Course Description
Analysis of the structure, processes, and politics of the U.S. Congress. Topics include member-constituent relations, party leadership, the committee system, and House-Senate relations. Case studies will analyze and assess the role of Congress in the policy-making process. Particular emphasis will be placed on the Congressional elections in light of the upcoming 2002 elections.

Course Objectives
Upon completion of this course students should gain an understanding of the legislative process. A complex process, students will be asked to assess the importance of structure, procedure, and personal skills on legislative outcomes.

Research Papers

Students select a research topic of their choice. Research paper prospectuses are DUE Oct. 11 in class. Please note that this is to be a research paper. Consequently the amount of research undertaken, and the ability to marshal that information effectively, will be crucial in the evaluation of the paper. The paper should range between 10 to 15 double-spaced typed pages.

The Classroom Learning Environment (authored by Dr. Ronald Perrin, Professor of Political Theory)

Wherever the learning process takes place (for example, in the library or the seclusion of one's study) it does so best when there are a minimum of distractions. This requirement poses special challenges for the learning that takes place in the lecture hall or the classroom, where the possibility of distractions is the greatest. In order to establish and maintain a supportive learning environment for my students I will not tolerate the few individuals who might be prone to a) come to class late or leave early, b) carry on private conversations during class, or c) use the lecture hall/classroom as an opportunity to read material, such as the Kaimin, that is not relevant to the subject matter under consideration. The only exception to these conditions concerns students whose work schedules or unanticipated appointments require them to arrive for class late or leave early. In these circumstances I would appreciate knowing of the circumstance before it occurs and, in all such instances, request that students do so as unobtrusively as possible. Thank you.
