MISSOULA--

An opportunity to improve your French the way French children do--speaking the language every day to everyone--is opening up at the University of Montana. Persons who qualify may get applications for the 10th annual fall-quarter trip to Burgundy, France, from the French section of the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures.

The primary qualification is knowledge of the French language equivalent to five college quarters of study.

Participants in the program will live with a family in the wine-growing region near Beaune where they will study and work during the annual grape harvest. Opportunities for travel and class events also are included in the program. UM credits may be earned by correspondence prior to the trip and by study in France.

According to trip leader Philip H. Lutes, associate professor of French at UM, the program is limited to 16 participants this year. Selection will be on a competitive basis.

Deadline for applications is March 3. They may be obtained in the UM foreign languages department, Room 313 of the UM Liberal Arts Building. For more information, call the department at 243-2401 or Lutes at 243-2002.
