GRIZZLIES TO CULMINATE SPRING GRID DRILLS WITH ANNUAL INTRASQUAD GAME SATURDAY

MISSOULA---

Jack Swarthout and his University of Montana grid staff will have their last live look at the 1968 Grizzly football prospects until fall practice in August when the Silvertip hopefuls meet in the annual spring intrasquad game at 3 p.m. Saturday on Dornblaser Field.

Some 70 prospects will be divided into equally balanced squads for the scrimmage, which is expected to draw a large number of curious spectators from Missoula and surrounding communities.

The scrimmage is part of a three-pronged sports day at the University, which includes the Montana-Montana State and Missoula Sentinel-Missoula Hellgate trackmeets at 11 a.m. and the Montana-Weber State baseball doubleheader at 1 p.m.

Most of the injuries to football players have healed, but one notable performer who will miss Saturday's action is transfer quarterback Ray Brum, sidelined for the last two weeks with rib injuries.

Coach Swarthout and his staff expect a lively, hard-hitting, fast-moving scrimmage which will be played as a regulation game.

At least five key football recruits and some basketball prospects from Montana and Washington will be in Missoula to watch the sports activities. Basketball players include Kendall Hartman of Billings West High School, Tracy Dallby of Seattle, Wash., George DeMos of Peninsula College in Port Angeles, Wash., Kirk Johnson of Helena Senior High School and Steve Dethman of Wolf Point High School. Johnson and Dethman have already decided to attend the University this fall.

Admission will be charged Saturday, but the one dollar for adults and 50 cents for high and grade school students will cover both the trackmeets and the scrimmage, according to Gary Hughes, UM ticket manager. UM students will be admitted free with their student cards.
