One Marine killed in Beirut as cluster bomb explodes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - An unexploded part of a cluster bomb blew up at Beirut airport yesterday, killing one U.S. Marine and wounding three others who tripped it, U.S. military spokesman said.

The casualties were reported after several hundred Marines were ordered to help guard the field just reopened by President Amin Gemayel. One of the survivors was in serious condition with one leg amputated and the other two were slightly wounded, the spokesman said.

The casualties were the first suffered by the Marines since they deployed in Beirut this summer to help oversee the evacuation of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from the Israeli-occupied city. The Marines returned Wednesday on their second peacekeeping mission.

The Pentagon in Washington identified the dead Marine as Cpl. David L. Reagan, 21, of Chesapeake, Va., no relation to the president. A spokesman said the wounded were Pfc. Leslie R. Morris, 18, of Paducah, Ky.; Cpl. Anthony D. Moran, 21, of Macon, Ga.; and Lance Cpl. George Washington, 19, of Elgin, Ill. They were the first casualties among the Marines, who had been deployed in Beirut earlier this summer to help oversee the evacuation of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from the Israeli-occupied city. The Marines returned Wednesday on their second peacekeeping mission.

President Reagan reacted with "shock and sorrow," but said the casualties would have no effect on the U.S. commitment to remain in Lebanon until Israeli and Syrian troops are out and the government is in control. While White House Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said in Washington.

"A lot of students are being inconvenienced this year," Mullen said.

"We are manufactured by McNeil Consumer Products Co.," a spokesman for McNeil Consumer Products Co., the manufacturer of Tylenol, said. "We have been notified of possible cyanide poisoning but coroner's office that two bottles of Extra-Strength Tylenol were tampered with and cyanide poison was added to some of the capsules."

"There is no evidence that the company had been sent to the Pennsylvania plant where Tylenol is made. "We had been sent to the Pennsylvania plant where Tylenol is made."

"We have been notified of possible cyanide poisoning but coroner's office that two bottles of Extra-Strength Tylenol were tampered with and cyanide poison was added to some of the capsules."

"In a statement, Kniffen said no product from lot MC2880 should be handled until further notice, adding that the company has no evidence that any other product was tampered with.

Exercise the privilege

Today Monday.
These two days are your last opportunity to vote in the Nov. 3 election.
The right, the duty—vote, the privilege of voting is all too often ignored by U.S. citizens. Young adults, particularly, have a special responsibility for registering and voting, even though 18-year-olds achieved the sugar junket just over a decade ago.

Kaimin editorial

In last year's election, a grand total of 56 people voted in Precinct 52, which comprises the University of Montana campus. The tradition of a poor voter turn-out in the campus district reflects, whether rightly or not, poorly upon the rest of the UM students.

Registering to vote does not require a great deal of time. Just stop at the table set up today in the Lodge on your way to or from lunch or dinner, or go to the table being staffed in the University Center from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. today and Monday.
The right to vote was finally granted to 18-year-olds in large part due to the efforts of 18- and 17-year-olds who were old enough to be drafted and fight in Vietnam then were old enough to vote.
Young adults are once again old enough to have registered for the draft or be sent for prison for refusing to vote.
The vote is one of the precious methods by which we can mold our government; don't find yourself unable to exercise it by neglecting to register now.

The Innocent Bystander

Save my daughter

by Arthur Hoppe

I knew it! My daughter, Malphasia, the apple of my eye, came down to the kitchen the morning and she was no longer wearing the cardigan, plaid skirt and saddle shoes she had donned with the election of our wonderful president, Ronnie Reagan.
No, she was encased in a tuber-like, a minionskirt and strapless (!) sandals.
"Mom, I finally did it," she said, with a snort, snapping her chewing gum.
Immediately, I realized the cause of this hideous transformation of one of my only and female child. "You read that this hideous transformation of my one and only female child. "You read that..."
I tried to comfort her, but she pulled away. As he so courageously said in 2—Montana Kaimin •
"So O.K.,” she said, counting on her fingers, "I'll only be immoral for the next nine minutes. I always wondered how I'd look in a two-piece bathing suit.
"Gross." You can't make this stuff up but a bird in some blackguard's gilded cage.
"In only nine months?" she said hopefully, "Absolutely!"
Just then her brother, Monted, ambled from the garage. His crew-cut hair had grown a foot and his chiseled jaw had receded an inch overnight! A Cubit dangled from his once manly neck.
"Yeah, man, I heard it on the 11 o'clock news," he said. "So quicky job helping old ladies across the street and spent the night in Ruby's Roadhouse drinking Thunderbird-and-Coca-Colas..."
"Leave the house at once, you serpent's teeth!" I ordered him. "For the very sight of you would kill your sanctified mother.
"So I'm writing our great president, Ronnie Reagan, begging him to call a special session of Congress im­mediately to restore our nation's morality. Who knows what could happen in nine months? Why, Malphasia could even get..."
In fact, the only thing I see that could prevent it is an act of Congress.

The law fails to define what it means by "impracticable," and this combined with the emergency right for the landlord gives the tenant little title protection from continued entry by the landlord. Common sense would dictate that students who are tenants should keep the possible presence of the landlord in mind as they plan their various decorations, displays, and other parties.
In spite of its many weaknesses, the law does state that a landlord may not abuse his right of access by exercising it unreasonably, or by exercising it for the purpose of continually harassing the tenant, the tenant should seek legal help. The law provides that the tenant may seek a court injunction to stop the conduct of the landlord, and in some cases the tenant will be allowed to terminate his rental agreement with the landlord, even if it is a long-term lease.
If the tenant is damaged by the landlord's conduct he may sue for these damages. In such a suit the tenant could try to show that the value of the rental property was diminished by the landlord's conduct, and sue for damages.
Many times students come to the ASUM Legal Services Office with questions concerning landlord rules. They might, for example, find a note on their door that asks them to no longer play their stereo after 8 p.m., or asks them not to carpet their bedroom.

Washington — In some ways, the debate remains between President Reagan and the civil rights establishment in a nostalgia contest. Reagan is remembering the wonderful postwar days of great economic growth (and massive discrimination). The civil rights leadership is heart-eyed over the 1960s, when black progress was a major priority of the national government (many black demonstrations were getting their heads split open at the hands of Southern sheriffs).

Even Reagan acknowledges the good intentions of the Kennedy-Johnson years. The problem, he told last week's meeting of the National Black Republican Council, is that the programs those good intentions spawned didn't work, and indeed often made things worse.

"The record is there for all to see," he said. "The Black Republican Council, is that the last week's meeting of the National rights leadership is teary-eyed over the massive discrimination). The civil rights establishment is, of course, incredulous that Reagan could suggest that blacks are worse off, that poverty has increased, as a result of the Great Society. The government's own numbers support a measure of in-credibility. In 1966, the percentage of blacks living in poverty was 41.8. By 1969, the number was down to 32.2 percent. (In 1981, the most recent year for which there are good numbers, the black poverty rate was 34.2 percent.)

Between the 1964 start of the Great Society and 1969, black unemployment fell from 24.3 percent to 21.4. Indeed, the unemployment numbers for both black teen-aged and adults were lower in 1969 than they had been since the early 1950s and lower than they have been at any time since.

The drop in poverty and joblessness among blacks was unquestionably influenced by a late-'60s spurt in economic growth. But there can be little question that the successes of the civil rights movement, including the Great Society's emphasis on racial equity, helped blacks to participate more fully in that economic growth than they otherwise would have.

So what on earth was the president talking about? What he was talking about is, in fact, a very real problem. Leaving aside the Great Society programs that did not work as well as they might have, some that worked very well — food stamps, for instance — were spread too far up the economic ladder. As a result, the cost of the programs enabled for the poor, but whose beneficiaries came to include the non-poor, has made them economically unattractive, especially during economic hard times.

It is no liberal on the Great Society to say that it is time to try some different approaches to solving our problems.

Few in the civil rights leadership would dispute that.

What is beyond debate, from their point of view, is the Reagan notion that the federal government shouldn't be trying to solve these problems at all, that help for the weak and the poor and the victimized ought to be primarily the concern of local government and private enterprise.

Reagan's nostalgia for the postwar days is based on his belief that the best cure for poverty is a thriving economy. Blacks would not dispute that. But they would add that government commitment to racial fairness can make an important difference — thus their nostalgia for the 1960s.

Burgess added that one function of the center is to monitor the results of legislation. Weiss said the burden is on the veteran to seek out help, but the catch is that the veteran often must seek out help when he's least able to. The system is such that "the average individual is incapable of participating effectively," Weiss said. "This whole process aggravates the problem," said Burgess. "The tragedy is many of them (veterans) have already stopped looking" for help.

To further compound difficulties, the two said, when veterans do come to them for help they are often unequipped (i.e., underfunded) to give adequate help.

The two had hoped to establish a center that would service the community in addition to UM. "Funding is so tight... we may have to work within the campus," Weiss said.

Both are quick to credit Montana's national representatives, especially Congressman Pat Williams. They said Williams and his staff frequently work even on individual claims and grants.

Weiss has worked for the ASUM Legal Services for the past three years and Burgess is currently a volunteer veterans' counselor.

A class project in the University of Montana's interpersonal communication class will soon yield benefits for a good part of the UM student body through cash savings on goods and services from Missoula-area businesses.

The students' Steal-A-Deal booklet, a 5½-inch-by-8½-inch coupon and information offering available next week from KZOQ-FM radio, is the end result of a group assignment given by UM Associate Professor James Polson in an INCO 115 "persuasion" class.

The goal of the class, Polson said, is to have students get an idea and have them convince people to make the idea happen. Linda May, at that time a senior in business and interpersonal communications, had an idea to see all UM students get the same merchandise discounts around Missoula that freshmen get. Local businesses usually offer incoming freshmen discount coupon deals free.

"I remembered when I was a resident assistant how everyone wanted to steal those freshman coupons," May said.

So members of the class started approaching area business people and getting the project off the ground.

It took a long time to work things out and the project wasn't finished when the class ended. The group working with the merchants turned matters over to the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. The sorority received money from ASUM to work on the coupons.

The sorority members went home for the summer, at which time the discount book — fast becoming a reality — was taken back to May, now an advertising sales representative with KZOQ. May said she took the work upon herself because she was dealing with those merchants anyway as part of her job, and thought that would be a better way to get the job done than to have inexperienced university students making the rounds.

The booklet, to be handed out in University Center beginning Monday until Oct. 9, will be free — like freshman discount catalogs, and will offer similar coupons found around Missoula. There will be 5,000 copies.

May said that businesses wanted to address all students and not just freshmen. "It's a sort of thanks, we're glad you're here" message, May said.

Advertisers get a reduced rate package from KZOQ, with some getting a reduced rate for both coupon space and air time. Both the sorority and ASUM will have full-page ads in the booklet, at no charge to them.

KZOQ also changed the advertisers: from strictly downtown business to a mix of businesses all over town. In addition to the two types of coupons, both the money and the "buy one, get one free" kind, the booklet will feature a gift guide, sports and music performance schedules, and university living information.

Next week while the booklets are handed out, students can sign up for a drawing to win either winter quarter tuition and book allowance, or a 10-speed bike.

Volleyball team home for weekend

By Dave Keyses
Kaimin Sports Editor

Grizzly volleyball fans will have their first opportunity to see the University of Montana volleyball team in action as it hosts conference opponent Idaho and Eastern Washington University.

The Grizzlies will play Idaho tonight and EWU tomorrow night. Both games begin at 7:30 in Danilberg Arena.

The Lady Griz team, now 8-11 in non-conference play, is coming off what coach Dick Scott calls “our best game all season.”

The Grizzlies participated in the BYU Tournament last weekend and finished with a 5-3 record. One of the teams the Griz defeated was nationally ranked Idaho State.

Sophomore Wendy Hoyt had an outstanding tournament and was named to the BYU Invitational all-tournament team.

Coach Scott said Hoyt’s performance, “Wendy probably had the best match of her career against Utah State. She has been the one that held us together this season.”

Coach Scott said tomorrow’s match-up with Idaho will be crucial. “Idaho is a very solid team, they scramble a lot and are very quick,” he said.

Idaho is 7-2 this season, and Eastern Washington has a 3-6 record.

Runners prime for UM Invitational

While the men’s cross country team takes the week off, the UM women’s team gets back into action in the Fort Geyser Invitational in Whidbey Island, Wash. this weekend.

The Lady Grizzlies finished second in this meet last year and coach Dick Koontz is looking for another strong showing from his team.

“I’m very excited about our prospects” said Koontz. “We’ve got five or six girls running together in practice and that’s encouraging.”

The men’s cross country team will take the weekend off after an impressive showing in the Gary Franklin Invitational last weekend.

The Grizzlies were led by freshmen Gordon Ruttenbur, who placed sixth with a time of 30:37. Senor Ron Johnson placed ninth and freshman Jon Knight placed 15th.

Both men’s and women’s cross country teams will host the UM Invitational Oct. 9. Mornhinweg has been named co-opener 17-10 to the Montana State University Bobcats.

Last year when Montana and the UNMW met, the Grizzlies won 33-26.

Though the UNMW meet, the Grizzlies won 33-26.

The men’s cross country team
The University of Montana travels to Reno, Nevada this weekend for the Grizzlies second conference season last weekend with a win victory over Northern Arizona University. The Grizzlies overall record this season is 2-1.

The University of Nevada-Reno Wolfpack has a 0-3 record. The pack dropped their conference opener 17-10 to the Montana State University Bobcats.

Last year when Montana and the UNMW met, the Grizzlies won 33-26 when Bobby Connors went 8-10 for 116 yards from his quarterback slot.

The game will be broadcast on KLYT-AM beginning at 1:00 p.m. tomorrow.

Mornhinweg garners Big Sky award

Junior quarterback Marty Mornhinweg has been named co-big Sky Conference Offensive Player of the week, along with Ken Mornhinweg gamers Big Sky award Coach Scott said tomorrow’s match-up with Idaho will be crucial. “Idaho is a very solid team, they scramble a lot and are very quick,” he said.

“I’m very excited about our prospects” said Koontz. “We’ve got five or six girls running together in practice and that’s encouraging.”

The men’s cross country team will take the weekend off after an impressive showing in the Gary Franklin Invitational last weekend.

The Grizzlies were led by freshmen Gordon Ruttenbur, who placed sixth with a time of 30:37. Senior Ron Johnson placed ninth and freshman Jon Knight placed 15th.

Both men’s and women’s cross country teams will host the UM Invitational Oct. 9.

Mornhinweg has been named co-opener 17-10 to the Montana State University Bobcats.

Last year when Montana and the UNMW met, the Grizzlies won 33-26.

Though the UNMW meet, the Grizzlies won 33-26.

The men’s cross country team
The University of Montana travels to Reno, Nevada this weekend for the Grizzlies second conference season last weekend with a win victory over Northern Arizona University. The Grizzlies overall record this season is 2-1.

The University of Nevada-Reno Wolfpack has a 0-3 record. The pack dropped their conference opener 17-10 to the Montana State University Bobcats.

Last year when Montana and the UNMW met, the Grizzlies won 33-26 when Bobby Connors went 8-10 for 116 yards from his quarterback slot.

The game will be broadcast on KLYT-AM beginning at 1:00 p.m. tomorrow.

Mornhinweg garners Big Sky award

Junior quarterback Marty Mornhinweg has been named co-big Sky Conference Offensive Player of the week, along with Ken Mornhinweg gamers Big Sky award Coach Scott said tomorrow’s match-up with Idaho will be crucial. “Idaho is a very solid team, they scramble a lot and are very quick,” he said.

Idaho is 7-2 this season, and Eastern Washington has a 3-6 record.

Team

In this meet last year and coach Dick Koontz is looking for another strong showing from his team.

“I’m very excited about our prospects” said Koontz. “We’ve got five or six girls running together in practice and that’s encouraging.”

sues. He said an investigation "definitely confirmed the presence of cyanide" in the over-the-counter pain reliever.

Donohue identified the tainted Tylenol as lot number MC2880 in 500-capule containers and said, "We don't know the extent of the contamination, but we don't think anybody should be taking Extra-Strength Tylenol at all."

The two brothers died at 3:15 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. CDT Wednesday as a result of cyanide poisoning. The child died approximately 10 a.m. Wednesday. The Neighboring suburbs where they lived are both about 25 miles northwest of downtown Chicago. "There is no relation between the households and that's why we find this so disturbing," Donohue said. He added: "It would be foolish to assume that the bottles were tampered with in the home."

"It is impossible to tell when the tampering occurred," said Dr. Michael Schaffer, chief toxicologist with the medical examiner's office. "We tested three capsules from each container of 50 and one of the three from each contained cyanide." Arlington Heights Police Chief Rodney L. Kath said his department's investigation was pointing toward contamination of individual bottles of Tylenol rather than whole batches. He refused to elaborate.

Kath recruited village firetighteners to help his officers in contacting merchants selling Tylenol. He said the officers were waiting at stores when they opened.

The merchants were told that individuals and that merchants were told to take Extra-Strength Tylenol off their shelves.

entire difference. The problem, Mullen said, is that 22 percent more UM students applied for aid this year than last.

When Congress stated that some of the newly-appropriated Pell Grant money be given to veterans, it was a mixed blessing for UM's financial aid department. "Washington is giving back the money for the Pell Grant, then they turn around and say 'give some back to the vets.' But they're not telling us how to do it," Mullen said.

Approximately $3 million is set aside for veterans' grants. Veterans have been allowed to apply for benefits all along, with grants given based on the amount of veterans' benefits they received under the G.I. Bill. Most veterans received more than the maximum allowed to still receive a grant. Relaxed requirements may be one solution to Mullen's problem of getting the new money to the veterans.

Army Lt. Col. Lee Delorme, a Pentagon spokesman in Beirut, said in a written statement that one Marine was killed and three were injured, "seriously, "when some unexploded ordnance was accidentally detonated. The incident was not the result of hostile action." The Marines were evacuated by helicopter to the amphibious ship Guam, where one died in surgery, the statement said.

Pentagon officials in Washington said the Marines hit were part of a team clearing mines at the airport.

Prophecy gets to finals, Society gets revenge

By Shawn Swagerty

Kalamazoo Gazette

Blast my estranged acquaintances at the Fraternity of the Journalistic “We,” if I’m writing about last Sunday’s Battle of the Bands again, I’m going to be first person singular. No other person or number would suit the coverage of such a personal experience as a Battle of the Bands in a magazine.

This is Battle Number Three for me and I have enough oddball stories to share with you Murphey, who was he alive. (N.B. A patroon of the Arts: Audie Murphey is dead, as was just implied by the phrase “he was alive.” If you’re one of the sharpies, you inferred from that very phrase the fact of Mr. Murphey’s sad state of affairs. I didn’t infer it. You inferred it. I implied it. And while we’re at it, please remember that pictures are hung, people are hanged. Fine arts editors are lynched.)

You may have inferred from the preceding paragraph that I hold a lot of you in contempt. A lot of you probably hold me in contempt. (For those of you supplementing your Food-Service lunch with a browse at the Kalamazoo, let it be known that that amalgamation of Jack and coke and fries portions on the page before you does little to enhance the credibility of your denials of the existence of this contempt.) Silly, sensitive little you! Fear not! I am inclined to believe that I’m giving you three beefy graphs at the outset just as a considerate host would tempt the pert taste-buds of welcome dinner guests with a light appetizer before getting down to the undercooked pork on a roll.

Undercooked pork roast is a kind simile for the first round of this year’s Battle of the Bands. At least the Carousel and KZQO-FM distributed some free beer at their this year’s Battle of the Bands. At least the Carousel and KZOQ-FM distributed some free beer at their this year’s Battle of the Bands. At least the Carousel and KZQO-FM distributed some free beer at their this year’s Battle of the Bands. At least the Carousel and KZQO-FM distributed some free beer at their this year’s Battle of the Bands.

KZQO, were running the show, as they have in the past. Infer that the show was held at the Carousel. Admission was two dollars per May we infer that a packed house at said price can monetarily justify the receipt of two small cups of kinderbeer per stamped hand in the eyes of the best-wax men behind it all?

But hey, they are businessmen! And what irrational criterion could have nudged Violation so narrowly out of victory? Maybe the AOR moguls decided that carnage was out this year. But I’m not too upset. I knew that Prophecy would win, anyway. How? Last year a high school girl named Marcia with an honest face and a sincere tone of voice told me so. And I’ll take Marcia’s word over a hipster’s lame opinion. any day.

Get the picture yet? Most of this wasn’t too enjoyable. As bad as the music may have been, though, it couldn’t touch the judging, and it was the judging that precipitated my second reason for being disgusted: my sense of justice was sorely violated. Prophecy placed first, followed by Violation, the Rage and finally Who Killed Society.

As mentioned above, four of the judges were DJs on corporate-programmed format stations. When I called in a request once last year to one of these jocks, jock in question did not know who Lou Reed was. Why should I have been surprised at this when the closest KZQO comes to "alternative" music is the Abba-with-new-hairstyles band Human League? Ergo, Who Killed Society was ruled out of contention immediately when it kicked convention in the crotch. Who, after all, is going to vote against their bread and butter?

Prophecy: The winners

sign of metal-brother solidarity. And yes, cloning is the choice method of propagation in realm of Adult Orient Rock, an important point to keep in mind in tandem with the consideration that four AOR disc-jockeys and one concert promoter constituted the judge’s panel.

I make it no secret that the second band to perform, Who Killed Society, is my favorite local band. I can really relate to these kids, O.K.? Their most obvious appeal lies in their confrontational ethic of performance. KZQO claims that the only reason they played at this contest was to gain "revenge" on those who pelleted them with coins, ice and bottle caps during last year’s battle.

Confrontation found a friendly home at the Carousel when KZQO played, as 30 or 40 slamming and careening weirdos on the dance floor played lug-of-war with Old Glory, took dives from the stage and greeted a barrage of epithets, ice, beverages and even bottles from normatics with a retaliatory offensive of middle fingers (raised high in the symmetrical sign of anti-nowhere solidarity), spit and careening weirdos on the dance floor played lug-of-war with Old Glory, took dives from the stage and greeted a barrage of epithets, ice, beverages and even bottles from normatics with a retaliatory offensive of middle fingers (raised high in the symmetrical sign of anti-nowhere solidarity), spit and any bottle caps during last year’s battle.

Floyd film: meaningless, misogynist, incoherent
By John Kappes

Pink Floyd's The Wall

"A visual treat," a friend suggested, sarcastically. Well, yes, it is, bad animation and all. Several scenes exude menace and decline. Bob Geldof, late of the Boomtown Rats (remember?) imitates a fragmented personality coming to pieces ("Pink") with remarkable attention to detail. But detail escapes Roger Waters, who wrote the screenplay (such as it is).

To the point: the film is nearly incoherent. Is Pink really the founder of a new British fascism, or just a confused sod locked in a toilet stall? Does he know? Does it matter? Well, yes, it does, because Pink's fantasies (?) are misogynist in the extreme.

Is it Pink's notion that women are devouring monsters—or Waters's? The perspective is unclear. Assume the carnivorous vaginas we see everywhere are Pink's problem; why is he so messed up? His mother, Waters reveals, was a grouchy old doctor when he was sick, and sent him to school. Pink had no father around to put a stop to such female madness. His wife found another man to sleep with when he no longer would. He shaved off his eyebrows and was lost.

Now if Waters doesn't mean to say any of this — and charity demands we believe that for now — he has said nothing at all. Which has been Pink Floyd's trademark for some time.

I must say that the intolerance of the young people appeals to me. It's a good sign when a youngster is temperamentally in revolt against the world in general. All those amongst my pupils who have gone far were natural rebels, born, as my teacher Renan puts it, "with an imprecation on their lips."

Evans to play in Tuesday solo recital

Margaret Evans, assistant professor of music at the University of Montana, will present a piano recital on Tuesday at the Music Recital Hall. Evans is a newly appointed member of the music Department piano faculty. She came to UM from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where she received a master of music degree. She holds a bachelor of music degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and has also studied in Switzerland.

The program will consist of Italian Concerto by J. S. Bach, Fantasy, Op. 17 by Robert Schumann.
