NEWS BRIEFS

Dr. R. McKelvey of the University of Colorado Department of Mathematics will discuss "Environmental Problems of the Colorado Front Range" Friday at the University of Montana.

Friday's program, which is last of the Botany-Geology Seminars on Environment this quarter at UM, begins at noon in room 307 of the Natural Science Building.

The seminar is open to the public without charge. Dr. Meyer Chessin, a UM botany professor, is program coordinator.

Donald C. Miller, an assistant professor of journalism at the University of Montana, has received a grant of $929 from the Montana Arts Council to produce a short sound-color film about a Montana Indian artist this summer.

Miller said the artist hasn't been selected yet.

Per Wegge, a graduate student in wildlife biology at the University of Montana, will discuss "Game Resources, Management and Research in Norway" during a zoology seminar Monday (March 16) at the University of Montana. Wegge is from Kroer As, Norway.

The program, which is open to the public without charge, begins at noon in room 207 of the Health Science Building.
