CENTURY CLUB MEMBERSHIP ROUNDUP SLATED IN MISSOULA THURSDAY

MISSOULA---

Members of the University of Montana Century Club board of directors and other interested club members will join the University's athletic coaching staff in the annual Membership Roundup Thursday.

A contingent of from 35 to 40 supporters will canvass Missoula businessmen, hoping to surpass the membership of just more than 600 attained last year.

Keith Wright, in charge of the drive, said the day's activity will be kicked off by a breakfast for the drive's participants in the Florence Hotel.

"We'll be sort of rounding up the strays along with getting new members," Wright said.

Wright said the Club is shooting for a total membership of about 750 for the coming year. As of last week, the group had more than 400 memberships in, with nearly 150 of last year's members still unpaid for the coming year.

"If people want an outstanding athletic program at the University of Montana," Wright said Wednesday, "they've got to pitch in and help by joining the Century Club."

Persons interested in joining the organization, which supports scholarship and recruiting funds for the UM athletic program, can contact any club member or Gary Hughes, UM ticket manager, at the Adams Field House ticket office.
