MISSOULA---

Terry Melton, director of the Yellowstone Art Center in Billings who has accepted directorship of the C. M. Russell Gallery in Great Falls will judge entries in the Student Art Exhibition Sunday afternoon (Nov. 19) at the University of Montana.

Judging will be on the third floor of the Fine Arts Buildings on the Missoula campus. Melton will award cash prizes to a number of UM students submitting entries.

Prize-winning art objects will remain on display from Nov. 20-29 at the University. On Nov. 30 the objects judged best in the exhibit will comprise a traveling art show to be shown at any college or university in the state on request.

Entries by UM students will include oils, water colors, ceramics, drawings and sculptural items.

Steve McGuinness of Providence, R.I., a UM graduate art student, is publicity chairman for the student exhibit.
