Political Theory Seminar: Negative & Positive Freedom

"The world freedom is incompletely descriptive. To understand what freedom means, we must know what it is — freedom from or freedom for." Maurice Cranston.

Course Description: Classical and contemporary political philosophers often speak of freedom, (some even make a distinction between liberty and freedom.) But what exactly does freedom mean? There is considerable debate among theorists, and especially among the writers we will examine this semester over whether freedom or "liberty" should be treated as an end (good for its own sake) or a means (to other human ends or values.) This seminar we will examine both forms of freedom, considering how the embrace of negative or positive freedom can influence a thinker's position on what properly belongs to the public versus the private sphere, the relationship between society's good and the individual's interests, as well as what he/she believes are the sources of oppression and its remedy.

Course Objectives: after successfully completing the course work, the student should be able to:

1. Distinguish between negative and positive freedom, and recognize how this analytical framework influences contemporary political discourse.

2. Develop concise, analytic essays on the assigned readings in contemporary theory. Specifically with regards to an analytic perspective, students will examine their own position with respect to different approaches to studying political theory (i.e. what consequences follow when one emphasizes text over context when studying political theory.)

3. Evaluate a political theory in terms of its analytic, empirical, and normative strengths and/or weaknesses.
Course Grading:
PS 550 will be taught as a seminar. Short essays (6-7 per student) will be assigned and critiqued in class (55% of course grade.) Class participation (20% of course grade) will evaluated according to each student's contribution to discussions on reading assignments. The final (25%) will be a take-home essay examination.

In addition, students will be expected to assess the merits and weaknesses of their colleague's essays. To give us time to prepare questions, copies of your essay must be distributed the Friday before you are scheduled to orally present it. Late essays will not be accepted. The field exam will be on Monday, May 7th at 3:30pm - 5:20pm.

Capitalism, Choice & Liberty

Read: Andrew Schmookler, The Illusion of Choice

Essays (due 2/16 by 1pm): "No wonder we think we are getting what we want. We have been taught to want what we get." When speaking of democratic government, however, Schmookler insists that it's only legitimate when the consent of the governed is given "freely." Can these two statements be reconciled?

Essays (due 2/16 by 1): "Freedom requires order.” Discuss Schmookler’s statement.

Negative Freedom v. Classical Political Philosophy

Read: Strauss, Natural Right & History; Choose one of the recommended readings as well.

Essays (due 3/2 by 1pm): It's argued that the Bush administration neo-conservatives are students of Leo Strauss. In what sense, can we say they understand and/or misunderstand Strauss's conception of democratic freedom?

Essays (due 3/2 by 1pm): Jeffery Hart lists one variety of conservative thought as "Natural law conservatism," which deduces principles of behavior from the fact of 'human' nature as distinct from other kinds of nature, and on that account resists moral change based on fashion, historical accident, or false analogies between human nature and other kinds. Conservatism of this kind, he thinks, "is found in Aristotle, Aquinas, Burke, and today in Leo Strauss (italics added.) In light of your reading, discuss this statement.

Essays (due 3/9th by 1pm): "What is good or bad for man is not a metaphysical question, but an empirical one that can be answered on the basis of an analysis of man's nature and the effect which certain conditions have on him." (266 -Escape From Freedom) What difficulties are involved in making an "empirical" view of human nature the basis of a political theory?

Essays (due 3/9th by 1pm): Fromm, in common with other writers on the left, has a concept of alienation. What is it? Is there any comparable concept in liberal (say Hayek's) thought? Has the concept of alienation become outdated, too blunt for an analytical tool?

Essays (due 3/16 by 1pm): Man is rational, says Fromm, not because he always thinks or acts rationally but because he has this need to rationalize whatever he does. (p. 67 hardback ed.; pp. 85-86 paperback ed.) What does Fromm mean? What does it mean (to you) to say that people behave or fail to behave in a rational way?

Communitarians, Conservatives (Radical?) & Liberty

Essays (due 3/23 by 1pm): “There are two kinds of freedom: the freedom of the community and the freedom of the individual. The freedom of the community is the more fundamental and the more complex.” What does this say about Barry’s position? And do you agree, why, why not?

Essay (due 3/23 by 1pm): While Barry makes a distinction between the individual good and the community good, Ignatieff also points out the difference between respecting the individual’s needs and our common needs as ‘human beings.’ How is this dichotomy seemingly embedded in the differences between negative and positive freedom proponents? Does Ignatieff, like Barry, stress either one more than the other; this is, if he must choose, will Ignatieff favor the needs of individuals or our common ‘human’ needs?

Essays (due 4/6 by 1pm): Arendt is critical of Marxism, yet how does her indictment of modern society parallel Fromm’s? Is her diagnosis of modern alienation prone to the same analytic &/or empirical weaknesses?

Essays (due 4/6 by 1pm): Arendt argues that in the beginning of the modern period, work had displaced both contemplation and action in the hierarchy of men’s activities; but by the nineteenth century labour had replaced work as the supreme activity. How did this triumph of animal laborans come about according to Arendt?
