Course Description:

After a quick overview of key trends affecting China before Mao Zedong came to power, this course will use a lecture and discussion format to examine the Maoist revolution and the Dengist reform that virtually destroyed it. The material on Mao’s rule will largely involve study of China’s departure from a Soviet style model of economic development in favor of a Maoist revolutionary model that produced the disastrous Great Leap and Cultural Revolution. The subsequent examination of post-Mao China will focus in large part on Deng Xiaoping’s epochal economic reform, and its social and political impact (good and bad).
The course will also explore key aspects of China’s new assertiveness in foreign relations, including its political and trade relations with the U.S., diverse aspects of the Taiwan sovereignty issue, and a new global strategic initiative that is reflected in China playing a much stronger role in Asia and has it using trade and investment to expand Chinese influence in Africa, Latin America, and Central Asia. We will end by evaluating the forces that promote and constrain China’s ability to be a global power, and how both China’s new strength and key Chinese and U.S. domestic trends have affected bilateral relations. A previous course on China is helpful, but by no means mandatory.

What this course will help you understand:

• Key historical trends that impacted China in the 20th Century
• Some of the reasons for the rise of Maoism
• The nature of Maoist rule, and the reasons for its collapse
• The complex nature of Dengist and post-Dengist economic reform and its impact on China’s domestic political scene and foreign policy
• How Tiananmen occurred, why it failed, and its residual impact
• Key aspects of contemporary Chinese culture and society
• Basic forces influencing U.S.-China political and economic relations
• China’s emergence as an economic and political power
• The complex challenges China faces in the 21st century

Required Readings:

Tony Saich, Governance and Politics in China. Palgrave Macmillan, 2004 (paperback)
Weidner: China Since Mao – 2

Ian Johnson, Wild Grass: Three Stories of Change in Modern China, Random House, 2004 (paperback)

Plus a number of current media articles on contemporary issues

GRADING:

- class preparation, class participation, and attendance at East Asia-related UM events: one-third
- mid-term examination: one-third
- final take-home project: one-third

Students must successfully complete both written assignments to receive a grade in the course.

You will note that a relatively high percentage of the grade in this course depends class preparation and participation. That means one needs not only show up for every class (particularly as we meet only once a week) but to come having done the reading and prepared to discuss it. SPECIAL NOTE: Please note that everyone in class must attend (and write a simple one-paragraph synopsis of) three events on East Asia that occur on campus during the semester as part of their course requirement, with extra credit given for any additional events attended and reported upon. I strongly urge you to include attendance of at least one session of the 24th annual Mansfield Conference (Sept. 24-25th) on the political and strategic impact of global climate change in Asia, if you are able to do so. If special circumstances make it difficult for you to meet the outside attendance requirement, I am happy to propose an alternative assignment.
