Course Objectives:

This course is intended to provide a broad overview of the field of physical anthropology. The course is divided into four sections. The first section (Weeks 1-4) provides an introduction to evolutionary theory, genetics, and the scientific method. The second section (Weeks 5-8) introduces primatology, taxonomy, and primate evolution. The third section (Weeks 9-13) discusses the human lineage, human evolution, and the continuing evolution of modern humans. In the final section (Weeks 14 and 15) students will learn about three specialized fields within physical anthropology, osteology, forensic anthropology and bioarchaeology.

Some Advice:

This course requires considerable effort and study on the part of the student. The key to success is to come to class prepared, and to be on time. Poor attendance will result in a low grade for the course. If you need to contact me, please drop by my office during scheduled office hours or make an appointment. Please use email for brief communications only.

Required Textbook:

Robert Boyd and Joan Silk. (2014). How Humans Evolved. 7th Edition.

Moodle and e-mail.

Course materials will be posted on Moodle (<http://umonline.umt.edu>). Students are responsible for checking the course Moodle page regularly. Class communications will be sent via email and all students are required to have a valid UM email account. It is your responsibility to check your email regularly, and missed assignment/deadlines cannot be attributed to a missed email.

Classroom Rules:

Please turn off all cell phones (including text messaging) before class begins. If you are on your cell phone in class you may be asked to leave the classroom for the remainder of the class period.

Attendance:

Students are expected to attend every class and complete all assigned readings before the designated class period. Attendance is mandatory and is part of your grade. There will be ten pop quizzes over the course of the semester, worth ten points each. The pop quizzes will count towards your attendance in class. Each quiz will consist of three questions. You will get four points simply for being in class, plus two additional point for each question you answer correctly (up to 10 points total). Attendance is worth 100 points. Quizzes may take place at any point during the class period. If you are late for class or leave early and miss a quiz, you will be marked absent for that day. If you give me advanced notice that you will be away for an approved absence (i.e. conference, job interview, etc.) you will be allowed to take the quiz at a different time. Please keep in mind that I do not consider skiing trips, vacations, or weddings valid excuses for missing class.

Course Requirements:

In addition to the in-class quizzes, there will be four exams over the course of the semester. Exam dates are tentative and may change throughout the semester. Changes in exam dates will be announced in advance. Each exam is worth 100 points. The final exam is not cumulative. If you are going to miss any of the exams you must let me know ahead of time in order to schedule a makeup exam time. If you miss an exam without an approved absence, you will not be allowed to take the exam at a later date. Exams will be based on readings, lectures, and films shown in class.

Grading:

The total number of points possible for the course is 500. Grades are assigned on a straight scale (no curve), and using the plus/minus system.
