PSYX 534.01: Applied Clinical Methods

Bryan N. Cochran

University of Montana - Missoula, bryan.cochran@umontana.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/syllabi

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation
https://scholarworks.umt.edu/syllabi/3995

This Syllabus is brought to you for free and open access by the Course Syllabi at ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in Syllabi by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
PSYX 534 – Applied Clinical Methods

Spring 2016

Course Information
Tuesday 12:10 – 2:00pm; one additional hour to be arranged
CPC 119

Instructor Information
Instructor: Bryan N. Cochran, Ph.D.
Email: bryan.cochran@umontana.edu
Office Phone: 406.243.2391
Emergency Phone: 406.381.2374 (mobile)
Backup Supervision Phone: 406.241.1126
Office and Hours: SB 145; M 9:30 – 11, Th 3:00 – 4:30

“Mostly what we learned in graduate school is what to do, not how to be. We learned behaviors, techniques, plans, strategies, procedures, programs, interventions, and actions. We collected alternatives that could be employed in various situations. We learned what to do when were confronted with a particular case or dilemma. We learned where to go if we were stuck. Raise your hand if you were prepared to be loving and caring. Au contraire, the culture of training is conducive to competition not cooperation, to achievement not serenity, to developing knowledge and power, not compassion. Maybe it is not so much what we do with clients as who we are when we are with them that matters most.” [Jeffrey Kottler, The Therapist in the Real World: What you Never Learn in Graduate School (But Really Need to Know), 2015, p.74-75]

Course Description
This clinical practicum is focused on the skills of assessing and treating adults with psychological difficulties. It involves a combination of group and individual supervision with a focus on improving your skills as a therapist-in-training. For first-year students, this practicum is an introduction to clinical practice and to the policies and the procedures of the Clinical Psychology Center (CPC).

Objectives
Your objectives in this practicum are dependent upon where you are in your own training as a therapist. Some of these objectives may include experiencing your initial firsthand experience as a therapist, accumulating the skills necessary to provide effective treatment, expanding your repertoire so that your skills as a therapist become more automatic, or any combination of these goals. In your initial meetings with me, and throughout the semester, we will meet to discuss your training needs. We will set several clear, definable goals for your training for the semester and will review these periodically during the practicum.

In addition to your individual goals, you can expect to improve your skills in making an accurate clinical diagnosis, formulating a case conceptualization, designing a treatment plan, modifying this plan to meet the changing needs of your clients, and documenting your work with your clients.

During the year, you will also be exposed to different models and methods of supervision, and you are expected to attain a beginning-level competency in understanding the supervision process. This will be evaluated through brief quizzes in the CPC staff meetings.

Grading/Evaluation
The grading system for this course is credit/no credit. I will encourage you to evaluate your own work in our individual meetings, and I will provide you with feedback in an effort to improve your clinical skills. In order to receive credit for the course, you must follow all of the policies and procedures outlined in the CPC handbook. At the end of the semester, you will receive a detailed evaluation of your progress, which we will discuss in individual supervision.

Attendance
You are expected to attend all group and individual supervision sessions, as well as in-service trainings and CPC staff meetings. Exceptions should be arranged with me in advance, if at all possible.

Requirements
For this practicum, you are expected to carry a clinical caseload of 3-4 clients at a time. All new client assignments will be discussed in your meetings with me before an assignment is made.

For first-year clinical students, you are expected to attend all group practicum meetings, to participate in clinical case discussions, and to uphold CPC policies regarding confidentiality through all of your activities in this practicum.

You are expected to attend all CPC staff meetings, which occur on a monthly basis. During these meetings, you will receive additional information about topics relevant to the CPC, including the supervision process (see Practicum Syllabus Addendum). Meetings that cover this topic will include pre- and posttests to assess your knowledge of supervision.

Additionally, you are expected to learn and follow all clinic guidelines and procedures. This includes your responsibilities regarding the consent process, intake/termination, fee setting and collection, etc. Maintenance of appropriate records (and timely completion of documentation) is required. I will review all of your client intake, progress, and termination notes, as well as any assessment reports, and will co-sign all notes that go into your clients’ records.

Course Materials
You may anticipate that in this practicum, we will select readings (clinical case examples, theoretical chapters, and possibly empirical articles) relevant to the experience of being a therapist-in-training. I have deliberately chosen to not establish a “reading list” before the semester starts. Rather, I would like to tailor these readings to the needs of the group as they emerge. All reading materials will be made available through the library’s electronic reserve system or will be distributed as photocopies in class.

It is likely that you will choose relevant readings on your own during the practicum. In order to document your reading choices (as well as the readings that we select as a group), I am asking that you maintain a bibliography of materials that you read throughout the year. This bibliography will be due at the end of the spring semester. In keeping with the spirit of the course, it will not be graded, but it will be a helpful list for you as you prepare for comprehensive examinations, internship applications, or other training experiences.

An optional “assignment” for this practicum, and one from which I believe you might benefit immensely, is a journal of your experiences as a therapist. This is, of course, separate from your psychotherapy notes and would focus on your personal growth and your reactions to training experiences.

Course Guidelines

Disability Modifications
The University of Montana assures equal access to instruction through collaboration between students with disabilities, instructors, and Disability Services for Students. If you think you may have a disability adversely affecting your academic performance, and you have not already registered with Disability Services, please contact Disability Services in Lommasson Center 154 or call 406.243.2243. I will work with you and Disability Services to provide an appropriate modification.

Academic Misconduct
You are expected to adhere to the University of Montana Student Conduct Code with regard to academic integrity. Academic misconduct in this course will result in an academic penalty commensurate with the offense as well as possible disciplinary action by the university.

Incompletes
Departmental and university policies regarding incompletes do not allow changing “incomplete” grades after one year has passed since the “I” was granted.