Office Hours: most available M-F 1-3:00 (not most W 2:00)

Preliminary course description & assignment #1

Virginia Woolf (1882-1941) is the twentieth century's major woman of letters. Eudora Welty (91 years old on April 13, 2000) is arguably the United States' greatest short story writer. Welty admired Woolf. We will read both of them, examining their affinities and continuities, their explorations of private lives beneath the social fabric, their daring and their (dis)connections with their cultures.

Texts:

Virginia Woolf: A Room of One's Own
To the Lighthouse
Mrs. Dalloway
Between the Acts
Diaries
The Common Reader: Series I

Eudora Welty: The Complete Stories

WOOLF SYLLABUS

Objectives: A senior seminar should provide undergraduates an opportunity to demonstrate the critical skills they have acquired during their college career. Seniors will read biographical and critical materials on reserve and found through research, give presentations, write 2 papers. Graduate students give presentations, read an extra text by each author, as well as biographical and critical material, and incorporate that work into the 2 papers. Final projects [details provided separately] due during final week and will be reported on during the final class meeting, Monday, December 18 at 10:00-12:00..

Woolf Texts: Mrs. Dalloway, To the Lighthouse, A Room of One's Own, A Writer's Diary, The Common Reader: Series I, Between the Acts.

Additional Texts: Hacker, A Pocket Style Manual (contains MLA Style Handbook)
Murfin & Ray, The Bedford Glossary of Critical and Literary Terms

Papers: One paper on Virginia Woolf, one on Welty stories, a final paper on Welty & Woolf incorporating research. Presentations: at least one on Woolf, one on Welty. You may work with other students, provide handouts to the class; you must turn in a page-long (min.) written outline or abstract of the presentation, including relevant bibliography.

Grading and Attendance Policy: Seminars assume learning is participatory. After 3 absences, your grade may decline. If you miss a presentation, you will receive an F for it. If you must re-arrange a presentation, do so beforehand. If you're ill, please leave a message before class at 243-2553.
