1-16-1969

Army major says enemy capabilities not beneficial

University of Montana–Missoula. Office of University Relations

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umt.edu/newsreleases
Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Recommended Citation
https://scholarworks.umt.edu/newsreleases/4301

This News Article is brought to you for free and open access by the University Relations at ScholarWorks at University of Montana. It has been accepted for inclusion in University of Montana News Releases, 1928, 1956-present by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at University of Montana. For more information, please contact scholarworks@mso.umt.edu.
ARMY MAJOR SAYS
ENEMY CAPABILITIES
NOT BENEFICIAL

MISSOULA---

Army Maj. Thomas C. O'Hara, a representative for the 6th Army Presidio in San Francisco, told an audience at the LDS Institute, 515 McLeod St., Wednesday that military capabilities of the Viet Cong "haven't been of any great benefit" to them in their quest for victory.

Speaking at the invitation of the University of Montana Army ROTC Department, Maj. O'Hara told Institute visitors that the North Vietnamese "are capable of launching wide-scale attacks throughout the country...but the Viet Cong have never won a major victory in Vietnam yet."

Maj. O'Hara also said that communications between enemy troops are good and that movement of supplies from North Vietnam to the south also is effective.

"But these enemy capabilities haven't been of any great benefit to accomplishment of his goals," the major added.

Maj. O'Hara said that, at times, news media tend to exaggerate the amount of damage done by the Viet Cong during enemy attacks.

"In some cases," the major added, "this has caused some unnecessary worry and alarm to U.S. citizens, especially the wives and families of servicemen."