International relationships are ... preordained to be clumsy gestures based on imperfect knowledge.

— Rebecca West, The Strange Necessity, ch. 10 (1928)

COURSE DESCRIPTION

International Relations (IR), the study of the conflict and cooperation in global politics, asks both empirical (i.e., what happened and why?) and normative (i.e., what should have happened?) questions. To answer these questions, this course introduces three different empirical perspectives used to understand patterns of international conflict and cooperation — realism, liberalism, and the identity perspective. Each perspective offers different answers to the core questions of IR: who gets what, when, and how in global politics.

With this background, students gain a better understanding of the behavior of three key international actors — states, intergovernmental organizations, and non-governmental organizations — as they address contemporary issues and current events in global politics. Students also gain a greater ability to proscribe the actions international actors should take in future situations and to defend their own perspective on international relations.

COURSE PHILOSOPHY

Learning is more than memorizing facts and answering questions on a test. It is using information to gain an understanding of how things work and how to make them better. In this course, learning will be defined as the process of enhancing your ability to:

- Ask the right questions and frame good problems,
- Acquire information and evaluate sources of information,
- Critically investigate and solve problems,
- Make choices among different alternatives,
- Explain concepts to others both orally and in writing and,
- Generalize to new situations.

Required Materials

All required texts are available on Blackboard. Students must purchase an i>clicker remote (ISBN: 9780716779391) online or from the bookstore.

Course Requirements

The following paragraphs outline the basic requirements for this course. More detailed information on specific assignments can be found under on Blackboard.

Simulation

Depending on enrollment, students will be assigned to groups representing nation-states in a simulation of global politics. Students will be graded on participation and engagement.

Clickers

In lieu of examinations, students will be asked a series of clicker questions throughout the semester. Some questions are graded for points and others are scored for participation only.
Current Events

Students are expected to be current on current events during the five-week term. Students should read the World Section of the New York Times. To facilitate discussion, students will be sent articles prior to class and clicker questions will be asked about them.

Short Papers

Students will write a set of four short papers (2-3 pages each) that are due on Thursdays at midnight. All papers must be submitted through Blackboard. In the first paper, students identify their IR perspective. In the second, students use theory to explain a current event. In the third, students justify the international community’s response to the Rwandan Genocide. In the fourth, students proscribe solutions to a global issue using IR theory. Full instructions and grading rubrics for each assignment are on Blackboard.

Student Responsibilities

Students have the responsibility to:

1. Attend class regularly.
2. Complete assigned readings before class.
3. Complete assignments by their deadlines.
4. Inform the instructor beforehand of any reasons why they are unable to do this.
5. Complete all requirements within the timeframe of the semester. University policy on incompletes will be strictly enforced.

Academic Misconduct Policy

All students must practice academic honesty. Academic misconduct is subject to an academic penalty by the course instructor and/or disciplinary sanction by the University. All students need to be familiar with the Student Conduct Code, which is available for review online at: http://life.umt.edu/VPSA/name/StudentConductCode.

Statement on Disabilities:

I encourage students with documented disabilities to discuss appropriate accommodations with me. If you have a disability and feel you need accommodations in this course please present me with a letter from Disability Services for Students (DSS), Lommasson Center 154 (243-2243), indicating the existence of a disability and the suggested accommodations.

Grading

Points are distributed between short papers (600), the simulation (200), and clickers (200).
