Course Description and Goals:

This course is designed, in part, as an intensive introduction to the history of the 20th century American West, from turn-of-the-century fears about the closing of the frontier through the present. By necessity, this will not be an exhaustive survey of the history of the American West. Instead, we will use illustrative examples to highlight key moments in the history of the region, including the rise of federal bureaucracy and western responses, the Progressive era, the Dust Bowl, the New Deal, federal Indian policy, World War II, urbanization in the West, social movements of the 1960s, and the rise of modern conservatism. Some of the key thematic questions we will examine include:

- To what extent is the American West unique?
- How does reality in the West match up with the mythology presented through popular culture?
- How has the American West evolved economically from a colonial economy to become the fastest growing region in the United States?
- How has the rise of federal power impacted local autonomy?
- What role has the environment played in the history of the American West?
- How have diverse populations in the West influenced the development and history of the region?

A Note on Plagiarism:

Plagiarism is defined in the UM Student Conduct Code as representing another person's words, ideas, data, or materials as one's own, a situation that will not be tolerated in this course. Throughout this class, you will be given ample instruction how to conduct historical research, how to paraphrase and quote illustrative material, and how to provide proper citations for all material not your own. Therefore, there is a zero tolerance policy in regards to plagiarism, and any documented cases of plagiarism will result in a failing grade for the class.
