Course Description:

This course is the first in a series of three practice courses designed to prepare students for direct social work practice. The course provides an introduction to social work as a profession, including an examination of goals, guiding philosophy and basic assumptions. Emphasis is on the generalist framework of social work practice and on the development of beginning analytical and practice skills.

Course Objectives:

1. Describe social work as a profession, its purpose and goals, and how it differs from other helping professions
2. Demonstrate an understanding of a generalist approach to social work practice
3. Articulate the core values of the profession and discuss the challenges and possibilities for realizing the goals of social justice in social work practice
4. Describe a range of social work perspectives (e.g. strengths, empowerment, ecosystems, feminist, structural) and discuss their differences, commonalities and contributions
5. Describe key principles in the NASW Social Work Code of Ethics, identify ethical dilemmas, and reflect on personal ethical self knowledge and stance
6. Articulate connections between contemporary social work practice and the historical development of the profession
7. Explain concepts of economic and social justice and their relationship to social work practice
8. Discuss examples of the contributions to contemporary understandings of diversity, empowerment, and social justice made by social work's progressive foremothers and fathers
9. Critically reflect on personal experiences, values and beliefs as they relate to the knowledge, values and skills base of social work practice
10. Discuss the influence of race, ethnicity, gender, social class, sexual identity, age, citizenship and other constructions of difference on social work practice with individuals families, groups and communities
11. Discuss key aspects of the organizational context of social work practice and describe strategies for effective practice within the organizational context
12. Describe how structural arrangements of inequality and practices of oppression and discrimination shape the context of social work practice
13. Describe elements of a helping relationship and demonstrate competence in the use of basic helping skills

14. Describe phases of a change process and the key understandings, skills roles, and activities associated with each
15. Explain purpose and use of the genogram, ecomap, social network map and other social work assessment tools and critically assess their strengths and limitations
