Course Description

No discussion of American politics can go too far before political parties begin to intrude. Indeed, as E.E. Schattsneider wrote: “Modern democracy is unthinkable save in terms of political parties.” Yet while they are a central feature of the American political system, parties are more elusive and difficult to study than other well-bounded institutions like Congress or the Presidency. Even definitions of “political party” are contested. Nonetheless, in a country marked by vast socio-economic, ethnic, and religious diversity, as well as fragmentation of power across branches and levels of government, parties play a central role in providing linkages. They connect voters to each other, link voters to elected officials, and bind elected officials to one another both within and across branches and levels of government. The ways in which political parties do these things has evolved in fascinating ways. This course will explore the origin, development, importance, and consequences of political parties in the United States. In addition, with the 2008 presidential election recently concluded, we will analyze the parties’ nominating processes and the general election, as well as the recent congressional elections. Among other things, this task involves analyzing voter participation and behavior.

Readings

Many of our readings will be posted on the course’s Blackboard website. These readings are designated on the syllabus as: “(BB).” Contact me if you are not familiar with Blackboard. The Larry Bartles article can be accessed on the internet at the address listed on this syllabus. In addition, three books are required:

Gerring and Maisel can be purchased at the University Bookstore. Due to its recent release date, Ceaser, et al. is not available at the University Bookstore and must be ordered online.
In addition, students are required to read those news stories dealing with American political parties in a national newspaper such as the New York Times or the Washington Post.

The instructor reserves the right to add, delete, or alter course readings as needed.

Requirements and Grading

Exam 1: 20%
Exam 2: 20%
Paper: 20%
Final Exam: 20%
Participation (including presentation): 20%

Exams: Exams 1 and 2 will be administered in class on February 27 and March 27. The Final Exam will be held on Wednesday, May 13 from 10:10 – 12:10. Exams may include a combination of multiple choice, identification, short answer, and essay questions. Makeup exams will only be permitted if I have been notified prior to the missed exam and only if I agree that the absence was necessitated by a serious, documented emergency. Check your calendar now to make sure you do not have anything that conflicts with the exams.

Paper: Students will write a 6 to 8 page double-spaced research paper with 1-inch margins and standard 12 point font about an American presidential election. More information about the research paper will be given in class. Papers are due in class on Friday, May 8. Extensions will be available only for illness or serious family circumstance, and then only with advance permission. Papers will be marked down half a letter grade for each day they are late.

Participation: Much of our class time will be spent discussing the course readings in a seminar-style. Consequently, both quantity and quality of class participation will be very important. Students are expected to do all of the assigned readings before each class meeting and come to class prepared to discuss the material. Daily attendance will be taken and factored into participation grades. Students missing more than ¼ of our class meetings will not pass the course. In addition, each student will give one formal 10 to 15 minute class presentation utilizing Power Point on the presidential election s/he is researching and writing a paper on. Further details about the presentations will be provided in class.

Grades: Grades will be assigned according to the following percentages:

<table>

* All three exams and the paper must be completed in order to pass the course.*
Academic Honesty

All students must practice academic honesty. Academic misconduct is subject to an academic penalty by the course instructor and a disciplinary sanction by the University. All students need to be familiar with the Student Conduct Code. The Code is available online at http://life.umt.edu/SA/documents/fromWeb/StudentConductCode1.pdf. I take academic honesty very seriously, and will do my utmost to prevent, uncover, and penalize any form of cheating. Please contact me if you have any questions or concerns about academic honesty.

DSS Students

Qualified students with disabilities will receive appropriate accommodations. Students requesting accommodations on exams, papers, or other course requirements should contact me as soon as possible, and must contact DSS in order to arrange for and provide me with a letter of approval for accommodations at least one week prior to the first exam. DSS is in Lommasson Center 154.
