Commissioner's office still opposes payroll system bill

By BOOMER SLOTHOWER
Montana Kaimin Legislative Reporter

HELENA — The commissioner of higher education's office continued its opposition to a bill that would change the payroll system for salaried employees of the university system at a hearing before the Senate Finance and Claims Committee yesterday.

The bill would replace the current "after-the-fact" payroll system with one that would allow faculty members and other salaried employees to be paid on the first of the month. Under the current system, all employees are required to fill out a time card near the end of the month. The card is processed, and checks are sent out 10 working days after the end of the month.

According to Rep. Aaron Andreason, R-Lolo, an assistant commissioner for fiscal affairs, speaking in opposition to the bill, said that even if the bill passed, the commissioner's office would not change the system. "It isn't just a matter of getting a paycheck out," Noble said. "A change in the payroll system would require changing the entire personal system, he said.

Andreason challenged Noble's estimate of the cost of changing the payroll system. He said no one has been able to come up with a precise figure on what it would cost.

-Being paid in the middle of the month has caused problems for some faculty members, Andreason said. Mortgages and bills, due at the first of the month, have to be delayed and there is no reliable schedule for when the check will come.

-The amount we have been paying university employees makes every day an important day," Andreason said.

Forestry research station may suffer in budget cut

HELENA — Expanded research at the University of Montana's forestry experiment station will be sacrificed further cuts in the state budget are necessary, a legislative subcommittee decided yesterday.

Following weekend approval of the budget for the Montana University System's six universities and colleges, the Joint Appropriations Subcommittee on Education met to decide what "extras" can be cut to ensure enough money for Republican tax cuts.

To the surprise of most university officials, the record $171 billion budget for the university system passed with little opposition Saturday. The vote followed Friday's pledge by the Republican leadership that it plans no changes in the system's budget.

The experiment station's budget is separate from the university system budget and has not yet been voted on by the House Appropriations Committee, Rep. Esther Bengtson, D-Shepherd, said yesterday that she would have "real problems" defending the experiment station's budget and 12 new faculty positions. "I don't think I could speak in favor of it," Bengtson said.

Another member of the subcommittee, Sen.-Julie Jacobson, D-Butte, said that she would rather cut a program like the expansion of forestry research than endanger a program already in place.

The other members of the subcommittee said that although they are wary of putting $350,000 into the expanded research, they would rather have the program cut when the budget reaches the Senate if necessary.

"I don't think it's necessary to cut just because we're worried about what will happen in the (full) committee," subcommittee chairman, Rep. Gene Donaisdick, R- Helena, said.

He reminded subcommittee members that the experiment station budget still has "plenty of occasions where it can be cut."

The experiment station and the university system budget still face approval by the House of Representatives as well as committee and full-Senate approval. Detectives can be made at any point in the process.

Lobbyists oppose all-day gun carrying

By CATHY KRADOLFER

HELENA — Student lobbyists yesterday withdrew their support of a bill allowing campus security officers to carry guns at all times. House Bill 463 goes "far too far" in increasing the authority of security officers to carry guns and presents a great potential for abuse, ASUM lobbyist, Mike Danien testified before the Senate Education Committee. He was joined in opposition to the bill by lobbyists for Eastern Montana College and Montana State University, both of whom had previously supported the bill.

Earlier in the session the bill was amended by the House to allow security officers to carry guns 24 hours rather than only from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. during emergencies. Dahlem and the other lobbyists testified that allowing the officers to carry guns during daylight hours was unnecessary and not a deterrent to crime.

Ted Parker, director of the University of Montana Physical Plant, said that an officer had not fired a weapon at a student in 30 years, but that officers need to carry guns at all times to respond to an increasing number of disturbances on campus. He said that from January 1980 to January 1981, UM security officers dealt with 15 domestic disturbances, two felony rapes, 22 incidents of "deviate sexual conduct" and 460 felony burglaries and thefts from dormitories and auxiliary services.

And Ken Willi, head of Campus Security, said that UM and MSU, campus escort service needs volunteers

The teams at the UND made an average of three trips a night, Enyeart said.

Lynne Fitch, a campus pastor, said 25 people are needed for the system to work. With only five volunteers now, Fitch said, the service will be available only one night a week next quarter. A decision determining that night will be made Friday, April 3, 9 p.m., at the Narnia coffeehouse.

The service will add a night for every five people who volunteer, Fitch said.

For more information on the service call Enyeart at 594-5940.

The service was extended to the area around the university if fraternity and sorority people also volunteered, Fitch said.

Mike McAndrews, president of the IntraFraternity Council, said Greeks would be in favor of volunteering to help with the service.

Enyeart said the University of North Dakota, from which she transferred, had an escort service that worked well.

The teams at the UND made an average of three trips a night, Enyeart said.

UM woman assaulted near high school

A 19-year-old University of Montana woman was assaulted near Hellgate High School March 2 by a man wielding a knife.

The woman, who wished to remain anonymous, said a man jumped from a dark avenue near the high school and forced her to walk at knifepoint through the alley between Higgins and Gerald avenues.

She said the man was between 5-foot-5 and about 27 years old. He had brown hair with a receding hairline, a mustache and was wearing a brown Blazer, parked next to the apartments, and drove off.

"I think a girl's best defense is a scream," she said.

Marvin Hamilton, captain of detectives with the Missoula Police Department, said yesterday the case is being investigated.

"No arrests have been made," Hamilton said. "That is about all I can tell you."

College students—wake up!
The actor in Washington is delivering one of the most critical performance of his life. Like a darting swashbuckler, Ronald Reagan swings a powerful sword, chopping away not at dragons of waste in the federal budget but at students pursuing a college education. Students of families earning less than $25,000 a year are on the chopping block, receiving some type of government assistance while pursuing higher education schools are precarious now and are estimated to drop in the next five years. This would mean the legislature may have to close at least one university system unit.

People who cannot attend school pursuing a college education. It could cost up to 74,000 teachers their jobs. It could force states to make up federal cutbacks with state revenues. Those cuts could amount to almost $8.9 million in Montana.

Earning a college degree is not easy. Reagan does not plan to make it any easier. Let's hope Congress sees the folly of Reagan's preposterous proposals.

Don't turn away

Editor: Mr. President, hear my footsteps, for I am coming for a visit. I am coming to Washington. And I am not alone. We, the Vietnamese veterans of this country are not to be appeased by late medals and worn out rhetoric. We are serious and we are sincere, and we shall be heard.

We offered to give our lives for our country, whether our country was right or wrong. And we did. We are and are proud to be of us also. Remember, we did not make the rules in Vietnam, we are the ones that played the game. So listen to us, please.

I want to address either my Congress or my president. From one who served honorably when asked, from one that offers a life-time of peace. I want to be heard. I am. My bitterness slips away, turning to a dedication that I have not felt since I enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1967. I am in the front lines again, proudly. For I speak of Truth and Honesty, of human lives and sanity, of Justice and Equality. And I first learned of them early in the American school system.

Vietnam veterans have been labeled, categorized and stigmatized for too many years. Of all the names we have been called, two are accurate. We are a "generation of cynics" and we are "American's Conscience." And we bled and died for our country. So why not turn away from us again? Let us hope that the majority of the American people will continue to support the Vietnam veteran and of his America.

CB's manner not amusing

Editor: It is often said that all good things shall come to pass. The time has come to call for an end to the counterproductive manner in which Central Board operates, even though it pretends to be a good thing.

Last night's CB meeting (March 4) was another in a series of long running jokes which I, for one, do not find funny. What President David Curtiss regarded as something fit for Saturday Night Live was supposed to be a meeting of the Central Board of ASUM (The only departmental and interdepartmental representatives of the Associated Students of the University of Montana.) I see no humor at all in the manner in which these Central Board meetings have been conducted. I am also not amused by the Central Board members' ignorance of blatant disregard of the bylaws and constitution under which we are established. Let me try to explain.

Summer budgeting was one of the first items discussed at Wednesday night's meeting. There was obviously lack of communication between the groups requesting funds and the Executive Board, which makes the budget recommendations. A little bit of communication in this matter surely would have saved us all some time. The summer budget is approved now and I say that would change that. I would, however, just like to point out one thing that might interest our friends at the student body. That is that the two groups involved were not aware of the original requests (Leisure Services and Programming) have the greatest expenditure to the student body.

Last night Central Board took it upon themselves to make several special allocations which they did not have the authority to do. The ASUM bylaws indicate (Div. III, Art. 2, Sect. III) "No special allocation shall be submitted and acted upon during the same Central Board meeting." I questioned this action at the meeting and was told that since the rules were suspended (and they were at the time) the board could do what they wanted. I did not accept this, and decided to check it out further. Here's what I found.

Central Board can dispense with the Rules... provided that the proposal is not in conflict with the organizational bylaws...

Robert's Rules of Order, newly revised: 1970 pg. 222 Central Board can talk it all away with the rules suspended, but to approve special allocations is in conflict with the ASUM bylaws and cannot here be done.

Let's take a look at these allocations. The first, for $500.00, went to the Missoula Valley Energy Commission Board. I direct you to the ASUM constitution once again. Article II, Section 3 reads (in so many words) that ASUM may cooperate with independent student groups provided that this cooperation does not impose a financial responsibility on the association, not even sure that the MVECB is a student group much less an independent one. The MVECB may be a student group, and their proposed allocation is not a financial responsibility, but it still remains a questionable allocation.

The second allocation discussed was the expansion of $106.85 to buy plaques in memory of Ed McMillan. One plaque would be sent to Ed's parents and the other would remain here to honor the most outstanding Central Board member of the year. This has got to be a flagrant waste of student activity funds. If there is an outstanding member of the Central Board, it is labeled on a letter of merit. It would be a lot cheaper to produce and better server the member. Besides, it may very well be that the most outstanding member of this Central Board hanged himself in Missoula City Jail.

The final allocation Central Board P.S. Can anything be more the M.Rodeo Club. They requested funds to help advertise an upcoming rodeo. April 4-5. In all fairness, I will admit that I did not like the idea of this allocation. It was, however, the only request of the three that was made by a bona fide student activity. Even at that, Central Board only authorized near one-half the requested amount.

No one had the special allocations and the summer budget been agreed upon when several Central Board members were ready to fly out the door. Well, I got the chance to discuss with the board and although it seemed to go well, great pains, they sat and heard me out. The discussion is unimportant.

I would like to point out that during that one, Central Board member indicated he felt that the majority of the students did not care what Central Board did. In light of the recent election turmoil, this may be true. But DOES NOT diminish Central Board's responsibility to properly represent the students. Central Board and ASUM are the students liaison to the university faculty, administration and the legislators in Helena. It's no wonder that we, the students, often end up at the short end of the stick. I could probably continue this letter but I have accomplished my goal to expose the manner in which Central Board. Central Board does have a few good members who might take offense to this letter in these few, I apologize, but the rest can go piss up a feast.

The words keep resounding in my mind that the students "don't care." DAMN IT I CARE, and intend to around several more years. I only hope that the new Central Board does not fall into the same rut as the old Central Board. I will be watching.

Will the Joint Effort be a toy store?

By JOHN CARSON
Montana Kaimin Contributing Reporter

A bill based on a model drug paraphernalia bill created by the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration is resting in Senate Judiciary Committee in Helena after passing in the House, 40-9.

Only two opposition to the bill exists in the Legislature and it is expected to pass, becoming effective July 1.

Bill Stoianoff, owner of the Joint Effort, a local drug paraphernalia store, joked, in a recent interview, "I won't carry the business and he will have to close."

Stoianoff said that the bill is popular in the Legislature because it is ostensibly an anti-drug bill and that legislators are voting for it in order to be on record as voting against drugs.

Stoianoff said he is not optimistic about stopping the bill, but he expects the law to be discarded on constitutional grounds soon after it is implemented.

Courts in two of the 11 states that have adopted versions of the DEA bill have found the bill unconstitutionally vague and have issued restraining orders to stop its enforcement.

In Pennsylvania, the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals found that similar legislation violated the First and 14th Amendments, Stoianoff said.

The bill is so vague, Stoianoff said, that many household items such as spoons, envelopes, some ashtrays and matchbooks, or books about drugs will become contraband.

"There is no watch body in the Legislature that says they have to pass constitutional laws," Stoianoff said. "They're stuffing this (the bill) down our throats."

Missoula County Attorney Robert "Dusty" Deschamps III said in an interview recently that although the bill is "fundamentally insane," if it is enacted, "we'll have to enforce it."

Some multi-use items covered in the bill will be hard to act on, he said. Deschamps said he expects paraphernalia businesses that don't voluntarily close on July 1 to start court action, probably on constitutional grounds.

Don Mormon, a detective with the Missoula County Sheriff's office, said that although he had not seen a copy of the bill, he welcomes its enactment as "another tool to work with." Mormon said that while he did not think any law was going to stop someone from creating or using drug paraphernalia, taking away the reinforcement of the drug culture young people get by seeing open sale and display was important.

Stoianoff said that 14 of the 17 head shops in Montana are organized into the Montana Free Trade Association, and together, the merchants plan to raise enough money, about $15,000, to challenge the law in court next summer.

Summer could be driest in more than four decades

By RITA MUNZENRIDER
Montana's dry, mild winter could lead to fish kills, brown lawns and damaged hay crops in what experts say may be the driest summer in more than 40 years.

Bill Webber, US Department of Agriculture soil conservationist, said snowpack in most areas of the state is now 70 percent of average. Some areas, such as Lolo Pass, Montana, is above average, he said. Flathead, Lake and Lincoln counties appear to have 90 percent of normal snowpack.

This could be one of the worst droughts since the agriculture department was established about 40 years ago.

Although there was a slight increase in snowpack last month over January, only 50 percent of the normal February snowfall was received. "All of snow is needed immediately to do much good," Hardin said.

But the extended forecast through the end of next week doesn't look too promising. The National Weather Service forecasts unusually warm temperatures with little, if any, precipitation.

Water levels in creeks used for irrigation — Grant, Schwartz, Lolo, Miller and Mill — will drop rapidly the end of July if weather con­ditions continue as they have, Hardin said. Farmers should irrigate only lands with soils that hold moisture most efficiently. Enough water is available for grain crop irrigation, he said.

Winter ice accumulation on streams normally causes weaker fish to die. The mild winter, Knudson said, resulted in a lower fish mortality rate this year. The mortality rate caused by drought conditions will be more dramatic because the stress on the fish is now filled to maximum capacity, he said.

"People should get out and fish early in the season," Knudson said.

With normal spring and summer rainfall, fish populations will not be endangered, Hardin said. But without rain, restrictions for high fire danger forest areas may be im­plemented, Richard Sandman, fire management bureau chief for the Forest Service, said.

Lee Magone, division manager and vice president of Mountain Water Co., said water rationing for outside use is possible if con­ditions are severe. Water was rationed in mid-August of 1974 for about three weeks because the water supply was so low.

But, he said, Mountain Water Co. is in better shape now because it has three more storage wells if needed.

"No one's lawns or trees will die this summer," he said.

A drought in Montana would not have a significant impact on water-powered electricity unless there are drought conditions in the northwest as well. Enel last summer, Milltown Dam operator, said.

Power is brought in from outside the state, particularly from the Columbia River Drainage, he said.

About 1,000 residences get power from Milltown Dam. Residents may be asked to volun­tarily curtail usage in late summer, if conditions are extremely dry, Smith said.

A second year of drought could mean severe problems, Smith said. "This year will be dry, but there will probably be enough power."

Polish labor negotiations fail to stop strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Talks aimed at averting a strike in the textile center of Lodz broke down early today despite the efforts of the government and national leaders of the independent union Solidarity to preserve Poland's fragile democracy.

"Unfortunately, we have a complete deadlock," said Lodz textile workers' leader Jerzy Kropiwnicki, adding that today's one-hour warning strike by some 500,000 workers and 300 employers and enterprises would begin as planned at 10 a.m. (2 a.m. MST).

Kropiwnicki said he hoped "talking points" could still be found in talks with Solidarity's national leaders, but will make it impossible to turn back our plans for a subsequent province-wide general strike beginning in stages Thursday.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa had been optimistic yesterday the strike over the firing last month of five hospital employees, four of them Solidarity organizers, could be averted following his talks with Deputy Premier Maczyslaw Rakowski. The three-hour meeting here produced an agreement in principle last week in Lodz, a strike alert in Radom, and other divisions.

But despite an agreement to reinstate the workers in Lodz, Poland's second-largest city, talks between local union leaders and government officials collapsed when Walesa was refused to accept an agreement allowing Solidarity to continue organizing at the national hospital run by the Interior Ministry, Kropiwnicki said.

He said police officials also refused to allow workers to react to between Solidarity's leadership and the management.

Unions officials have said workers will begin new sit-ins at factories and enterprises every other day until their demands are met or the province is paralyzed.

"The warning strike will affect all plants and factories with Solidarity chapters, Kropiwnicki said, but will be a violent clash between the service and the police. Walesa said the strike is important to students. Stevens said the strike is a political decision to support it and that the thousands of workers from library funds.

"The service is a low priority for the library," he said. "We haven't received appropriation money from the university system for the service and we're not going to stick out our necks on a special service when we're in the red for our usual services."

Kropiwnicki said the 24-hour service was for his students but wasn't essential compared to the normal library service. He said it was an extension service for students who needed a study hall and made the library a facility for students to use whenever they wanted it.

He said he would try to get an agreement from the university system for future funding of the service.

Fall Quarter the service was not offered because the library couldn't afford it and MLAC refused to fund it. The library tried to get ASUM funding but turned in its request too late, according to Central Board member Carrie Bender.

Bender said the request was given to ASUM President David Curtis but was not taken before the budget-review committee because it was too late in the quarter and there was not enough time to process it. She said she tried to find another group to fund it in the future and told Oelz MLAC would be a possible source.

Oelz said he assumed MLAC was going to fund the service this quarter. But Stevens said it was a wrong assumption.

"I have never even talked to Bender," he said. "It's silly to presume I would fund the service when Oelz never talked to me about it. He just started calling me asking when the library would get the money."

"One of the reasons I funded it was to get the library off my back. It is incredible they can't fund it themselves. They are blaming their own budgeting problems on student organizations like ASUM and MLAC. They are passing the buck."

John Smith, a newly elected CB member who has talked to Stevens about the funding problem, and would like to see the university fund the service, ASUM might consider splitting the cost with the university, he said, but he wasn't sure.

Oelz said he did not care where the money comes from, adding that $225 wasn't much money and could be found somewhere.

Spring may find students gardening

By BONNIE YAHVAH
Garden plots near Dornblaser Field may be available to students this spring, Mike Copeland, member of the ASUM Student Garden Committee, said last week. If University of Montana President Richard Bowers approves the plan, the Garden Committee will first try to get money from ASUM, Copeland said.

Copeland said if ASUM can not provide all the money needed for the project, then the committee will try to get money from other sources such as the Associated Students Reserve Book fund.

But first, ASUM and the university must agree on a contract regarding future development of the land. Bowers must approve the proposal, and money for the $13,272 project must be obtained, Copeland said.

If the proposal is approved, the one-and-a-half acre garden would be developed in the south end of the parking lot near Dornblaser Field, Copeland said.

The garden would have 186 lots, and most would be 18 feet by 21 feet, Copeland said.

A lot this size would be large enough to yield sufficient vegetables for a family, Copeland said.

Students who attend UM Spring Quarter would be eligible for a garden plot and rent for the season would be $15, Copeland said.

The fee is to pay for water and the use of a trash dumpster, Copeland said.

The Soil Conservation Service has tested the soil at the proposed garden site and found it suitable for vegetable growth if fertilizer is used, Joe Wang, soil conservation technician, said.

Wang said there is gravel mixed with the surface soil that would need to be raked out of the garden plots.

Students would be responsible for providing their own fertilizer, and the garden committee has proposed that organic rather than chemical fertilizers be used.

The greatest expense of the project is providing water access to the area, Copeland said.

A 1,080-foot waterline, estimated at $9,318, would have to be connected to the city water hook-up on South Avenue to provide water to the gardens, Copeland said.

The committee also proposed a $3,267 irrigation system for the garden. The system has been developed by the SCS and has a life expectancy of 30 to 40 years, Copeland said.

The system would include three waterlines spanning close to the length of the garden, Copeland said.

Spigots would be located every 30 feet on the waterline, and students would provide their own hose and sprinkler for watering their garden, Copeland said.

Other expenses for the project include $1,620 for a four-foot fence, which would separate the garden from the parking lot, and $87 for miscellaneous items such as stakes and string.

The contract will also specify how students would be reimbursed for improvements they may make to the garden from the parking lot, Copeland said.

A $90-per-day rental fee for a tractor and plow is an additional expected expense, Copeland said.

If money cannot be secured this year, the garden may be developed over two or three years as funds are obtained, Copeland said.

The Campus Development Committee has recommended approval of the project, provided UM and ASUM can agree on a contract regarding future development of the land, Hayes said.

A contract should be ready for examination in a few weeks and, as yet terms of the contract are not known, Copeland said.

ASUM President David Curtis said he thinks the Garden Committee has done "an outstanding job" preparing the proposal because they have thoroughly researched the project.

Curtis said he thinks there may be a good possibility of the committee getting money because it is a practical project which would benefit many students.

The regular season is over for University of Montana basketball, and the playoffs are about to begin. But despite the records produced this season, it appears that only one of the UM squads will be involved in any post-season activity.

The Lady Grizzlies, who ended their 21-7 season on a high note by surging back against interstate rival Montana State University Saturday to win in overtime, 80-70, are in.

The men's team, survivors of a rugged battle in the Big Sky Conference and runners-up in the championship series last weekend, probably are not.

The Lady Griz finished atop the Mountain Division of the Northwest Women's Basketball League with a 9-3 league mark and the right to host the league championships this weekend. Just who the Lady Griz will play in the first round of the tournament will be determined tonight by wild card playoff games. So far, Oregon is the only other automatic seed in the four-team tourney.

U.S. advisers arrive in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran army rushed reinforcements yesterday to Suchitoto, a small town 27 miles north of the capital where fighting was reported between leftist guerrillas and soldiers, an army source said. About 20 U.S. military advisers, promised by the Reagan administration to help the governing junta in its fight against the guerrillas, arrived in San Salvador over the weekend, according to reliable sources who asked not to be identified.

That brought the number of U.S. military advisers in this Central American country to about 50, the sources said. They are on non-combat missions, limited only to training and maintenance. President Reagan announced increased aid in support of the embattled, civilian-military junta after U.S. intelligence reports said the leftists were being armed by the Soviet Union via Cuba and Nicaragua.

An army source, who asked anonymity, said Salvadoran troop reinforcements were sent from the army's 1st Infantry Brigade, headquartered in San Salvador, "with the purpose of annihilating some centers of insurrection in the area north of the capital. No details were available.

Travelers from the countryside reported sharp firesights since Thursday between army patrols and guerrillas in Suchitoto, the nearby city of San Lorenzo and the northeastern town of Arcatao, near the Honduran border.

Rule would relax air laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration proposed marked changes yesterday in the enforcement of the nation's clean air laws, saying they are needed to eliminate red tape. But many environmentalists argued the changes would condemn urban areas to more years of unhealthful pollution. They promised to fight the new regulation being proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The new rule would relax current requirements governing plant expansion in areas of the country primarily cities — which are not meeting federal health standards for air quality.

Under the old regulations, any plant in such areas had to use the "best available technology" on new pollution sources when replacing old equipment or expanding.

Under the rule change proposed by the administration, however, such plants would only have to ensure that their overall pollution emissions did not increase with the plant modifications.

Teacher suspended for harassment

GENESEO, N.Y. — Administrators of the State University of New York at Geneseo have suspended a sociology professor for one month after an article in a liberal newspaper said the professor was guilty of sexually harassing one of his students.

According to the arbitrator, Professor Vakahn Dadrian came into "improper physical contact" last year with a student when Dadrian tried to hug and kiss her in his office, and was "acting in an unprofessional manner" when he asked about the woman's sex life. The woman, only one of four who charged Dadrian with sexual harassment, also claimed the professor later "physically detain­ed" her by pulling her by the arm in a hallway, and backing her into a corner.

In a 15-page report delivered the last week of January, the arbitrator reprimanded Dadrian for "poor judgment" and "impulsiveness." The report said the suspension was appropriate because Dadrian is from Turkey, and may therefore not have realized that physical contact is considered inappropriate in certain circumstances, especially in a "rural" area like Geneseo.

Neither Dadrian nor the arbitrator could be reached for comment by College Press Service, but Ronald Sayre, dean of the college's representative in the case as well as its vice president for student services, told the student newspaper that he also felt the sentence was justified.

"In light of the charges that he was found guilty of," Satryb told the Geneseo Lamron, "it was a fair decision." But one of the students, whose charges against Dadrian were dismissed, called the decision "unjust" and the punishment "too easy."

"I don't think he should be allowed to teach," she told the Lamron.

Some Geneseo students didn't wait for the decision to act against Dadrian. During registration last November, female students pickedet and urged women not to sign up for Dadrian's classes. "Don't Do It.

Nevertheless, all those Dadrian-taught classes, including one called Sociology of Deviance, were filled, and will be taught by another sociology professor for the duration of Dadrian's suspension.

Weather or Not

"Here we are at the Missoula County Library, "Chris said in a rare piece of expository dialogue. "We have no idea what the weather matches which's been infiltrating our daily lives."

For several hours the people poured over almanacs and newspapers searching for the proper weather patterns. Chris and Lisa arrived at the library a few minutes later from a copy of the Montana Kaimin and shouts. "Chris, look at that!" Chris got them thrown out of the library. "Read this," Lisa said on the steps outside.

"Read this," Lisa said on the steps outside. Chris read: "Sunny and a little warmer, with highs of 92 and a low of 25."

Chris turned to Lisa. "We've got to go to UM to find out who's responsible!"

Want to cut your registration time in half?

Why not take advantage of PRE-QUARTER ADVISING? There are about 4,000 students on campus who will be required to meet with an Advisor before sectioning into classes during Spring Registration, March 30th and 31st. All those who are identified as freshmen, sophomores, and transfer students have three asterisks ( ) printed on their registration forms. If you entered the University anytime beginning Autumn Quarter, 1979, you must show an Advisor stamp to enter the Fieldhouse.

But—save yourself the hassle of looking for your Advisor half an hour before you are due to register in order to meet with your Advisor before March 20th and be PRE-QUARTER ADVISED! Pick up your copy of the "Spring Schedule of Classes" available now in the Lodge at Registrar's windows. Take the "Schedule" with you when you meet with your Advisor. At the conclusion of the meeting, have your Advisor stamp the worksheet in the "Spring Schedule."

The stamped registration form will take that worksheet along with your registration form to the Fieldhouse. The stamped worksheet will serve to admit you to the sectioning tables without also having to have a stamp on your registration form.

DECLARED MAJORS: Call and make an appointment with your departmental Advisor before March 20th. If you have forgotten who your Advisor is, call your department chair and ask (see campus directory).

GENERAL STUDIES (EXPLORATORY) MAJORS: If you have been assigned to a General Advisor during this academic school year and cannot recall your Advisor's name, look for your own name on the list that was printed in the Friday, March 6th, edition of the "Kaimin" (copies of this list are posted on bulletin boards all over campus). Across from your name will be that of your Advisor. Call him or her and arrange to meet before March 20th. Don't forget to take your "Spring Schedule of Classes" with you and have your worksheet stamped before you go!

If you have questions about this process (or if you can't find your name on the list), call Kitty Corak, Academic Advising Coordinator, 243-2835.
