Introduction: This course is the third in a series of generalist practice courses. It introduces students to work with groups, organizations and communities, and it explores the relationships among individual and societal change. Group work and community practice have been essential components of social work throughout its history. They were key parts of early social work efforts to both change oppressive social conditions and promote democratic participation. Groups have been used to strengthen individual skills and capacities, enhance organizational functioning, improve quality of community life, and to advocate for more just social policies, institutions, and practices. Most social work practice occurs in organizational settings, requires collaboration with others, and is shaped by community context. Further, the problems confronting individuals and groups cannot be effectively understood or addressed outside of the larger contexts in which they occur. Personal struggles are intimately tied to social issues of poverty, inequality, violence, and discrimination. Group processes of critical reflection, power analysis, and participatory planning, action and evaluation provide an important bridge between personal struggles and public issues. Effective social work practice calls for effective group participation, leadership skills, and engagement in social change efforts. It is through ongoing learning and teaching of the skills of group work and community practice that we craft spaces for collaborative action and create opportunities for people to participate in the decision-making that affects their lives.

Course Description: In this course we will explore the dynamic relationship between personal and social change and examine the opportunities for change through group and community practice. Course materials and assignments will focus on principles and processes of group work, leadership, and skills and strategies for community assessment, participation, and change. Class members will put knowledge and skills into practice and experience the potential of both individual and social change through the use of mutual aid and community action groups. Students will have hands-on opportunities to develop skills in group leadership and facilitation. Lessons for practice will be drawn from case studies set in diverse historical, political and cultural contexts that document group and community efforts to change oppressive social conditions and promote social justice. Students will be learning from and teaching one another as they develop and participate in groups that promote individual and community change. Regular attendance and active participation in both in-class and out-of-class projects are expected.

Course Objectives: Upon successful completion of the course participants will be able to:

1. Discuss the relationship of group and community practice to an empowerment approach to generalist social work.

2. Describe elements of the mutual aid group process.
3. Define leadership and the skills identified as contributors to effective leadership development.

4. Demonstrate knowledge of group process, group decision-making, and the impact of power and authority on individual and group dynamics.

5. Identify and practice skills of mutual-aid group work including: group formation, assessment and planning, group development and intervention, and evaluation and termination.

6. Identify and practice skills needed to initiate and facilitate community action groups engaged in assessment and planning, implementation, and evaluation of community-based projects.

7. Demonstrate knowledge of six strategies of community change: mass mobilization, social action, citizen participation, public advocacy, popular education, and local services development.

8. Describe how historical, cultural, political and economic factors impact the community context, public attitudes, available resources and the decision-making processes of community-based groups.

9. Discuss the relationship of factors such as race, ethnicity, gender, social class, sexual orientation, and age to the development and facilitation of small groups and to the implementation of community change efforts.

10. Describe and practice a collaborative process of needs assessment and data gathering through which those affected by the identified problem have a meaningful voice in understanding and changing the situation.

11. Develop guidelines for organizing with diverse populations.

12. Make connections between local and global issues by identifying lessons learned from community change in an international context and considering their potential for local problem solving.

13. Discuss how the values and ethics of the social work profession (i.e. respect for human diversity, social justice, self-determination, and equality) influence the development and implementation of intervention strategies with groups and communities.

Course Texts:

Course Pack of selected readings on groups, organizations and communities.
Assignments:

The assignments in this course are geared to promote students’ knowledge of and engagement in processes of personal, organizational and community change and development. The combination of in-class exercises and outside learning focuses on both individual learning and teamwork. All written assignments are to be typed. All references are to be appropriately cited according to APA guidelines.

1. Group Work Article Critique. Due Feb. 13 (25 points)

Read and critique one article, published in a professional social work journal, that addresses the use of groups for social work intervention with individuals, families or communities. Consider the following questions in your assessment: What type of group is described? What processes and outcomes are addressed? How is effectiveness assessed? Does the article provide evidence of contributions to individual, interpersonal, organizational or community capacity building and empowerment? What lessons regarding group work could you draw from this article? Essay should be no more than 3 pages.

2. Mutual Aid Group Facilitation Report. (30 points. Due the Wednesday following the group meeting in which you serve as facilitator)

Beginning the second week of the semester, students will participate as members and facilitators in mutual aid groups. The focus of the groups is personal and professional development. They will provide an opportunity for integrating “knowing, feeling and doing” through discussion and reflection. The groups will meet for 45 minutes, once a week, for six weeks, during the second hour of class on Wednesdays. Each class member will have the opportunity to plan and facilitate one group session. When serving as facilitator, the student prepares 1) a plan for the session, 2) a summary assessment of the session, 3) a summary of the “Assessing Your Group” feedback sheets from group members, and 4) an assessment of personal strengths and areas for growth as a facilitator. The report should be no longer than 3 typed pages.

3. Leadership Essay: Due March 11 (25 points)

Write an essay that addresses the topic of leadership. The essay will respond to the following questions: 1) What are characteristics of an effective leader? 2) What are some ways to develop leadership skills? 3) How would you assess your own leadership skills and strengths? 3) How can you build on these strengths? The essay should draw on personal reflections and course readings. Maximum length is 4 pages.

4. Public Meeting Analysis: Due April 1 (30 points)

Attend one public meeting (e.g. City Council meeting, neighborhood council meeting, School Board meeting, a public hearing, etc) and write an analysis of the process and outcome. Consider the following in your observation and analysis: How is the meeting structured (e.g. formal and informal rules, physical arrangements, etc)? What forms and skills of leadership can you identify? Who participates and how? How are decisions made? How does power play out? Maximum length 3 pages.

5. Challenges and Possibilities for Community Change Essay. Due April 22 (40 points)
Drawing from course pack readings, write an essay addressing the strategies, challenges and possibilities of community change. Your essay is to include a comparative analysis of at least two of the articles that focus on case studies of community change or specific issues of activism (FP, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17). Be specific in your discussion. What are some common themes and important differences? What strategies of community change are in use? How do questions of meaning, power, and history play out? How is “difference” addressed? How does the context shape and constrain the possibilities for social justice-oriented action? How is leadership practiced? Draw from Checkoway (FP 9) and Homan in developing a structure for your essay. What lessons for community practice can you learn from your analysis? Maximum length 5 pages.

6. Action Group Portfolio, Case Study, and Presentation. Presentations will be scheduled during last week of semester and final exam session. Case Study and Portfolio due May 8. (Portfolio 30 points; case study and presentation 70 points).

Beginning the 7th week of the semester, students will form small groups (4-5 members) for community action. Students will initially engage in brainstorming to select an area of concern. The groups will then assess needs and possibilities, develop an action plan, and carry out a modest project in response to the identified concern. Given the limited time available, the project needs to be realistic and achievable. One hour of class time each week will be used for action group meetings. However, students should expect to conduct group activities and project implementation outside of class.

Social Action Portfolio

Group members will build a portfolio documenting the group’s activities. The portfolio should include:

- Minutes of group meetings
- Log of group members’ activities and contacts
- Action plan, timeline, and member responsibilities
- Summary of outside meetings and interviews (where applicable)
- Overview of group decision-making processes
- Press release announcing the group’s class presentation.

Social Action Case Study and Presentation

- Each group prepares a summary case study of their project. The case study should include an introduction and overview; statement of the initial concern and assessment of need and possibilities; summary of the action plan and its implementation; discussion of the group process (decision-making, leadership, etc); discussion and evaluation of the outcome(s); critical reflection on group effectiveness and pitfalls (Homan, pp. 299-300); successes, challenges and surprises; and lessons for group and community practice learned. The paper should be no longer than 8 pages, and it should include relevant citations from course materials. Each action group will give a 20-30 minute in-class presentation on their project. Each group member will receive the same grade for this project.
Quizzes:

There will be two short answer essay quizzes during the course of the semester. Quiz 1: February 24; Quiz 2: April 11. They will be one hour in length and worth 25 points each. They will focus on integration of course readings and discussion and the application of course concepts. There will be no final exam. The finals week meeting will be used for presentation of action group projects.
