RELATIONSHIP TO PROGRAM(S): This class provides theory of operations and skill development with a process that is primary in the fabrication of iron and steel. This experience complements the other welding processes and drawing processes taught in the program to attain a solid, broad based understanding of fabrications as a welder/fitter/machine operator.

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This is a semester course that is set up as two half-semester classes. The first section class is given as a survey of different practices. This will introduce the student to various machines used for shaping, cutting, work-holding, and jig-making. Students will be required to take a project from a blueprint and fabricate it according to specifications. The second section will be able to formulate the sequence of making a project from a blueprint to a finished product.

STUDENT PERFORMANCE OUTCOMES:

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- Demonstrate by written exam, the theory and safe operation of equipment.
- Demonstrate by practical exam making a project from a blueprint to a finished product.
