American Indian Religion and Philosophy
NAS 301, Section 1 Syllabus

Course description: “Same as RELS 301E. A study of selected ethical systems; origins, world views; religious ceremonies and the way they have been affected by western civilization.” Native philosophy and world view differs markedly from Euro-American or western philosophy and world view, providing a spiritual grounding for Native societies, in contrast to the secular basis of contemporary American culture. This grounding forms the basis of many of the key differences in core cultural values between Native society and non-Indian society. This course is intended to provide the student with a foundation of knowledge to understand ways in which world view and spirituality shape the contemporary Indian world, and ways in which that differs from the contemporary American culture in general.

Course Objectives: The course will provide the student with an understanding of the historical and contemporary basis of Native philosophy and world view, how that is expressed in various societal contexts, including everyday life, social institutions and ritual, and how that has both changed and remained consistent from pre-Columbian through modern times. Both continuity and change, and the forces guiding each, will be the focus of study.

Learning Outcomes:

1) Ability to analytically discuss philosophy and world view from an intercultural context
2) Understanding of roles of spirituality and religion in Native American Life
3) Understanding of Western Impacts on Native American World View
4) Understanding of Modern Issues related to spirituality and world view
