Campus groups strive to raise student voting

By Pam Newbern

Several student groups at the University of Montana have combined forces this quarter in an effort to get students out to vote. Representatives from six groups, including the ASUM Legislative Committee and Missoula MontPIRG, met last Wednesday to discuss ways to inform students about candidates and issues in the Nov. 2 general election.

Lack of such information was cited as a reason why many students, although registered, do not vote. In the 1980 election, 761, or 33 percent of the 1,995 registered students living on campus, voted. Of the 872 registered students in Married Student Housing, 428, or 49 percent, voted. Voter turnout for Missoula County in the same election was 66.6 percent.

Members from the UM Advocates, the Student Action Center, the Young Democrats and supporters of Initiative 91, as well as CSU and the ASUM Legislative Committee, are planning to promote student voting by advertising in the media, posting precinct maps around campus telling students where to vote, and possibly by distributing leaflets or flyers containing a summary of the initiatives and candidates.

"The whole idea is to encourage students to vote," said Gordon Gregory, of MontPIRG. "It's a disservice to the student body to be so unrepresented in voter turnout."

Gregory said a table would be in the University Center sometime next week to distribute an initiative description pamphlet from the Montana Secretary of State's Office.

"I don't feel as if students are going to be in Missoula on Nov. 2," Gregory said, "they may vote by absentee ballot. Request cards for absentee ballots may be picked up at the Missoula County Courthouse, the MontPIRG office, or at ASUM. Students will receive the ballots in the mail."

Jean-Marie Souvigney, chairwoman of the ASUM Legislative Committee, said members from the group will be organizing a phone bank to call registered students on Nov. 1 and 2 to remind them to vote.

Souvigney said she would also try to contact the UM Faculty Senate to see if faculty members will participate in the effort to get students to vote by reminding students in classes on Monday.

Selectie Service protesters arrested during peaceful rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police Monday arrested 13 demonstrators who crossed police lines outside Selective Service headquarters.

About 200 demonstrators, mostly young people from various anti-draft groups, rallied in downtown Washington early in the day and then marched to the headquarters in the Georgetown area.

Police, who were nearly as numerous as the demonstrators, cordoned off the area and confined the protesters to a grassy hill across the street from the building. The arrests came when several of the protesters crossed the police lines and sat down in the street.

Those arrested, 40 men and 15 women, were charged with crossing police lines, a misdemeanor that carries a $50 fine upon conviction.

Most cooperated with officers and walked to police vans to be driven away, although a few went to jail and were carried away on stretchers.

Demonstrators carried signs denouncing the Selective Service System and demanding an end to recent indictions of young men for failing to register for the draft.

A few of the demonstrators burned registration forms. The demonstration forced police to close the street in front of Selective Service headquarters for several hours, but otherwise business at the agency was not disrupted, according to spokeswoman Joan Lamb.

There is no draft, but Selective Service registration is required to provide a pool of names for use in the event of a national emergency. Registration was instituted two years ago.

'Rent-a-record' offers different music at bargain prices

By Charles F. Mason

The owner of Rudy's Rent-a-Record in Missoula says he's pleased with the quality of prerecorded tapes.

Yesterday, Bruce Micklus opened the city's first record rental store at 525 S. Higgins Ave. to "give people a chance to try different music at a bargain price," he said, and to "put pressure on the record companies to improve their quality."

"That's bullshit," replied Fred Downing, owner of Budget Tape and Records, 3029 Brooks St.

"The record rental business is a short-sighted approach," he said. "It does nothing good for the industry."

Downing predicted the burgeoning business will narrow an already shrinking play list, depriving consumers of new talent.

"When the profits shrink, there's less money for the companies to risk bringing out new talent," he said. "The people doing the work are deprived of earnings."

Downing said he's concerned about the long-term health of the record industry.

"I care about this business," he said, "but the people who start these businesses don't they just want to make a quick dollar."

Recently the recording industry has been lobbying Congress for financial relief. Legislation is pending before Congress which would impose a tax on all blank cassette tapes and/or tape recorders.

According to the industry, the growth of the record-rental business has contributed to the reduction in their sales and profits because people are taping rented records.

When asked if he thinks his customers will tape the rented records, Micklus said "I don't want to use that language. I rent them to preview, to decide to buy or not."

Micklus said he will not provide a royalty to the companies or the artists.

After deducting the cost of the blank tape and the rental fee, a person using the rental service can save anywhere from $3 to $8 over the price of a recorded tape or record. Depending on the equipment used, the quality of a home-recorded tape is usually better than that of a commercially recorded tape.

"If the recording companies would spend more time on quality control and more time with the music itself, then people wouldn't mind buying a record," Micklus said. "They (the companies) have millions of dollars of sophisticated equipment and you can make a better tape at home on a $150 deck than they do."

Downing countered that argument by noting an increase in quality of prerecorded tapes along with the introduction of "double time" tapes. Those contain two albums on one tape at a price only slightly higher than the price of a regular tape.

According to Micklus, his rental business operates as follows:

- There is a one-time "membership" charge of $10.
- An $8 deposit is required for each rental.

FBI needs guidelines

More clear, stringent guidelines are needed for FBI undercover operations.

In a report released last week, the American Civil Liberties Union demonstrated the abuses that are not only possible under current procedures but that occurred during the Abcsm investigation.

That fail, however, without clearly establishing beforehand that a pattern of criminal activity existed, FBI agents shifted the investigation to real public corruption New Jersey politicians.

At that point, instead of waiting for suspects to come to a fencing operation, FBI agents encouraged middlemen, who believed them to be Arab sheiks, to call middlemen to politicians to meetings where the politicians would be offered bribes.

The targets of the investigation, therefore, no longer "chose" themselves by atty to clarify a no plan. As a matter of fact, we are outside community with its film series is not even funded by our film series. As a matter of fact, we are student money, but rather by the student money, is funded by student money. As a matter of fact, we are film series. The reason this sensible budget cut is such a political hot potato is due to the campaign of the all-powerful national organizer's libel, a single-issue coalition similar to those favoring loaded pistols in every home or citizenship for fertilized eggs.

To eviscerate the nefarious workings of this clandestine organization, I ferreted out its young mastermind, 9-year-old Edward Twist, in his huddle quarters at the Beedle Bumble Orphan Asylum.

P.S. You might try a charter bus to Butte each week, Ross. Or maybe just read a few letters instead.

Clarity review of film series

Editor: In response to Ross Best's review of the film series (Friday, Oct. 15), I feel it necessary to clarify a few matters. First of all Ross, if you at all understand the size of the project, you would have realized that programing does not have a responsibility to the outside community with its film series. We are prohibited from advertising our films outside of the campus area. Programing is a funded student monstrosity.

Therefore, our first responsibility lies with the students, not with the outside world. If our film series is not even funded by student money, but rather by the University Center Adminstration.

Secondly Ross, we have already reviewed the films for your Fall Film Series. Obviously there is a range of moods and maturities that would be appreciated by the work we do. We have been here many years and have tried many things. And to be quite honest some of the old classics and recent foreign releases you speak of have FLOPPED, when we tried them. Only a handful of people usually show which means that you and your opinion are obviously a minority of this on this campus. Our goal to cater to the largest segment of the student body. It seems to me that we are doing a fine job.

As for the reviews are concerned, Jeremiah Johnson is part of a package deal — the Cowboy Film Festival. We need to include it in order to sell the other three films. The Graduate, on the other hand, seems a great move. I encourage the freshman and the transfer a chance to see — or did you forget about them?

Last point. Since you are such an expert on films, Ross — why didn't you last spring? We advertised for two transfers a chance to see it — or did you do a fine job.

The Innocent Bystander

Down with orphans

By Arthur Hoppe

Did you know we could save $90.5 million a year by eliminating federal meal subsidies to institutions caring for orphans, foundlings and handicapped children?

Unfortunately, the administration is having second thoughts about its own proposal. A Department of Agriculture official this week might possibly be bad for the department's image. And presidential spokesman Larry Speaks said cautiously that "The White House has taken no position" on the issue.

Why all this pandering around when the very security of the nation is at stake? After all, $90.5 million will buy one-third of an MX missile or, should we save it up for 52 years, an entire year's supply of food. We can scarify the elderly, the ill, and the indigent, but not orphans? What have orphans ever done for America?

The reason this sensible budget cut is such a political hot potato is due to the campaign of the all-powerful national organizer's libel, a single-issue coalition similar to those favoring loaded pistols in every home or citizenship for fertilized eggs.

To eviscerate the nefarious workings of this clandestine organization, I ferreted out its young mastermind, 9-year-old Edward Twist, in his huddle quarters at the Beedle Bumble Orphan Asylum.

"Do all you orphans dwell in humble quarters?" I asked him flat out.

"Oh, yes," he said unequivocally, "fugitive his forebears. "It's a major part of primitive man's desire for personal, public, or national "purity."

"You all are undoubtedly, I suppose."

"That's right, sir. Our marketing studies show no one like an orphmly orphan."

"And those ill-fitting clothes you're wearing..."

"Yes, sir. We have them specially tailored that way so that the consultants advise us that it wouldn't do for a humble orphan to go around putting on airs."

"Oh, no, sir. We put in only 16 hours a day, seven days a week at the jute mill."

"You're overworked, I trust?"

"No, sir. We work in only 16 hours a day, seven days a week at the jute mill."

"You orphans believe in capital punishment."

"Well, of course we do, sir. We believe in capital punishment.

"It sounds like a dill clue."

"Not at all, sir. Each year, ssee. We select one of our members to find a rich man's wallet on the street, return it to him, refuse a reward and then marry his daughter."

"What's the point of that?"

"It proves to the public that all these poor people are "pursuing.""

Down with orphans
WASHINGTON—The Rev. George Clements of Chicago has little time for schemes for reorganizing the society, or overhauling its basic structures, or redistributing its wealth. This 50-year-old Catholic priest is a practical man, whose notion of Christian service is to grab a piece of the problem and go to work.

Thus it is that he has been touring the country, urging black churches to help eradicate what he considers a particular disgrace: the institutionalization of perhaps 100,000 black children who are available for adoption. For more than two years now, he has been selling his "one church, one child" approach, urging every black congregation to see to it that at least one of its member families adopts at least one black child.

Typically, he started his program by defying the tradition of his own church and adopting a 12-year-old boy who had spent most of his life in institutions after being abandoned as an infant. He'd gladly do it again, he said. "I just can't tell you how many were added as a result of the campaign," he said, "but I can tell you this: Our program made us the right thing to do.

It was just this sort of frustration that had to hold a benefit in Chicago to get me out of debt," he told me. He gladly did it again, he said. "I just got tired of people talking about problems and not really doing anything. It can be very frustrating." He repeated the message to the parents of the 1,400 pupils attending the Holy Angels elementary school. Either they would register, he said, or their children would be expelled. A thousand parents subsequently registered. "I did it because I got tired of talking, taking, talking about registration and decided to try to do something to make them listen," he told me.

They listened. Indeed the voter-registration campaign spread citywide, boosted by a $50,000 contribution from the Soft Sheen hair products people. According to Michael Lavelle, chairman of Chicago's Board of Elections Commissioners, more than 130,000 new voters were added to the rolls on the special Oct. 5 registration day. "I can't tell you how many were added as a result of the campaign," he said, "but I can tell you this: Our preliminary figures show an average of 3,000 new registrants per black ward, 2,000 per white ward. That's a complete reverse of the normal trend, in which white registrations usually far outstrip black." But the adoption program remains Clements's pet project. "I am satisfied with the Holy Angels congregations to agree to give financial help to it that at least one of its member families adopts at least one black child. It's just a matter of matching them up.

So far, he said, 194 churches have bought into his program. So has the Reagan administration. "The President heard about what we were doing and sent Dorcas Hardy (assistant secretary of Health and Human Services) out to take a look." As a result of that visit, HHS has provided a grant of $150,000 to help Clements spread his idea.

"The money, to be used for staff, transportation and other expenses, came just in the nick of time," he said. "I was doing things on a shoestring and at one point found myself in $10,000 debt, just from traveling around to various cities. It's very expensive. In fact, we had to hold a benefit in Chicago to get me out of debt."

Griz stay in title hunt with 40-16 win
By Dave Keyes

The University of Idaho had the tradition and the national ranking going into Saturday's University of Montana-Ul football game, but when it came down to it, the Grizzlies didn't care about either. The unranked Grizzlies defeated the 14th ranked Vandals 40-16 for a homecoming victory. The Grizzlies' victory keeps them in contention for the Big Sky Conference championship.

Montana started Saturday's conference game against Idaho State. Montana State will play Idaho State, next week, and the following weekend the Grizzlies and the Bobcats will play what just may be the conference championship.

For the rest of the game the Montana defense, coupled with the offense of quarterback Marty Mornhinweg and runningback Greg Iseman were too much for the Vandal defense to handle. Mornhinweg finished the day with 13 of 19 for 220 yards, including two 52 yard touchdown passes to Dave Glenn and Greg Iseman.

Senior tailback Greg Iseman, who has been the best running back in the Big Sky this season, had 30 carries for 160 yards. While the Montana offense played up to expectations, the Grizzly defense was the pleasant surprise.

UL quarterback Ken Hobart came into Saturday's game as the leading passer in the Big Sky. But the Montana defense, coupled with two interceptions and three tackles. Library theft case referred to police

The Missoula County Attorney’s Office late last week turned over the investigation of the $4,800 theft from the University of Montana Maureen and Mike Mansfield Library to the Missoula Police Department.

Police Detective Pete Lawrenson, who will be handling the case, said he was investigating for at least another two weeks.

The attorney general has no authority to prosecute in the matter.

The money, which was taken during a year’s time from a fund collected from Xerox machines, was discovered missing by a UM auditor in June. According to UM President Neil Bucklew, it is believed to be a dream.

After a UM investigation failed to turn up any suspects, Bucklew said he notified the Montana Board of Regents and the attorney general’s office.

Ground broken for PA/R-TV Friday

By Leslie Vining

Alumni Nancy Fields O’Connor and Carroll O’Connor, and dignitaries from throughout Montana dedicated the new $8.5 million Performing Arts/Radio-TV building Friday near the University of Montana Law School.

UM President Neil Bucklew commended the efforts of the UM Foundation Board, the Alumni Association, and the more than 150 volunteers who raised more than $1.8 million. Donations came from nearly 1,200 individuals during a 10 month campaign.

But the most exciting part of the personal gift of $40,000 made by the O’Connors and “their articulate and meaningful way of reaching alumni,” said to a crowd of about 500, Nancy O’Connor remembered about her years in the UM fine arts program and praised the project.

Lt. Gov. George Turman said the structure symbolized the commitment of Montana citizens to a liberal arts education.

“The education of the Liberal Arts is the cornerstone of a rational and ethical society,” Turman said.

Hard hats and shovels were passed among the ground breakers who included: Bucklew; Turman; Irving Dayton, commissioner of higher education; Regent Robert Knight; Ward Shanahan; UM Alumni Association president; Dean Kathryn Martin; School of Fine Arts; Acting Dean Charles Hood; School of Journalism, and Marquette McRae-Zook, ASUM president.

Remarks of praise were also given by Mayor William Gregg; William Coffee, president of the Missoula Chamber of Commerce, Joseph McElwain, UM Foundation president-elect; Dale Schwanke, UM Alumni Association president; and by former UM President Richard Bowers in a letter echoing the success of what he only believed to be a dream.

J. D. Ackman, graduate student in theater; and Susan Back, senior in radio-TV, narrated the development of the fine arts and journalism schools which have been shuffled around the campus. Elmer Fighting Bear, keeper of the Sacred Hat of the Northern Cheyenne, gave the invocation.

The UM Marching Band and the Bear Child Singers and Dancers, in their Native American dress, performed for the crowd.

A record wholesaler in Montana, who asked that his name not be used, agreed with Michaels that record companies are partially to blame for a decline in sales.

“Our name is over ever are listening to recorded music, but the companies are losing money,” he said. “They (the companies) have screwed themselves with high prices and shoddy quality.”

The wholesaler said it has long common practice to repackagel defective records returned by customers and resell them.

“We do it all the time,” he said.

But, like Downing, he said he fears the rental market will cause a shrinkage in new releases of "un-knowns.”

The University of Montana golf team concluded its fall season with a fifth place finish in the Washington State University Invitational, held at the University of Idaho’s golf course Friday and Saturday.

The University of Washington won the invitational with a score of 1,144 while Montana State won with a total of 1,146. Washington State’s number one team was second with 1,141. Idaho State was third with 1,146, Montana State 1,152 and Portland State at 1,155.

Leading the way for UM was Brian Cooper, who tied for eighth overall with a 223 total.

The UM golfers will continue their matches next spring.

World news

Lebanon

- Lebanon's President Amin Gemayel yesterday hailed U.S. efforts to rid his country of the foreignarmies that have turned it into "an arena for terror and violence.

Addressing the United Nations General Assembly, Gemayel demanded "the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of all non-Lebanese foreign forces from Lebanon.

Gemayel will meet President Reagan today to discuss the U.S. plan for the withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from the embattled country.

- Nearly 4,000 Italian workers staged a brief strike yesterday to protest the U.S. Customs seizure in New York of parts bound for an Italian firm making turbines for the Siberian natural gas pipeline.

The United States has ordered an embargo on the use of U.S. parts or technology in building the gas pipeline, but has received little cooperation in the effort from other countries.

General Electric, which manufactured the parts, said they were intended for use on an Algerian pipeline.

STATE

- The state Land Board yesterday approved new royalty rates for oil and gas extracted from leased state lands, and industry spokesmen said the new plan should stimulate drilling in both eastern and western Montana.

One spokesman said the new royalty arrangement will send a "positive signal" to the industry that will encourage exploration, especially in the most expensive oil and gas areas, the Williston Basin straddling the Montana-Oklahoma border and the Overthrust Belt along the spine of the Rocky Mountains.

1. Our unique organizational structure gives you unusual flexibility in determining your career path and accomplishing your personal goals.
