Pharmacy Pill Factory Features Mechanization

Many of the prescriptions and medicines issued from the health service and the pharmacy school apothecary shop are manufactured on the campus.

The pharmacy school has an air-conditioned manufacturing laboratory in the basement of the pharmacy building that is equipped for modern mass-production methods. The lab was completed last fall.

Francis C. Hamneress, pharmacy instructor in charge of the lab, explained that students studying pharmacy manufacturing gain experience in the compounding of medicines in large quantities.

Machine Makes Pills

Hand and electrically powered capsule and tablet-making machines are capable of producing 90 one-eighth to one-half inch units per minute. Tablets can therefore be produced by the thousands whereas they had previously been manufactured by dozens.

For medicines other than capsules and tablets, students also use wholesale methods, compounding syrups in 15-gallon measures and ointments in 30-pound lots.

Anti-Biotic Cabinet

An anti-biotic cabinet with a germicidal lamp allows the compounding of ampules under the most advanced sterilizing methods, and an autoclave or steam pressure sterilizer insures the purity of property dispensed.

For Humans

All products of the manufacturing laboratory which are prepared for human consumption are assayed by students or pharmacy staff members before they are issued.

In addition to the health service and apothecary shop, medicines are supplied for the athletic department and residence halls and maintenance department first-aid equipment.

The lab also manufactures materials for use in the dispensing laboratory, where pharmacy students receive their first practice compounding medicines.

Has Own Formulary

The laboratory staff maintains its own formulary, a list of medicinal substances and formulas for making medicinal preparations, which is contributed to by students and faculty members.

Other equipment in use in the lab includes a tablet coater, homogenizer, shaker, and three types of mixers. It is hoped, Hamneress said, that other equipment will be added to the laboratory in the future.

Holiday Repairs At Student Union

Several improvements and repairs were made in the Student Union during the Christmas vacation, according to Cyrille Van Duser, manager.

A new floor was placed on the auditorium stage and the footlights were all rebuilt. Repairs on the roof of the Student Union were also completed.

The permanent public address system was rebuilt and is now in first class condition.

The furniture in the Gold room is being re-upholstered and cleaned. Two new pool tables and one snooker table were obtained from the war surplus service, as a result of the efforts made by Herbert Wunderlich, dean of students.

The pool tables and snooker table will be re-covered and ready for use soon. A new ping pong table, which was donated to the Student Union by the Forestry club, was delivered yesterday. It will be used in the Interfraternity ping pong tournament.

Wildlife Men Confer Here

Dr. Daniel Leedy, head of the federal wildlife research program, and Dr. Joseph P. Linduska, assistant chief of the branch of the wildlife service, both of Washington, D. C., and Ken Thompson of the Montana fish and game department, met with President James A. McCain and other university officials Tuesday concerning the establishment of a wildlife research unit at MSU.

The unit, one of 16 in the nation, will be operated by the federal government, state government, and the University on a cooperative basis.

A director will be appointed soon by the fish and wildlife department subject to approval of the cooperating agencies. The staff of the unit will be made up of MSU faculty members from the division of biological sciences and the forestry school. Graduate students specializing in wildlife study will also participate.

Traffic Plan Considered By Wheels

A program for handling campus traffic problems was examined by Central board yesterday and returned to the traffic committee for further consideration. The plan included a list of traffic violations, fines for offenders, and a student court to hear appeals and complaints.

The proposed regulations would be binding on students, faculty, and university employees alike. Violators would receive written notice of the time and place of the offense and would be instructed to pay the fines indicated at the business office or appeal for a hearing before the student court.

ASMSU Would Gain

Fines not paid within three days would be liable to an additional penalty to be deducted from the student's university deposit. Funds collected in excess of the amount necessary to finance the traffic committee would be credited to ASMSU.

Included in the regulations was a requirement that all vehicles operated on campus by students, faculty, and employees must be registered with the registrar's office. A maximum campus speed limit of 20 miles an hour was proposed.

Many Offenses

Violations included speeding and reckless driving at $3 an offense and 11 parking offenses, each calling for a $1 fine.

A majority of board members felt that difficulties would be encountered in enforcing the regulations and penalties other than those involving parking so the proposals were referred back to the traffic committee. Central board expressed itself in favor of some type of campus traffic program.

Recommended was a plan including a paid campus patrolman, under the maintenance department, and some system of warning traffic violators.

Ford Clamps Down On Library Rules For J-Students

Due to the disappearance of a large number of books from the journalism school library and the mutilation of other library property, Dean James L. C. Ford has ordered that students using the library leave their coats, books, and notebooks outside the library.

"This action is necessary because a large number of books are either being mutilated beyond repair or are disappearing. The main purpose of this action is to protect the students who are the real victims when they can't get the books they need," he said.

"One book, 'Who's Who in the West,' disappeared after being in the library only two weeks. The book cost $15. Another had the first 30 pages removed," Dean Ford said.

The usual rule for many libraries is to have all books and coats checked, he said. The use of open stacks in the J-school library is a privilege which is not allowed undergraduates in the main library.

APO MEETS TONIGHT

Alpha Phi Omega, national scouting fraternity, will meet tonight at 7 o'clock, according to Bob Nicholson, Hamilton, president. Movies will be presented.

Board Spends 7 Grand; Five for Band Uniforms, Two for Athletic Board

By DON GRAFF

In two hours of discussion, pro, con, and mostly confused, Central board neatly disposed of approximately $7,000 of student money yesterday. The university band came in for a big $5,000 slice when the board authorized J. Justin Gray, band director, to complete a deal for 90 costumes.

Athletic board raked in the $2,000 residue. ASMSU President John Holding reported that final registration of a group of Montana athletes has been held up due to the inability of athletic board to meet grants-in-aid costs from its cash reserves. Central board was requested to extend a loan from the general reserve fund to cover the expenses of the winter quarter athletic-assistance program.

Plenty of Dough

University Auditor E. Kirk Badgley informed the board that the balance in the reserve fund was sufficient to cover the loan and any emergencies that might arise during the year.

According to Holding's report, the Montana Athletic association, a downtown Missoula organization, has pledged $3,000 to help defray athletic department expenses. The organization does not have the cash on hand at the present time, but will make the contribution concrete by June.

The proposal submitted to the board called for an immediate loan to athletic board to meet present expenses and repayment in June from the $3,000 Montana Athletic association donation.

The motion passed the board unanimously.

Beanies Again

Other matters considered by Central board, in addition to another tussle with the green beanie fiasco, included a recommendation by publications board that surplus '47, '48, and '49 Sentinels be turned over to the Public Service division.

The books are to be mailed to Montana high schools. The board approved the proposal. Enough 1949 books are to be retained to supply students who have not picked up their Sentinels.

Chest Endangered

The Campus Chest plan of a unified campus fund-raising campaign for charity organizations was again considered by Central board. Bob Moran, Red Lodge, reported that Red Cross and Infantile Paralysis foundation officials were prevented from participating in the Campus chest through the policy of their national organizations. A final decision on the unified drive was deferred until next week's board meeting.

Variety Show Tryouts Begin Thursday Eve

Auditions for the annual Miss Montana variety show will be given tomorrow night and Monday night in the Student Union auditorium, Gene Kallgren, chairman of the fund-raising variety show, announced. Those trying out should be at one or both auditions, he said.

The search for talent for the musical will include both men and women soloists, actors and actresses, mixed duets, ballroom dancers, tap dancers, men's quaring couples, and narrators.

Stairway to the Stars is the theme of this year's production, Kallgren reveals, and it will represent a day in the United States with music. The show will be given in the new Fox theater March 1 and 2 on Wednesday and Thursday.

Other members of the committee for the variety show are: Marge Sinnott, Bonner; Bob Alkire, Missoula; Joyce Carstensen, Helena; Betty Lou Berland, Conrad; Jack Lepley, Fort Benton; George Gogas, Missoula; Newt Baker, Victor; Earl Sandvig, Denver, Colo.; Gwen Dyer, Laurel, and Florence Dufresne, Milltown.

Chairman of the advertising for the Miss Montana program is Donna Ring, Missoula. Others on the committee are Jamie Brennan, Missoula, and Pat Woodahl, Great Falls, chairman of the variety show promotion, Dallas Reed, Missoula, chairman of radio advertising, Noel Furlong, Chester, and Al Widenhofer, Missoula.

The vacancy was created last fall when Joe Stell, Hamilton, resigned. The new associate will hold the job until the end of this quarter. The jobs pays $10 monthly.

Applicants must have served on the Kaimin staff or have had one year of practical newspaper experience and must have attended the University at least one quarter prior to this one.

STUDENT RATES FOR GAME

University students will be admitted to the House of David-Missoula All-Stars basketball game tonight for 60 cents and activity cards, Fred Cunningham, ticket manager, said yesterday. The game is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock.

Debaters Prepare for Four Tournaments This Quarter

Plans for winter quarter tournaments were discussed Wednesday night when the University Debate and Oratory association had its first meeting of the quarter.

Four debate tournaments are on the association's agenda so far, one of them to be held at MSU.

The Inland Empire debate tournament, sponsored by the University of Idaho, is scheduled for Jan. 13 and 14.

Feb. 10 and 11 will find the MSU women's team entertaining the women's teams from Washington State and Idaho university. These are the Northwest Triangle debates and will be held here at MSU.

The University of Denver will act as host at the Rocky Mountain speech tournament, Feb. 17 and 18.

The last of the verbal battles scheduled for winter quarter is the Northwestern speech tournament at Linfield college, McMinnville, Ore., on March 2, 3, and 4.

Besides attending the tournaments listed, MSU debaters will conduct numerous demonstration debates before high schools throughout the state.

Ralph Y. McGinnis, debate coach, says that debate activities are not limited to members of the association only. Practice debates are held every Wednesday night at 7:30 in Library 102, and all interested students are invited to attend, either to participate or just listen.

Besides the practice debates, the club has bull sessions every afternoon from 3 to 5 in TO105. Any interested students will also be welcomed to these informal meetings.

New Institutional Courses Added

A three quarter sequence of courses for students interested in institution management has recently been added, according to Miss Edith Ames, manager of residence halls. The three new courses will take the place of two five-credit courses offered previously.

Fall quarter institutional cookery, a four-credit course, will be given. This quarter a four-credit course in institutional buying is offered and spring quarter institutional management, a three-credit course, will be offered. Miss Ames is the instructor in these courses.

It's Just the Same Old Problem

The athletic difficulty of last week was little more than another manifestation of the problem which has confronted the University in regard to intercollegiate athletics—particularly football—for quite some time. It is not new. It has been discussed in this and other papers for a number of years.

It is a complex problem, but it seems to stem from two major difficulties:

1. Geography. Montana's out-of-the-way location makes it difficult to schedule contests with schools of comparable size and athletic strength. Transportation costs to many away-from-home games are almost prohibitive.

2. Big-time football. Montana is being robbed of talent—and consequently winning teams—by big-time, big-pay football from all sides. We cannot hope to take care of athletes as well as Big Ten, Southern conference, Southwest conference, and some of the west coast schools do. We can not hope to make money on our games like those schools do with their huge stadiums and phenomenal gate receipts. Consequently, we have to resort to donations, both from private individuals and businesses and such organizations as the Montana Athletic association, a group of persons who set up a non-profit club (with all the devices non-profit clubs have for raising money) in order to help finance Montana teams.

Jobs are another difficulty. The University administration is resolved not to "make work" for athletes. In other words, the University wants athletes to have useful and productive employment. Employers would rather hire men who can be on the job throughout the school year than men who will be absent from a job during one season or while on trips.

The University cannot ask non-athletes working in the dorms, Student Union, or other places on the campus to resign their jobs in favor of athletes. Most of the non-athletes who are working need the money or they would not be working. We cannot sacrifice academics for athletics.

The administration and the athletic department seem convinced, according to their plan printed in yesterday's Kaimin, that more jobs—and useful jobs—can be found on campus. Let's hope so.

At least Montana is not alone in its athletic troubles. A statement released by Idaho's Pres. J. E. Buchanan last week indicates that the athletic program at Idaho, which was "revitalized" in 1946, is in sad straits already—and apparently for the same reasons as Montana.

Idaho's revitalization program included organization of Vandal Boosters, Inc., (analogous to our Montana Athletic association), erection of a field house, institution of an athletic dormitory, and strengthening of the coaching staff. Buchanan didn't mention bringing in a few out-of-state gridders in outlining the "revitalization." Some of the Grizzlies who played ball against Idaho the past few years have detected Southern draws on more Vandals than Dixie Howell.

Anyway, Idaho is still almost as far down in the PCC as Montana. Washington State, too, is said to be having trouble other than the resignation of its coach. The Cougars seem to be about $80,000 in the red.

Buchanan suggests a sensible solution—but one which probably would meet with little favor in the larger schools. He calls for uniformity of eligibility and athletic recruiting requirements among all conferences of the nation. Such a program at least should help smaller institutions from having the top prep-school athletes proselytized by out-of-state schools with fancy offers of cash, cars, clothes, etc.—G.R.

Victor Gives In—at Last

Last week RCA Victor ended its bitter war with the Columbia Record company when it announced that it would start manufacturing long-playing (33 1/3 rpm) records about March 1. This is a move which classical music lovers have long waited for.

Despite Victor's boasting that they are making the LP's because their 45's (the doughnut-shaped, seven-inch records) are now so firmly entrenched and because of the demands of a "vociferous minority" (Victor's wording), the truth is that the change occurred because Victor was losing its classical shirt to Columbia and the smaller companies which have been using the Columbia development.

Victor's 45's have caught on well in the popular music division, but classical record buyers have steered clear of them because they still contain the annoying side breaks that Columbia has eliminated.

Victor undoubtedly hastened its decision to start LP manufacture when Sir Thomas Beecham, one of the greatest conductors of our time, switched from Victor to Columbia last month because he considered the LP record the greatest phonographic achievement since the advent of electrical recording. There have also been increasing rumors of late that other important Victor artists have been casting longing eyes at LP sales figures.

Since the record war began, Columbia has replaced Victor in sales leadership in the classical field, a position which Victor had held since the start of the century. Although Victor will undoubtedly begin catching up and eventually regain its former position, Columbia still has a big advantage. It already has a large classical LP catalogue, and it began making LP masters (the original records from which the plastic copies are pressed) in 1939. Victor will have to make LP's by dubbing from the old 78 r.p.m. masters in their catalogue (the world's largest), a more expensive and harder process. New Victor long-playing records, of course, will be made from LP masters.—Bob Tharalson.

Fire Danger Is High on Campus, Wunderlich Warns

Icy weather that has chilled this vicinity currently brings increasing fire hazards, the dean of students warned yesterday.

Dean H. J. Wunderlich said the stepping-up of heating necessitated by the colder temperatures places fire danger ratings high. He urged dormitory residents and village dwellers to take all precautions against the outbreak of fire.

Wunderlich and Tom Swearingen, maintenance engineer, made a check of fire conditions in student living quarters during the holiday break and found fire fighting equipment in generally "good" condition.

They checked fire extinguishers and fire doors in Jumbo hall, which, they said, is the chief worry on the campus as far as a fire

From the SIDELINES

A great tribute to a great football player and coach is given by one of football's great coaches, "Pop" Warner. Found on pages 162 to 167 of a little book sold at most book stores, it is called "My Greatest Day in Football." It gives one of the reasons why Montana's coach, Ted Shipkey, holds down an end berth on the All-Time All-Coast football team.

Washington's amazing basketball team showed the Eastern boys a little about the game during the holidays at Seattle. The Huskies split a pair with a mighty Minnesota, then went on to hand Columbia two spankings in a row. Other PCC teams received little but red faces in invasions of the East. The experts place Washington close to the bottom of the heap but we will string along with the Huskies in their attempt for a sixth championship in 32 years of conference play.

Big Ones Fall

Exit football, enter basketball, and the big ones fall. Utah over Oregon State, Colorado over Southern Methodist, Navy over Maryland, Missouri over Michigan State, Northwestern over Notre Dame, Canisius over California, and Mississippi State over Alabama.

The sports department of Ye Olde Illustrated Kaimin received another letter from an absent avid fan. This time from down Aberdeen, Wash., way. Jim Ryan, former reporter for the Columbus News, now attending Grays Harbor college at Aberdeen, addresses the following to the Kaimin:

"Being an ex-Montanian, I have noticed with due enthusiasm that the Grizzly basketball team has been averaging better than 80 points a game thus far this season. This is probably tops in the country, outside of the professional game.

"Jim Graham, one of the Griz-

'M' CLUB MEETS TONIGHT

The "M" club's first meeting of the quarter will be this evening at 7:30 at the Student Union.

Pres. Bob Anderson, Missoula, also announced that he desires as many members as possible to attend because of the plans that must be discussed for the coming "M" club boxing tournament.

zly regulars, led the Columbus, Montana, high school team of 1945 to 32 victories in 34 games and the state class B championship. Helena beat us both games—the final one for the state championship, 41-31. I was writing up all the Cougar victories for our county paper, The Columbus News, and so developed an absolute belief of Montana prep basketball superiority to the brand of ball played in Washington high schools.

"Now that several Montana high school stars of my time (from '43-'47) are on this year's Grizzly quint, I have transferred my interest to the Grizzlies and their basketball fortunes for this season. And don't think that I'm not keeping all these Washington loggers informed of their success! If my memory serves me correctly, the all-powerful WSC Cougars beat Eastern Washington by ten points and the Grizzlies took them by eight; and Idaho lost by a wide margin! The boys are listening a little more closely now!

Wants Kaimin

"As the papers out here are uncertain in their listing of MSU scores, I wonder if it would be possible for me to subscribe to the Kaimin during the basketball season."

(Sports editor's note—It is more than possible for you to subscribe, Jim. Your copy of the Kaimin is on its way. Being from a little town 60 miles north of Aberdeen myself, Clearwater, I can sympathize with your troubles in getting some of those Scandihoovian loggers to appreciate a good brand of basketball. You keep up your end and the Grizzly five will keep up theirs.)—W.S.

Guild Collects Classic Discs

As part of a drive to build an enlarged library of broadcast music, the Radio Guild this quarter is asking for phonograph records of classical music. Anything from Bach to Berlioz will be appreciated, Ansel Resler, Guild adviser, said yesterday.

The record drive, as well as a new campus variety radio show, will be planned tonight at 7:30 in Main Hall auditorium at the first Guild meeting of the quarter. All students are welcome.

Plans for future Guild dramatic and discussion broadcasts will be considered at the meeting; new standing committees will be appointed; and preparations will be started for the construction of a set of hand-operated radio sound effects. Frank Rutherford, Helena, president; Eleanor Beacom, Missoula, vice-president; and Vera Heitmeyer, Kalispell, secretary, will be introduced as new Guild officers for the year.

Phonograph records donated to the Guild may be left in Room TO108 any time between 9 and 10 and 11 and 12 o'clock in the mornings, and after 3 o'clock in the afternoons, Resler said. The Guild is seeking single records and parts of classical albums as well as complete classical works, he said.

Ski Class Still Open to Students

Section 16 of beginning skiing is still open for 10 more students, the physical education department announced.

Class meets on Wednesday afternoons at two.

The class travels to Diamond mountain Friday afternoons from two to five. A fee of $10 is charged to registrants to cover transportation and lift charges at the ski run.

Montana has the largest chrome reserve in the United States.

Pipes Unaffected By Zero Weather

The University should have little trouble with frozen water mains this winter if the present temperature conditions persist, according to Harry McCann, district manager of the Montana Power company.

Though Missoula has experienced sub-zero weather in the past two weeks, the underground pipes should not be affected. The ground is frozen to a depth of two feet, while the mains are six feet below the surface. The blanket of snow on the ground acts as insulation against the cold weather.

Five deep-well turbine type 100 horsepower pumps are employed to place underground water into distribution in case of emergency. This water maintains a yearly temperature of 50 degrees, McCann said. In colder weather the warmer water is used to keep the mains from freezing.

The subterranean water remains at a constant temperature because it cannot be changed by the temperature variations at the surface. More of it can be used this year, since two new pumps have been added to the company's facilities.

Keep UP with the news.

Ski Thrills Highlight Color Films

University and Missoula Ski club members will see several reels of colored movies of top skiers performing on some of the more famous American and European slopes at a special Ski club meeting at 7:30 tonight in the ROTC building.

Reels to be shown are those taken at the 1948 winter Olympics in Switzerland, the Khandahar, S. Anton meets last year, the S. Moritz men's and women's downhill and slalom meets, and a 10 minute reel of Toni Matt performing at Mt. Cranmore, Vt.

The films belong to Rhona Wurtele Gillis and Rhoda Wurtel Eaves, the famous Canadian ski twins and contestants in the 1948 Olympics. Mrs. Gillis, now an instructor at Whitefish, is a United States entry in the worlds championships which will be run of in Aspen, Colo., next month.

Montana's Christmas tree industry is valued at one and a quarter billion dollars.
