THE COURSE OF AN URGE

I.

Pick a shore
worth a sponge’s
gaps, or carry
bucketfuls
back home—and scrub
every surface
with that liquid—

II.

I’ve chucked birch seeds into sinkholes and wept—I moved near this lake to get some rest, but today from the foyer I hear a loon: I become lucid. In the poolhouse, sniffing around, I can’t find any hooks...

III.

Tall

tall worms, tall
tall pipes—
tall tall
tall fish, and tall
tall eyes—
