A Clean Slate for Debate

The debt has been carried on the books for several years since it was originally incurred in 1949 when the debaters received their first invitation to attend the national debate tourney in West Point.

The following rules should be observed as closely as possible during the entire debate.

1. Inform the project office at least one day in advance of your departure. The office will send a man to shut off the water at the street shut-off and instruct you in draining the entire system.

2. If it is impossible to completely drain the water system it will be necessary for you to hire someone to do the job. A service man will restore the water service. Don’t start a fire in your kitchen stove until water has been turned on. A fire in the space heater may be started while you are waiting for the water pressure to return.

3. When you return, please notify the project office and a service man will restore the water service while you are away.

Debate’s 2.4 per cent of the budget is the limit for this year, regardless of whether the team receives an invite to West Point.

A Clean Slate for Debate

It is in the cards that Central debate’s $445 debt this week.

The funds to clean up debate’s balance sheet and start them off with a clean slate will come from the general reserve fund (approximately $50,000 in liquid assets) and not from the 1951-52 operating budget.

The attitude of most Central board members toward debate’s request has softened as follows what appears to be an honest attempt by debate to clean up their own back yard.

The debate group, represented by Tom Payne, the chief of the Debate and Oratory association, said they had taken definite steps to see that careless handling of the debate budget would not be repeated this year.

As a first step, the group has chosen a student member as treasurer to administer the budget. The board composed of the debate president, two debate captains, and the coach, will ride herd on all expenditures.

Debate’s 2.4 per cent of the budget is the limit for this year, regardless of whether the team receives an invite to West Point.

Evidences of an Indian Culture Discovered Near Cabinet Gorge

Evidences of an Indian culture over 400 years old have been found at Cabinet Gorge by Anst. Prof. Carling I. Malouf, anthropology department, and Don Davis, Caray, Idaho, and Neil Clement, Sheboygan, Wis.

Cabinet Gorge, on the Clark Fork river near the Montana-Idaho border, will be covered with water by next fall, after the completion of the Old Science building. The survey was made to locate funds for the general reserve fund.

The stone tools indicated an eastern influence. The surveyors were found by the University museum, Professor Malouf said.

The culture was probably an extension of the Indian culture which was centered on the Columbia river near Grand Coulee. However, the stone tools indicate an eastern influence, according to Professor Malouf.

Will Try to Finish

The work will be continued as the weather permits and every effort will be made to finish before the area is flooded, Professor Malouf said.

Other items of much more recent origin but of historical interest were found. A gold pen, square nails and spikes (hand made), and horse shoes dating from the 1890s and 1900s were made for the party. These items were turned over to the university museum, Professor Malouf said.

Grizzly Gab

LEW KEIM

On the gridiron this season the Grizzlies amass an impressive file of bowling. They looked at good in every assignment, even in Boise's 상태, Idaho and Montana State, but a general low was scored. The coaches, however, were pleased with their present form. They built up to be early in September. What happened? Well, the coaches are still waiting for their game to return.

In retrospect it was just another Montana football season. Bob Byrne is still there, and for all his natural ability, it took the help of his teammates, in part, to rack up his net yardage by rushing of 653 yards. He is good enough to make a team in the country and his teammates and coaches say the same.

Next fall's gridiron Grizzlies can see the past season as a memory for the incentive to win in Skyline competition. Coach Ted Shipkey and his staff worked with the squad and the players worked for success. Their efforts did not produce the desired results. The competition was tough, the schedule was only average, and the results were many. Tommi Fords' greatness of 1950 showed even more this year in the Grizzlies with new players.

While football still holds the spotlight in college sports, Grizzly basketball Coach "Jiggs" Ziegler, Harpole, and Harmson.

Yurko, Harpole, and Harmson.

Mock Trials
See Larceny Convictions

Two "privates" were convicted of larceny yesterday in two of the three mock court martial trials staged by ROTC students. The court martial board of the third trial will vote on their verdict today. No sentences were passed.

"Private" John Heeckman, Arling­ton, Va., and A. R. LeClaire, Great Falls, were convicted of the lesser larceny charge of "wrongful appropriation." The verdict of the trial of "Private" R. B. Griffes, Berwyn, Ill., will be given today.

In the Heeckman case, John Lahr, Missoula, was trial counsel, and was assisted by John Rothwell, Missoula. Defense counsel for Heeckman was John Fleming, Bel­ ena. Tom E. Anderson, Havre, was his assistant.

William E. Dillon, Billings, was the trial counsel in the LeClaire case, and had Frank T. Garman, Missoula, assisting him. Robert J. Gryan, Cleveland, Ohio, was de­ fense counsel for LeClaire, and Dean Wilcox, Missoula, assisted.
