEAM VISITS
UM SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

MISSOULA --

A four-member team from the agency that accredits 215 of the nation's professional business schools has completed a three-day visit at the University of Montana.

Paul Blomgren, dean of the UM School of Business Administration, said the team from the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business looked at the school's graduate and undergraduate programs. The team will now evaluate the information collected during the visit and subsequently give the University a written report of their findings. Their recommendation on accreditation will be presented to the AACSB at its annual meeting in April.

The dean noted that the school's undergraduate program has been continuously accredited since 1949. The more recent master-of-business-administration program has not been reviewed before.
