NEW HIGH RISE DORM FILLED ON UM CAMPUS

MISSOULA---

Aber Hall, the new eleven story dormitory at the University of Montana which was completed last month, is full of male students.

According to James Brown, director of residence halls for the University, about 350 men have been moved from other dormitories into the new building.

Brown said there are still men living in the older men's residence halls, although some space in them will be turned into offices to be used the rest of the year.

Aber is the second high-rise dormitory on the UM campus. It was named after William "Daddy" Aber, a late University professor.
