Course Description

The study of rhetorical criticism and theory begins with the understanding that as human beings, we use language and other symbols to shape the world in which we live. Rhetorical theory allows us to explore how symbols function and rhetorical criticism is one of the processes through which we assess symbolic acts. In this course you will learn about contemporary approaches to rhetorical criticism and theory. Methods to be covered include Neo-Aristotelian, cluster, pentadic, metaphoric, narrative, ideographic, feminist, and visual criticism. You will be required to participate in class discussions, complete quizzes/participation questions, write two original rhetorical analyses which will culminate in a final, third essay, and present your research to the class. Preliminary criteria for each are outlined below.

Required Reading

Foss, S. K. (2009) Rhetorical Criticism: Exploration & Practice, (4th Edition). Long Grove, IL: Waveland.

Lunsford, A. A. (2011). The Everyday Writer, (4th Edition). Boston: Bedford/St. Martin's.

A note about The Everyday Writer: Although I do not assign readings from this book, you will be held accountable for much of the material contained in it, including the sections titled "Usage and Style" and APA or MLA Style.

Articles posted on Moodle.

Academic Misconduct

Academic misconduct includes cheating, plagiarizing, and deliberately interfering with the work of others. Plagiarizing means representing the work of someone else (such as another student or an author of a book or an article) as your own. If you use the ideas or words of someone else on an exam or in a paper, you must cite the source of the original information. See Lunsford's The Everyday Writer for a thorough discussion of plagiarism and how to avoid it. If you have specific questions about how to avoid plagiarism, ask me for help. Following university regulations, cheating and plagiarism will be penalized with a failing grade in this course.

Description of Assignments:

Quizzes and Participation Questions

Completing the assigned readings will be key to your success in the course. As such, although I will not be giving formal exams, I will often administer quizzes or short participation questions designed to test your understanding of the assigned readings. You should be prepared to complete quizzes/participation questions on a regular basis. Dates of quizzes/questions will not be announced.

Participation

This course will be run as a seminar, as such, students will be expected to come to class ready to discuss the assigned readings. In good seminars, student questions and insights direct group discussions so the quality of the class discussions rests largely on your participation skills. To be good participants, it is essential that you read the assigned material critically and actively.

Project Proposal

On Thursday, February 20, you will submit your project proposal. This will include a discussion of the artifact you will likely use for analysis in your first two papers. In the proposal you should describe your artifact, justify your choice (e.g., why is this an appropriate artifact for analysis? What do you hope to learn through examining it?) and provide contextual information (e.g., when and where did the artifact appear? Who observed/heard/read it? Who delivered/wrote/created it?).

The quizzes/questions, your overall participation, your project proposal, and the presentation of your research to the class combined will count for a total of 100 points.

Papers

Over the course of the semester you will write and submit two critiques of your chosen artifact. Your first paper will utilize neo-Aristotelian, cluster, pentadic, or narrative analysis; your second paper will utilize metaphoric, ideographic, feminist, or visual analysis. One or both of these critiques will serve as the basis for your final essay.

Final Essay

Your final essay will constitute a complete piece of rhetorical criticism, including an introduction, theoretical/methodological overview, contextual section, rhetorical analysis, and conclusions. Each student will present her or his research to the class during the final week of classes or during our scheduled finals period. The final essay is due Tuesday, May 13 at 8:00 am.
