Syllabus for European Cultural and Intellectual History from 1900 to World War II (HSTR 325))

Objectives of the Course

Cultural and intellectual history was described by Jacob Burckhardt, one of its greatest practitioners, as a method of unique effectiveness in measuring the creativity and real worth of an epoch. To him the great question of history was why some ages more than others possessed the capacity to produce original thought and art of enduring importance. The course takes its conceptual bearings from Burckhardt’s insight.

We have two fundamental objectives in our course: to examine, first, the impact of World War I and, second, the Depression on the crisis of Western values that originated in the Industrial Revolution of the eighteenth century. To accomplish these objectives we will study the major esthetic, ideological, and intellectual movements of European cultural and intellectual life from 1900 to World War II. In the course examinations and term paper, students are expected to demonstrate powers of historical analysis at the upper-division level of university work.

Required Reading

John Maynard Keynes, The Economic Consequences of the Peace (Harcourt, Brace & Howe)
Virginia Woolf, A Room of One’s Own (Harcourt)
André Malraux, Man’s Fate (Knopf)
Giovanni Gentile, Origins and Doctrine of Fascism (Transaction)
Bertolt Brecht, Three Penny Opera (A&C Black)
Bertrand Russell, The Scientific Outlook (Routledge Classics)
Jean-Paul Sartre, Nausea (New Directions Paperback)
Ignazio Silone, Bread and Wine (Signet Classics)
Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Ethics (S&S)

Mandatory Public Lecture

Students will be required to attend one event in the President’s Lecture Series. On Friday, 18 September, Matt Haimovitz will give a lecture/concert in the Music Recital Hall at 8:00 P.M.: “The Changing Face of Classical Music.” An internationally acclaimed cellist, Mr. Haimovitz teaches at McGill University’s Schulich School of Music. For students unable to attend the presentation, a film of it will be made available on the Reserve Shelf of the Library.
Quizzes, Examinations, and the Term Paper

I will give three unannounced quizzes during the semester. Students will write a midterm examination and a final examination. Both examinations will have mainly an essay format, with some short-answer questions. A ten-page term paper, the content of which will be determined by each student in consultation with me, will be due in class on Friday, 6 November. Graduate students who are taking the course for graduate credit must write a twenty-page paper in place of the ten-page undergraduate paper. The term paper assignment gives students the opportunity to learn more about the subject matter of the course and to improve their writing and researching skills. As we progress in the course, students should identify the individuals, books, works of art and music, and theories that most interest them. Once these lists have been narrowed down to three or four topics, students should see me about making their final choices. At that time we can discuss bibliographical matters and other research strategies.

Grading Policy

The scores on the three quizzes will count for 10 percent of the grade. The midterm examination will count for 20 percent, the term paper for 30 percent, and the final examination for 40 percent. I grade students in accordance with their mastery of the course readings and lectures. Late term papers are discounted at the rate of one-third of a grade per day. I consider plagiarism in any form to be the sin against the Holy Ghost.
