MOST UM STUDENTS
HEAD FOR HOME

MISSOULA---

Most of the remaining University of Montana students who haven't already done so, will be heading for their respective homes this weekend following official completion Friday of fall quarter classes.

Until Friday, weather in the Missoula vicinity had threatened to prevent many of the University's 7,900 students from leaving for Christmas and New Year's holidays, but partially clearing skies and warmer temperatures brightened the homeward-bound outlook considerably.

To permit a thorough house-cleaning of residence halls, only a handful of University male students, and virtually none of the UM coeds, will be on the campus over the holiday period, which ends Jan. 5 with winter quarter registration and resumption of classes.

Tom Hayes, residence halls manager, said coeds are not usually permitted to stay on campus over the holidays and only a few men who aren't able to leave may live in Craig Hall.

Hayes said the 10 to 20 men who do stay on campus usually are foreign students or athletes who have no place to go or who must participate in athletic practice sessions.

Most residence halls staff members will be heading for their respective homes Monday, except for several who stay on campus over the holiday period to look after dormitory facilities.
