Since their midseason slip-up at Sacramento State, the Montana Grizzlies have done everything right.

They've linked together five conference wins, a pair of which they had to come from behind to get, and Jordan Johnson has broken away from the pack of QBs to lead the team.

The Grizzlies have no time to slow down.

The 10th-ranked University of Montana Grizzlies (7-2, 6-1 Big Sky Conference) host the Western Oregon Wolves (6-3, 6-1 Great Northwest Athletic Conference) for UM's final regular season home game on Saturday at 1 p.m. inside Washington-Grizzly Stadium.

Despite an opponent from a lower division — the Wolves are DII — on tap this weekend, Montana head coach Robin Pflugrad doesn't want to look ahead to the 111th Brawl of the Wild against Montana State in two weeks.

"I know we play Western Oregon Saturday," Pflugrad said at the team's weekly press conference Tuesday. "So I haven't really paid too much attention to who's on the schedule after that."

The Grizzlies opened the season with the vaunted Tennessee Volunteers. Pflugrad sees a similar mentality heading into the Grizzlies' date with Western Oregon.

"We went to Tennessee with all intentions of winning that game. We did not plan on coming back with a loss," Pflugrad said. "Obviously we lost to Tennessee, but that's exactly what's happening with (Western) Oregon. They're preparing to beat us."

Saturday's game will be the first meeting between the teams. It will also be Senior Day, as UM will recognize its 24 seniors prior to the contest.

"Senior Day is going to be full of a lot of emotions," senior defensive end Bobby Alt said. "We have our last guaranteed football game in a stadium that we love to play in, and we're thankful to this program for what they've given all of us for four years of education or however long our seniors have been here, whether they're transfers or not. Going out with this group of guys, I couldn't ask to go out with any better of a group."

Last weekend, Johnson tied a school record with six touchdown throws, and senior wide receiver Jabin Sambrano tied a school mark with four scoring grabs, as the Grizzlies notched a key conference win over Weber State 45-10.

The 6-foot-1, 200-pound gunslinger from Eugene, Ore., was named the Big Sky's co-offensive Player of the Week for the first time in his career after his record-tying performance.

"I try not to reflect on it too much because you just got to move and play the next game," Johnson said.

The Wolves, representing Monmouth, Ore., won their third game in a row with a 40-28 home win over Dixie State last weekend.

They head into Missoula with a three-headed monster behind center:

Idaho State transfer QB Evan Mozzochi, 6-foot-4, 230 pounds, will take most of the reps and QB Cory Bean, 6-foot-5, 245 pounds, will play behind him.

The Wolves also use junior dual-threat quarterback Cody VonAppen in a potent Wildcat formation, giving him the freedom to run, pitch or throw.

"He's all over the place, he's like that Energizer bunny," Pflugrad said. "He just goes, goes, goes."

VonAppen signed with the Grizzlies in 2008 as a defensive back, but transferred to Eastern Arizona Junior College in 2009 after being charged, along with two other former Griz, for assaulting a UM student. VonAppen later pleaded no contest to felony criminal endangerment. The Wolves match their pesky offense with a persistent defense.

"Defensively, they have a safety (Bryce Pelia) that has seven interceptions and eight or nine pass (deflections), and one fumble recovery," Pflugrad said. "They'll hit you each and every play. They're a very formidable opponent."

Pflugrad expects junior quarterback Gerald Kemp and redshirt freshman running back Jordan Canada, both of whom have been battling injuries and were limited against Weber State, to be ready to go. He also hopes to have senior offensive tackle Jon Opperud back in the trenches after missing last week with appendicitis.

"(Opperud) helped coach a little bit last week, I just like him a lot better as a player than a coach," Pflugrad said with a smile.

Go Griz!

the 2001 MONTANA GRIZZLIE

It took 98 years for the University of Montana football team to earn its first national championship appearance, but it has made seven such appearances over the last 16.

UM has walked away as champions twice, with its first title coming in 1995.

Come December 21, a full decade will have passed since the dominating Grizzlies of 2001 earned the title of "National Champions."

That team dominated the Big Sky by going 7-0 in conference games and compiled a record of 15-1 overall, setting a school record for wins in a season.

"That sure was a fun team," former UM head coach Joe Glenn said. "Those guys just knew how to win."

Glenn took over as head coach in 2000 after leading the then-Division II Northern Colorado Bears to two championship titles.

The coach did not disappoint. He led the Grizzlies to a 13-2 record and a near D-IAA (now known as the NCAA Division I Football Championship Subdivision) crown as Montana fell to Georgia Southern 27-25 in the national championship during his first season.

Glenn's 2001 team suffered only one loss, which was to D-IA (now NCAA Division I Football Bowl Series) Hawaii. The Griz proved special after claiming their fourth consecutive Big Sky Conference championship and steamrolling through the playoffs. A 38-0 blanking of Northern Iowa not only earned Montana a second-straight trip to the title game in Chattanooga, Tenn., but also solidified UM's No. 1 playoff ranking.

"It was just a season where guys kept making plays," Glenn said. "We had tough guys on both sides of the ball as well as the in kicking game. That had to be the best offensive line of any team I've coached. It was probably our biggest strength."

Glenn's makeup of the "perfectly balanced team" earned a matchup with the Southern Conference's Furman University out of Greenville, S.C., which went 12-3 that year.

Despite the Montana offense having little impact on the game, the Grizzly defense held strong, posting a shutout until the final seconds of the game. UM held on for a 13-6 win.

"We had a really strong defense, and that's what won us the championship game that year," Glenn said. "Everybody played up to their best."

Glenn said the "real key to success" during the 2001 season was every individual player doing his part "each and every play of each and every game."

"Whenever there was pressure, regardless of whether it was on the offense, defense or special teams, someone made a play," the former UM coach said. "We almost always had great field position, which kept the defense out of harm's way, and the defense hardly ever gave up big plays."

Glenn said one position is regarded as the most important on the field: the quarterback. In 2001, that position was filled by then-junior John Edwards.

"It all starts at quarterback," he said. "It takes a terrific leader, and John certainly was that. When you talk about winners, he's right at the top of the list."

Edwards accomplished a feat that season that only one other Grizzly quarterback had. Dave Dickenson led the 1995 Montana team to a 13-2 record and a 22-20 win over Marshall for the crown.

Edwards and the rest of the 2001 Grizzlies set a standard for Montana football. After experiencing four national championship appearances and two titles over a six-year span, fans in Missoula have come to expect a title-contending team each season.

Over the past 10 years, the University of Montana football team has made three other national championship appearances (2004, 2008 and 2009) but came away empty-handed each time.

Seniors Jabin Sambrano and Alex Shaw each experienced title-game defeat in 2008 and 2009 under another former coach, Bobby Hauck. The two said the 2001 championship team helped their decision to play football at Montana.

"When I was getting recruited, the coaching staff really stressed that 2001 team," said Sambrano, who plays wide receiver and is an explosive kick returner for the Grizzlies. "I desired to be a champion. This is such a powerhouse. There's a tradition of winning here, which made Montana very appealing."

Shaw, who came to Missoula with Sambrano in 2008, also focused on UM's history as inspiration in making his choice to attend Montana.

"The success that this team has had in the past definitely fed into my decision to come here," he said. "The fact that they had won national championships and it seemed that they were always competing for the top spot in this division definitely were factors in my decision to come here."

As seniors, Sambrano and Shaw both understand this is their last shot at accomplishing what they initially came to Montana for: a national title.

"It's all or nothing," Shaw said. "It's the last one, the last time you'll ever get a chance to play football. You never know when it's going to be your last game, your last play. You don't know if you'll even make it to the next level. This is the last shot for us seniors."

Perhaps 2011 is "the year" for the seniors who made Montana their school choice four or five years ago, due in no small part to the accomplishments of that 2001 team a decade ago.

"With this being the 10-year anniversary, it's really a special year," Sambrano said. "The ultimate goal is a national championship. It would be a dream come true. It would be like a wife, something I would truly love for the rest of my life."

Just as the 2001 version did before them, the 2011 team is looking to go down in history, hoping to reach the championship game for the eighth time and come away with a third crown.

"Winning a national championship would put a mark on what you've accomplished," Sambrano said. "We want to be more than just Big Sky champs, we want to be in that Hall of Fame we pass through every day (in the Adams Center)."

Although there is a team mentality of "one game at a time," every player, coach and fan alike goes into each season hoping to ultimately win a championship.

"I think it would mean a lot," Shaw said. "Our fans are very supportive of us, and the city would really appreciate it. National champions are not easily forgotten."

GRIZ PLAYER TO WATCH

#18 NATE MONTANA

The Grizzlies are rolling, and should continue to do so against Western Oregon. If the Griz get out to a quick and substantial lead, we should see Montana lead Montana for many drives in the second half. The highly-touted transfer from Notre Dame has yet to see substantial playing time this season but should see a lot of action this week against the Wolves if the Grizzlies take care of business early.

TREVOR GATES #4

This little wide receiver is putting up huge numbers for Western Oregon. It might be easy to miss him at 5-foot-9 but his numbers are gaudy. He has caught 53 passes for 939 yards and five touchdowns. He is currently 8th in total receiving yards in DII. If Western Oregon moves the ball, the Wolves will try to do it through Gates.
