UM AND U.S.F.S. COOPERATE ON FOREST PRODUCTS RESEARCH-- Working on a study of the Idaho forest products industry are, from left, Jim Sylvester and Tim Jackson, research assistants, and Charles Keegan, research associate, in the Bureau of Business and Economic Research at the University of Montana. They have completed similar studies of the industry in Montana and Wyoming. The three-part project is sponsored by the U.S. Forest Service Intermountain Forest and Range Experiment Station, Ogden, Utah. The purpose of the project is to compile and interpret data on the sources and uses of timber and to analyze the economic importance of the forest products industry in the three states.
