Cote, McRae-Zook win ASUM primary

Frank Cote, and Marquette McRae-Zook won the primary election yesterday for the ASUM presidency. The primaries brought out 1,331 voters, or about 15 percent of the student body.

The ASUM presidential election will be March 10.

McRae-Zook and her running mate, John Doty, pulled in 446 votes, or 33.5 percent.

Cote and Carla Smith, his running mate, received 433 votes, or 32.5 percent.

Tom Hartman and his running mate Kerin Branine garnered 296 votes and Greg Anderson and his partner Thomas Jahr received 96 votes.

There were 60 write-in tallies.

Tomorrow a debate between McRae-Zook and Cote will take place at noon in the University Center Montana Rooms. The debate is sponsored by the University of Montana Alpha Lambda Delta, a freshman honorary organization, and ASUM Programming.

CB revises bylaws of Publications Board

By Sam Richards
Kaimin Reporter

Central Board voted last night to revise bylaws for the ASUM Publications Board, which in effect restructures the board's makeup.

CB also voted to send a resolution to University of Montana President Neil Bucklew requesting the university not to use the herbicide 2,4-D on University of Montana property except on the UM golf course, and that the golf course be posted with warning signs saying when spraying is done.

Jim Weinberg, senior in education and former director of the Student Action Center, said the restructuring was to "better the relationship between ASUM and the Montana Kaimin."

He said the changes also clarify

ASUM's position in matters of liability for legal problems the Kaimin might run into and answers problems inherent for several years in the ASUM-Kaimin relationship.

The board has been increased from five to 10 members, including a chairperson, two CB members, the Kaimin editor and business manager, five students unaffiliated with either ASUM or the Kaimin and a faculty adviser. CB delegates Jim Brennan, junior in social work, and Tom Hartman, junior in philosophy, volunteered for the board, and CB voted John Wicks, economics professor and CB faculty adviser, as the board's adviser.

Three more bylaw changes, dealing with Kaimin editorial policy, a Kaimin faculty adviser, and board function, will be discussed at next week's meeting.

CB delegate Marquette McRae-Zook, sophomore in communications, said any vote on the Publications Board should be held until next week because the changes contained too much material to absorb in the 15 minutes that the board had to read it. But Wicks recommended voting last night, saying the changes were "one of the strongest contributions any CB could make (to UM) within the next several years."

The letter to Bucklew concerning 2,4-D, written yesterday, originally requested that UM stop use of 2,4-D on all university grounds until its health effects are better determined but was changed to include other herbicides with similar chemical components and to say 2,4-D could be used on the UM golf course.

"If the course isn't well-groomed, we aren't going to have a course very long," said Howard Johnson, golf course manager. He said if the course isn't kept weed-free, people won't use it.

"It's the safest chemical on the market right now," he said.

He also said if other chemicals were used, environmental effects could be even worse, and that 2,4-D was the cheapest way to remove broad-leaved weeds, including dandelions.

"UM has a lot (of 2,4-D) in stock. We probably have enough to do this year's spraying," he said.

CB delegate John Smith, senior in economics and philosophy, asked that arguments presented against 2,4-D's use be taken to professors for more opinions because those arguments were "too political and not objective." He also suggested a compromise in 2,4-D use on the golf course, provided warning signs are placed at golf course entrances.

CB delegate Ken Derner questioned the entire resolution, saying if UM didn't use 2,4-D it would use something else, and delegate Kent Spence said no chemical should be used at UM unless it's proven safe.

"Chemicals should be guilty until proven innocent," Spence said.

Court upholds Illinois paraphernalia regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Communities trying to curb illegal drug use won Supreme Court permission yesterday to regulate the sale of drug paraphernalia at so-called "head shops."

But the unanimous decision appeared to leave unresolved whether the courts will allow an outright ban of such businesses.

The justices resurrected a Hoffman Estates, Ill., ordinance that requires such shops to obtain licenses for selling items "designed or marketed for use with" illegal drugs, such as marijuana or cocaine.

A federal appeals court had ruled that the ordinance was unconstitutionally vague. The Supreme Court disagreed.

"Many American communities have recently enacted laws regulating or prohibiting the sale of drug paraphernalia... We hold only that such legislation is not facially overbroad or vague if it does not reach constitutionally protected conduct and is reasonably clear in its application," Justice Thurgood Marshall wrote for the court.

Whether Marshall's mention of laws "prohibiting" such sales is a hint as to how the court would view a total ban likely will be the subject of future legal fights.

MontPIRG will try again for waiveable fee system

By Renata Birkenbuel
Kaimin Reporter

Twelve to 13 University of Montana students will attend the Board of Regents meeting tomorrow in Helena in an effort to convince the regents that the Montana Public Interest Research Group cannot survive under the positive check-off funding system.

In December the regents rejected MontPIRG's proposal for a waiveable fee funding system and instead voted to allow the university to set up a positive check-off system.

A positive check-off system is a system in which a student who wishes to donate $2 to MontPIRG must mark a check in a box on the registration form during registration each quarter.

Under the waiveable fee system, the $2 fee is waiveable once during registration, similar to how the Blue Cross/Blue Shield fee is administered. The fee also can be refunded any time after the first three weeks of the quarter. The latter is an outlet for the student that disagrees with issues MontPIRG may be dealing with that quarter.

About 25 students have worked the past year to get MontPIRG funded, according to Tanya Holonko, senior in biology, and Bob Anderson, senior in zoology.

Students attending the regents meeting will discuss the disadvantages of the positive check-off system through a description of how other PIRGs in the United States are funded. There are 94 PIRG chapters nationwide.

No PIRG has been successfully started under the positive check-off system, according to Holonko and Anderson. It has been attempted in Montana, New Hampshire, Georgia and Utah.

"We've never considered the positive check-off system to be a feasible system," Anderson said.

He said MontPIRG wants to remind the regents that students tried to get MontPIRG off the ground in 1972 but it was "doomed from the start because it didn't have a good funding system." The positive check-off system was used at that time.

Anderson said the regents will not vote on the funding system, but will listen to the students' presentation. He said that he hoped the regents would vote on the proposal at their April meeting.

Surveys, open forums and "gripe tables" are ways MontPIRG would learn which issues students are most interested in.

Projects may include anything from writing a tenants' rights manual and drawing up a list of available social services to offering a guide to using small claims courts.

Energy, environmental, consumer and social issues may concern MontPIRG.

Other PIRGs have been successful. The New York PIRG authored and successfully lobbied for that state's Truth-in-Testing bill. The bill removes what the PIRG called unfair

Duke's lecture fee went to NAAWP

By Kyle Albert
Kaimin Reporter

The conviction of Wayne Williams Saturday in the Atlanta murders was predicted in part by David Duke, president of the National Association for the Advancement of White People (NAAWP) and former national director of the Ku Klux Klan in 1979-80.

Duke said that last year he severed his ties with the Klan. In a telephone interview Tuesday Duke said he was "the only major spokesman of any national group to predict the killer to be a black." He made this prediction in a speech at the University of Montana during Winter Quarter last year.

Many UM students protested Duke's speech and heckled him during the question-and-answer period. One person asked Duke to use the $1,400 fee he received for the lecture as a reward for information leading to the conviction of the Atlanta killer, and Duke agreed to do so.

Several groups and individuals put up large rewards for the killer's capture, but none have been paid because three Atlanta police captured Williams, an Atlanta Police spokesman said.

Duke said the $1,400 is back in the coffers of the NAAWP.

Supreme Court curbing freedoms

Yesterday the U.S. Supreme Court approved the constitutionality of a drug-paraphernalia law in Illinois.

A city ordinance passed by Hoffman Estates, Ill., requires shops that sell paraphernalia to buy a sales license for $150 and to keep a log of purchasers' names. The case was appealed by Flipside Records, Inc., which sold paraphernalia. It challenged the ordinance claiming it was too broad and did not sufficiently define what was legal and what was not.

The Supreme Court apparently felt differently. The justices ruled that the ordinance was not too sweeping. One justice said that the court could not decide whether the law was "wise or effective," only whether it was too vague.

The court takes another step. "The village may adopt administrative regulations that will sufficiently narrow potentially vague or arbitrary interpretations of the ordinance," said Justice Thurgood Marshall.

Thirty states and hundreds of local governments have passed legislation attempting to curb drug abuse by curbing the sale of drug paraphernalia, Montana included. The Supreme Court has granted local governments the authority to "narrow" the interpretations of the law at a time when many local governments are seeking to ban possession or sale of all paraphernalia. The implications are chilling.

Kevin Zeesa, the executive director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, surprisingly is undaunted.

"Today's decision is not of much importance," he said. "It does not close down head shops, it merely regulates them."

But the regulation defies free and open trade.

Consumers demand a product of the market. The market responds. Many items, including guns, are sold and used for illegal purposes. The businesses that sell such items cannot be held responsible for the illegal activity. The same principle should stand for drug paraphernalia.

Missoula's Joint Effort, which sells drug paraphernalia, is appealing its case to the 9th District Circuit Court in California. While yesterday's Supreme Court decision does not affect the Joint Effort's case, it still could have dangerous repercussions. A precedent, that of cracking down on the concept of selling drug paraphernalia, has won a preliminary victory.

The mood of the court is shifting, and subtle signs of oppression are becoming visible. The United States, a nation of freedoms, is loosening its grasp of the freedoms for which it stands.

Letter of law is not enough

Editor: I heartily agree with your editorial dated 2 March, 1982. As a member of the Publications Board I was shocked when I learned that the board had selected a new editor. As you can probably guess, I wasn't there to share in the decision, nor was I informed that there would be a meeting.

At an earlier meeting, the members of the board had discussed the procedure we should follow in selecting a new editor. At this time, there was a consensus that, in the case there was only one candidate for the job, we would extend the deadline for the applications. We did feel that there were several candidates who were thinking of applying, but had not as yet. Because the board is small, we run things very informally, and took no formal vote. Carlos Pedraza, the acting chairman, said he would check the applications and extend the deadline if no more applications were received. On the date of the deadline, I called the Kaimin offices and found only one application in. I therefore assumed no selection meeting would be held, and the deadline would be extended.

After learning that a new editor had been selected, I called a fellow board member and asked what had happened the night before. He had not been at the meeting either, but had received a call from Mr. Pedraza stating that no new applications had been received, and that the selection process should continue. Mr. Pedraza also stated that, in his view, the Kaimin staff felt the only application to be the best choice. My fellow board member was sick at the time and was unable to attend the meeting.

The Publications Board did not step outside of its guidelines and bylaws, it is true. But to strictly follow the letter of the law is not the same as following the intention and spirit of the law. There should have been an extension of the deadline, even if it meant throwing the staff changeover off schedule. There should have been a meeting with the present editor to have her help in the selection process. And above all, there should have been adequate notification and advertisement so the student body could also have their say.

This trend of meticulously staying within the letter of the law while still contorting it is one which is happening all over the student government. Be wary of this in the future, and especially keep it in mind during the upcoming elections.

Jeffrey Cramer
senior, computer science

P.S. This letter is in no way meant to be critical of Brian Rygg, the new editor, but only on the selection process used.

Kaiminism

Editor: All right! I'm sorry David Stevens, but it is about time someone has put the Kaimin out of its misery (even if it is only for the summer). I realize this means that you people will have to get real jobs.

No offense, but if the paper came out once a week as Stephanie mentioned, the student body would be a lot better off. Just think this would give the reporters (?) a chance to print something interesting.

As you may already know it is terribly exciting to open the Kaimin and find numerous ads and fewer articles. I have found at times the ads to be right up there with the main articles as far as the level of interest goes.

We do have to keep in mind that the UM is no Penn State, but come on surely you can dig up something interesting to write about besides the usually boring literature you now present to us four days a week. Let me ask you this: what are you going to do when this mud-slinging election is over? Continue to report what Swagerty and Anderson do when the lights go out?

This Kaiminism must be put to a stop! Why not try something new like reporting what is going on around campus. Surely some of you have had some journalism, before joining this so-called paper? If this is true (that you have had some experience in reporting) why not prove it, by showing us what you can do! If all else fails and if the toilet paper shortage does take effect here in Montana we will still have the ever faithful Kaimin to replace the old Sears catalogs.

Thanks I needed that

public forum

Editor: A response from the Iranian Moslem Students of the University of Montana to the Kaimin report of a speech concerning Iran-Iraq war.

The Real Reason behind the attack of the Bathist Regime of Iraq to the Islamic Republic of Iran.

"America in a total way is out to change the direction of the Islamic Revolution of Iran and in order to do this, we must give complete support to Iraq." Brzezinski, the security adviser of Carter.

After the victory of the Islamic Revolution of Iran and crushing the Shah's puppet regime, Iran fell into a confrontation with the U.S. government for it was the U.S. which had drawn Iran to colonialism and had supported the Shah's regime. The people of Iran expelled American experts and cut off all dependent relations with the U.S.; they prevented the sale of oil to Israel and South Africa and their embassies were closed. The U.S. tried to direct the path of the revolution by using westernized elements in Iran. Faced with a partial defeat in this attempt after the take over of the American Espionage center in Tehran, several large-scale coup d'etats were engineered by the CIA in order to topple the Islamic Republic. Economic sanctions were placed against Iran and the direct invasion of the country was done in Tabas. After the miraculous defeat of all these satanic plots, the U.S. government persuaded Saddam to attack Iran, as a part of the vain moves to destroy the Islamic Revolution.

Mindful of becoming the "head puppet" of the great satan in the area and replacing the traitor Shah, and frightened of the flow of the glorious Islamic Revolution into Iraq and his inevitable annihilation by the Moslem people, and with the belief that he could destroy the Islamic Republic forces in a matter of days, Saddam Hussein invaded Iran to show his animosity to the Moslem people as well as servitude to his masters. The bloodthirsty regime of Saddam Hussein as part of massive conspiracy against the Islamic Revolution attacked Iranian cities and airports on Sept. 22, 1980, claiming that Iran had not agreed to Iraqi demands for amending the 1975 "Algiers Pact" concerning the Iran-Iraq border.

This gave Saddam reason enough to attack Iran and kill innocent civilians. The Iraqi propaganda machine has since claimed that Iran had violated the terms of the agreement, whereas all documents prove that the action of Saddam's Regime and his aggression against the Islamic Republic of Iran was — and still is — in violation of the 1975 pact as well as the principle of pacta sunt servanda which is one of the bases of international law. Also, since the invasion Saddam's mercenaries have systematically bombarded residential areas, hospitals, and schools, killing thousands of innocent people and forcing hundreds of thousands out of their homes.

The flow of the American-made weapons to Iraq is increasing considerably. The corrupt rulers of Arabia, Jordan and Egypt have sent mercenaries to help Saddam's aggression against Iran. The Soviet Union on the other hand, has continued to sell Saddam sophisticated weapons, using the Jordanian port of Aqaba, which is adjacent to Israel. The Zionist entity, having the ability to blockade Aqaba in order to stop this shipment, did not even verbally protest the flow of Soviet arms to its so-called "staunchest enemy," Saddam Hussein. This example of cooperation between the Soviet Union, the United States and its agents show their satanic determination to destroy the Islamic revolution.

Despite all these attempts, and despite all the alliances against the Islamic Republic formed by all satanic forces from both inside and outside Iran, the heroic people of Iran, with their faith in the help of God and belief in the principle of Martyrdom, have fought bravely against the mercenaries of Saddam, as they did against the Shah, and have inflicted heavy damages on the well-financed forces of aggression.

Pharmacy school likely to be reaccredited

By Steve Dodrill
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

University of Montana President Neil Bucklew has revealed that a preliminary report on the reaccreditation of UM's School of Pharmacy is positive, and the school should receive final word on its reaccreditation in June.

A site team from the American Council of Pharmaceutical Education visited the pharmacy school last October, observing the programs offered, faculty, facilities and resources available to pharmacy students. The council visits the school every six years to consider it for reaccreditation.

The preliminary report recently was sent to Bucklew and Philip Catalfomo, pharmacy school dean, with the council's recommendations.

Although the report is confidential and Bucklew could not comment on specific details, he said that the council wants more information on four areas.

The council was pleased with the new building, Bucklew said, but wanted additional information on UM's plans to upgrade a lab in the old Pharmacy Building. The council also wanted to know more about the pharmacy school's faculty development program, he said.

Next, the council wanted to know how the university will face upcoming federal grant cutbacks, Bucklew said. Many universities with schools in health fields such as pharmacy, nursing and medicine have been receiving grants that will be eliminated, he said.

Finally, the council wants more information on the school's courses, Bucklew said. The pharmacy school's clerkship program and its commitment to general education requirements also were discussed in one section of the report, he said.

Bucklew said he isn't surprised that the council is interested in those areas and seemed pleased with the report. "With the new facility, I'm confident that we'll continue to be a strong and accredited program," he said.

Catalfomo said it is important that the pharmacy school be reaccredited so UM's program is considered a quality one.

Students to roll keg for muscular dystrophy

By Dan Carter
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

Spring break at the University of Montana for a lot of students means fun in the sun away from the school atmosphere, with emphasis on more leisurely springtime activities.

But for 12 people from Missoula, Bozeman and Billings, spring break this year will mean spending about five days pushing a 16-gallon keg down I-90 from Missoula to Billings.

These 12 people aren't pranksters who want to roll the 16-gallon barrel of suds 340 miles just to get on Real People. They are going to roll the keg for muscular dystrophy.

Mike Kato, a sophomore in computer science at UM and the local MD chapter president, said he and some friends decided that instead of "partying all break, to party for a good cause."

Kato said the dozen people who volunteered their time to help with the roll will contact bars and businesses in Missoula looking for sponsors. He said that sponsorships would be a good way for the businesses to get free advertising and donate money for a good cause at the same time.

According to Kato, the 16-gallon keg will be mounted on a platform with wheels, and it will start its way east down Interstate 90 on March 19. He said he thinks the 340-mile trip will take the group about five days to complete.

The state chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association supports the fund raiser, Kato said, and the money raised from the keg roll through the sponsors will be distributed statewide through the MD organizations.

THE WORLD

• At Yamit, a settlement in Israeli-occupied Sinai, Israeli troops axed down doors of shacks before dawn yesterday and dragged off about 60 squatters resisting Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai. It was the government's first physical move against hard-core opponents of withdrawal.

• Syrian President Hafez Assad met yesterday with U.S. presidential envoy Philip Habib despite vociferous attacks by the official Syrian media on Habib's mission. He arrived Tuesday from Israel on his fifth mission to the Middle East since last May and is trying to consolidate the July 24 cease-fire in southern Lebanon between Palestinian guerrillas and Israel.

THE NATION

• The Washington House has decided that a revamped state Energy Facility Site Evaluation Council (EFSEC) could once again consider the proposed Northern Tier pipeline. During a two-hour floor debate Tuesday, the House rejected an amendment that would have barred EFSEC from reconsidering the pipeline.

• The FBI says an airman packed a "real bomb" in his wife's luggage that passed undetected through two airports as she flew back to a Texas base where she is an Air Force staff sergeant. The bomb did not explode, and an FBI agent said, "There's a lot of lucky people out there, that's all I can say."

MONTANA

• Fifteen renewable energy projects in Montana have been awarded grants from the state Department of Natural Resources and Conservation. The DNRC received 131 proposals. Among the projects awarded grants are solar heating systems for the Missoula Senior Citizens Center and the Park City School and a two-day conference in Kalispell for farmers and ranchers interested in producing fuel-quality methane from cattle manure.

• Israel's consul general for the U.S. Pacific Northwest, Mordechai Artzieli, paid a courtesy call on Gov. Ted Schwinden yesterday. Artzieli, though not directly soliciting support, warned about escalation of the arms race in the Middle East and outlined Israel's strategic importance to the international balance of power in that region.

practices discovered in the standardized testing industry and made the industry accountable to its consumers.

The Ohio PIRG lobbied for generic drug legislation and saved Ohio consumers' money spent on prescription drugs, according to a PIRG flyer.

The waiveable fee system is supported by UM President Neil Bucklew, according to Holonko. The following also have shown their support for MontPIRG:

- 3,750 students who signed petitions last spring in favor of MontPIRG.

- ASUM/Central Board
- the Faculty Senate
- Missoula City Council
- Gov. Ted Schwinden

much importance," said Kevin Zeese, executive director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws. "It does not close down head shops, it merely regulates them."

Nevertheless, the decision stands as an important, if preliminary, victory for communities seeking total bans of head shops. If the court had ruled against the Hoffman Estates ordinance, more stringent measures would have been in legal jeopardy.

Hoffman Estates, a Chicago suburb, adopted its drug-paraphernalia ordinance in 1978. It requires that the shop owners obtain a license, priced at $150, and make all sales records — including the names and addresses of customers — available for police inspection. McCarthy said 5 cents for each case of beer sold will be given to the program and asked that students help out buying more beer this month.

under 18 is banned.

Before such laws began to proliferate in recent years, retail sales at head shops nationwide were estimated at $2 billion each year.

The Hoffman Estates ordinance was challenged by Flipside Records Inc., owner of a store that sold about 70 items that might be subject to drug-paraphernalia regulation.
