Austin Schempp/Montana Kaimin

Montana's Peter Nguyen, Brock Coyle and Jordan Tripp reflect moments after Eastern Washington's 32-26 victory over Montana on Sept. 29.

Griz football opens season with new mindset to move forward

Austin Schempp
Montana Kaimin

The day is hot and yesterday's smoke from surrounding forest fires, which sat thick in the valley air, is gone long enough to provide relief for practice. Players with jerseys soaked in sweat line up as wide as the practice field, facing their four new captains to begin pre-practice drills.

That's when the taunts start. "Man, what did you do with all that weight?" shouts one player to last year's running back and kick returner Peter Nguyen. "You skinny, Peter," teases another.

Then, head coach Mick Delaney chimes in. Except the 72-year-old coach, wearing shorts and sporting a visor, doesn't heckle Nguyen. He invites him over the small chain link fence to lead Montana in a pre-practice chant.

In unison, players shout the four same letters. "G!" "R!" "I!" "Z!" Then faster. G,R,I,Z. The last z fades trails off into the afternoon, as sweat-covered jerseys join together in a huddle.

Meanwhile, Nguyen, there to watch his younger brother John, retreats back over the fence. His time is over. Last season — the first losing season for the University of Montana football program in over 25 years — is history.

DEFEAT

Eight minutes, 26 seconds remained on the clock when red-shirt freshman Chris Lider connected on a 25-yard field goal at Eastern Washington University's Roos Field to boost Montana to a 26-17 lead.

GRIZZLY GRUDGE MATCH

Montana aims for perfect home record against App State

Austin Schempp

Montana Kaimin

It's the last time and it's in the last best place. The showdown under the lights. East versus West.

The fourth and possibly final installment of the heated rivalry between two of the Football Championship Subdivision's most storied football programs — Appalachian State and Montana — takes place Saturday night at the same place it started 13 years ago, Washington-Grizzly Stadium.

Players and coaches from both teams are chomping at the bit to meet again after last season's battle in Boone, N.C., where Appalachian State won for the first time against Montana 35-27.

"This is probably as an exciting of an opening game as anybody that's involved with FCS football could ask for," said Montana second-year head coach Mick Delaney.

Appalachian State defensive end Ronald Blair said last year's matchup lived up to expectations.

"Last year, it was just a shock and a wake up call to see how big the rivalry was even though you only play each other every now and then," Blair said, who finished last year's contest with six tackles. "It's still a heated rivalry and it gains heat every time."

With Appalachian State's decision to move to college football's highest national division next season, the Football Bowl Subdivision, a future meeting seems unlikely at best.

But before the rivalry is concluded, both teams have unfinished business. For Appalachian State, the goal is to do what they haven't done before: win in Missoula.

would be sweeter than to get revenge for last year's loss.

weapons to throw to.

In last year's contest, Londry-Jackson threw for 260 yards and two touchdowns, while also utilizing his speed for 68 yards rushing.

"We know that they have weapons," said Montana senior linebacker Brock Coyle after an August practice. "We just have to match their intensity."

Appalachian State and new head coach Scott Satterfield will travel to Missoula missing one weapon, senior wide receiver Sean Price, who will serve a suspension of an undetermined length after police arrested him Aug. 18 for being disruptive while intoxicated. Price torched the Griz secondary in last season's opener, recording eight catches for 103 yards and a touchdown.

Even with him out, Lon-dry-Jackson said he is confident in the team's other wide receivers, especially senior Tony Washington and sophomore Andrew Peacock.

"(They're) guys that can go up and get it and turn a 5-yard route into a 50-yard run," Londry-Jackson said. "Definitely, I think I have one of the best receiving corps in the nation if not the best."

The Mountaineers offensive line will have their hands full up front as the Grizzlies return all but one of their starting defensive front seven.

Redshirt junior defensive end Zack Wagenmann returns after a breakout sophomore season where he finished second in the nation with 11.5 sacks.

LB JORDAN TRIPP

Donning the tradition of the No. 37 jersey, Tripp enters his senior season as an All-America and Buck Buchanan Award candidate. A junior in 2012, Tripp finished the season with 95 tackles and a team-high 13.5 tackles-for-loss. Tripp was also chosen as the Big Sky Conference's Preseason Defensive Most Valuable Player.

Tommy Martino/Montana Kaimin

QB JORDAN JOHNSON

An All-America and Walter Payton Award watch candidate, Johnson will hit the field for the first time since 2011. During his sophomore campaign, he led the Grizzlies with 2400 passing yards and also showcased his scrambling ability. Last season Johnson did not play against Appalachian State as he sat out the season due to legal issues.

QB JAMAL LONDRIY-JACKSON

Courtesy of The Appalachian

The 6-foot-3-inch senior from Atlanta, Ga., is a Walter Payton Award watch candidate and dual-threat quarterback for the Mountaineers. Londriy-Jackson showcased his speed and accuracy in last season's 35-27 win over Montana by throwing for 260 yards and no interceptions, while also boosting App State's ground game rushing for 65 yards. He finished seventh in the nation in passing yards.

WR/KR TONY WASHINGTON

Another preseason All-American for App State, Washington is not only a solid prospect at wide receiver, but one of the best kick returners in the nation. The senior snagged 39 receptions for 472 yards as a junior and also made some memorable highlight reel returns such as his 99-yard kick return touchdown against Wofford in 2012.

HISTORY OF THE RIVALRY

Present

NO. 11 APPALACHIAN STATE 35, NO. 12 MONTANA 27

In front of a raucous 30,000 fans at Kidd Brewer Stadium, the Mountaineers launched an impressive passing game with over 300 yards through the air to send the Grizzlies home from Boone, N.C., with their first loss of the season. Impressive plays by Montana highlighted the game, such as fullback Dan Moore's 87-yard touchdown reception from redshirt quarterback Trent McKinney, where he hurdled and broke through Appalachian State defenders. However, it was Appalachian State who had the last laugh as Demetrius McCray came up with an interception to seal App State's first victory, 35-27 over Montana.

FCS SEMIFINALS: NO. 1 MONTANA 24, NO. 5 APP STATE 17

One of Montana's most historical and classic games — aired on ESPN — saw the No. 1 Grizzlies beat frigid temperatures and blizzard-like conditions en route to their seventh national title game appearance. Behind the arm of four time All-American quarterback Armani Edwards, the No. 5 ranked Mountaineers threw for 353 yards, but UM's rushing attack was too much for the visitors. Running back Chase Reynolds rushed for 193 yards and two touchdowns to lead Montana's rushing attack.

Edwards led the late charge for App State. Down 24-17, Edwards guided his team on a 54-yard drive to Montana's 3-yard line. His first pass fell incomplete, leaving time for just one more chance to score. A pass hit receiver Brian Quick in the hands, but Quick missed, securing the game for Montana.

FCS SEMIFINALS: MONTANA 19, APPALACHIAN STATE 16 OT

A perfectly thrown 15-yard fade route to senior wide receiver Jimmy Farris gave the No. 1 seed Grizzlies the edge they needed in overtime, sealing a 19-16 overtime victory and a spot in the national championship against No. 3 Georgia Southern.

Montana held the lead for much of the game and seemed to have clinched their first victory over Appalachian State when running back Yo Humphrey's 2-yard touchdown run boosted the Grizzlies' lead to 13-3 with 10:49 left in the 4th quarter.

However, App State and quarterback Joe Burchette refused to quit, completing a 40-yard touchdown pass pulling the Mountaineers to within three. Later in the quarter, Mountaineers kicker Mark Wright nailed a 27-yard field goal as time expired to send the game into overtime.

Montana elected to go on defense after winning the coin toss and held App State to just a field goal. The Grizzlies capitalized on offense the next play with the touchdown pass to Farris.

are preseason All-American picks, who helped the Griz finish first in rushing defense, allowing opponents just 92.5 yards-per-game.

"Our strength is going to be our front seven," Delaney said.

Londry-Jackson won't be the only explosive quarterback running onto the field Saturday.

Redshirt junior Jordan Johnson returns to Montana's offense for the first time since 2011, this time under center instead of shotgun in the Montana's new pro-style offensive scheme.

Johnson said he feels prepared and ready after completing his first healthy fall camp as a Griz.

"It's unbelievable," said Johnson about the prospect of returning to the field. "I get goosebumps just thinking about it."

After finishing second in the conference in rushing yards per game, Montana will continue to pound the ball starting with the Mountaineers and their young defense.

Satterfield said his team's new 3-4 defensive scheme should help some of the younger players.

"I think the key is how quickly can those guys understand what we're trying to do on defense and understand the speed of the game," Satterfield said. "You try to simulate that in practice, but until the lights come on, you never know how a young player is going to react."

to Cheney, Wash., cheered wildly. The season could be saved. A win over the Eagles, the No. 7 team in the nation at the time, could keep the 2-2 team's playoff hopes alive.

Then it happened: the second-half plague.

It spoiled Montana's homecoming a week prior, after the Grizzlies built a 24-point advantage heading into halftime before Northern Arizona turned on the jets, scoring 27 points in the second half to win 41-31.

The sickness started with just over two minutes remaining, as EWU quarterback Vernon Adams hit 6-foot-5-inch wide receiver Brandon Kaufman for a 25-yard touchdown, infecting Montana's lead to two points, 26-24 with 2:19 left on the clock.

On the next play, a perfect bounce on an onside kick from Eagles' kicker Kevin Miller, gave just enough opportunity for the 6-foot-5-inch Kaufman to recover the ball.

Five plays and 50 yards later, the Grizzly secondary was blind to wide-open EWU receiver Ashton Clark, who hauled in a 20-yard touchdown pass, sealing the second straight loss for Montana.

After the game, players silently exited the locker room. Playoff hopes were all but doomed.

"I think Eastern was a huge, devastating loss for that team," said Jordan Johnson, this year's starting quarterback for the Griz. "I almost turned the game off on TV because I thought it was over and Eastern somehow found a

After facing Appalachian State in what will be the Grizzlies' last game against their heated rival, the Grizzlies will take a week off before they open up their conference schedule on the road at North Dakota.

In last year's game against UND, the Griz entered the fourth quarter with a 34-31 lead, but quarterback Braden Hanson and North Dakota's passing game proved to be too much for Montana and its secondary, cruising to a 40-34 win.

Watching film from last year should hopefully improve the Grizzlies' defensive game plan against UND, who completely picked apart the secondary by throwing for 660 yards last season, a North Dakota single game record. Senior wide receiver Greg Hardin racked up 333 yards receiving, breaking the Big Sky Conference single game record for receiving yards.

While North Dakota, dominated the Griz through in the air, Montana found success in stopping UND's rushing attack, limiting the team to 44 yards rushing on 24 attempts.

Returning defensive stars Jordan Tripp and Zach Wagen-mann of Montana will have their hands full defending this air-raid by UND, but dropping back to throw gives Wagenmann, the Grizzlies' leading pass-rusher with 11.5 sacks last season, many opportunities for a game-changing play.

On offense, Montana threw for 358 yards and rushed for an additional 163. Running-back Jordan Canada torched UND's defense for 91 yards on just 14 carries, and with the return of quarterback Jordan Johnson, the Grizzlies should pose even more challenges for North Dakota.

way to come back and win."

Montana finished the season with three more losses, two of them games where the Grizzlies held a second half lead.

"We just didn't finish," said offensive lineman Danny Kistler Jr. of last year's games. "And that's what the tradition at Montana has been. We've finished our opponents in the past."

Turnovers were a week-to-week problem. On offense, poor red zone execution prevented Montana from extending leads or fighting its way back. UM, boasting one of the nation's best defensive front seven, blocked up opponents' run game, and couldn't stop them from attacking from the air.

Young players such as redshirt freshman quarterback Trent McKinney, who had never taken a snap in a collegiate football game, were expected to perform.

A NEW BEGINNING

Players from this year's squad don't want to talk about 2012.

It's still painful to think about what could have been. It stings to relive the silent locker room followed by the long bus ride home.

"We are an entirely different team," Delaney says. "Entirely different dynamics, and entirely different players. In a lot of respects the same guys are playing, but things are different at this time."

The differences are easy to spot.

Johnson, the quarterback who led the Griz to the national semifinals, returned to the team in March. Timm Rosenbach and his spread offense are gone, replaced with co-offensive coordinators Kefense Hynson and Scott Gragg's pro-style offense.

When Johnson rejoined his presence had an immediately effect.

"You trust him," Kistler Jr. said. "You see the way he works on the field. He reminds me a lot of (former UM quarterback) Andrew Selle. He was a perfectionist."

On defense, Montana returns almost all of last season's starters including a strong core of linebackers, headlined by preseason All-America candidate Jordan Tripp.

There is also a new motto, "United," which is sometimes apparent on the practice field and off.

"It's something you can see," Kistler Jr. said. "It's tangible almost. It's an abstract idea, but very tangible. When you see us, everywhere we go, we love being around each other."

Montana will open up the 2013 season under the lights, united by last season's struggles.

"All that stuff (from 2012) was a lesson and a blessing because we figured out this is how we have to do things and this our path we're on right now," Tripp said.
