MISSOULA --

"Education for Parenthood," a one-week workshop for Montana teachers, public nurses and those interested in working with family life education, began Monday in the Women's Center on the University of Montana campus.

The workshop, which is sponsored by the Montana State Board of Health, the UM Department of Home Economics and the UM School of Education, is designed to prepare the above mentioned persons to conduct family life education in the public schools. Robert Solomon, Division of Health Education, Montana State Board of Health, is in charge of the workshop.

Emma Briscoe, chairman of the home economics department at UM, stated that the workshop was open to those with an interest in family life education and was not restricted to those now working directly in the field. Visitors at the workshop are welcome, according to Mrs. Briscoe.

Dr. Henry E. Cooper, Director of the Adolescent Clinic at the University of Colorado Medical Center was leading consultant for the workshop on Monday & Tuesday.

Dr. Robert Casey, obstetrician and gynecologist from Great Falls, is scheduled to lead workshop discussion sessions on Wednesday.

Dr. Deryck Calderwood, instructor in Family Life at Oregon State University, will head the workshop on Thursday.

An audio-visual materials preview is scheduled for Wednesday at 7 p.m. Registrants and visitors are invited to the preview, according to Mrs. Briscoe.
