African-American History Since 1865

The history of the African-American experience since the Civil War allows students to follow a people in motion. From the literary explorations of Langston Hughes to the organizing drives of Ella Baker and from the trans-Atlantic peregrinations of W. E. B. Dubois to the gender and race crossings of Pauli Murray, this class presents African Americans in late nineteenth and twentieth century United States history as those who moved – by choice and by force – and who moved others. Rather than a tangent to the American story, African-American history is treated as a central strand in the reunification, industrialization, urbanization, and globalization of the United States. Through a lens of motion, students will examine change and continuity in the African-American experience, the fight against Jim Crow, the Great Migrations, the struggle for civil rights, and post-civil rights economic, political, social and cultural developments and challenges.

Objectives

Students will be able to:

- identify the primary physical, cultural, and political movements and periods of the African diaspora in the United States from Reconstruction through the twentieth century in order to evaluate texts or artifacts within their historical and/or cultural contexts;
- assess the strategies employed by African-American women, men, and children in response to traditions of liberalism and white supremacy in order to analyze human behavior, ideas, and institutions within their respective historical and/or cultural contexts;
- explain how multiple and varied social forces brought about change within African-American communities and how those communities in turn changed the surrounding society in order to synthesize ideas and information with a view to understanding the causes and consequences of historical developments and events.

Assignments

To realize these objectives, students will take twelve quizzes, two exams, and complete two projects. Quizzes will have ten short-answer questions each week. The mid-term will combine term identifications and two short essays on central course themes. The final exam will follow a similar format - but with one short and one long essay - covering the entire course and focusing on explanations of how African Americans have influenced central developments in late nineteenth and twentieth century history.

Students will also complete two projects in the course of the semester. Mondays and Fridays of each week's classes will feature lectures and short discussion of assigned readings. During most Wednesdays' classes, students will work in small groups to complete and/or present assigned projects and discuss the readings. In the course of the semester, students will complete the following two projects:

A) Group Presentation.

Work in a small group to prepare and present a professional 15-18 minute group presentation (with an annotated bibliography and contextual history paper) on the significance, causes, and key historical African-American actors in one of the following topics:

- African-American Women in the West;
- African Americans in MT;
- Gay Harlem;
- Deacons for Defense;
- Post-1945 Race riots/rebellions;
- Popular Front;
- Pre-1945 Black female performers;
- Korean War;
- Highlander Folk School;
- March on Washington movement;
- Black Panthers;
- Motown music in Detroit 1960s;
- Father Divine's Peace Mission;
- African-American women in the civil rights movement;
- wildcard (student suggestion approved by instructor).

B) Narrative history or wildcard history (student suggestion approved by instructor).

Write a ten-page narrative history of the topic researched for the presentation (students all write own paper, give each other feedback, given individual grade) or tell a narrative history about that group in the form of a play, radio show, documentary or other form suggested by the student. Students may form groups and make proposals on their own initiative. The paper or project must argue a clearly presented thesis that explains the significance, causes, and key historical African-American actors in the identified topic.

Note on project sessions

Full rubrics for each project are available on the course website and will be distributed as they become due. Class attendance is mandatory and students will sign in at all classes.

Classroom etiquette

I expect that all students will join me in creating an effective learning environment by:

- turning off all cell phones (and thus doing no texting, e-mailing or instant messaging);
- using laptops only for note taking;
- not doing crosswords, reading newspapers, or other recreational activities;
- not talking or whispering with fellow classmates unless instructed to do so.

During lectures, I will give you my complete attention. I ask the favor of the same from my students. Should a student's behavior interrupt our learning environment, he or she will first be given a private verbal warning, then be given a public warning. Should disruptive behaviors continue following two warnings, the student will be issued a warning in writing and docked a letter grade on his or her most recent project. Any subsequent disruptive behaviors will be turned over to the University's disciplinary committee.

Instructor contact

I will hold office hours on Wednesdays from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. or gladly by appointment. My office is located on the second floor of the Liberal Arts Building (facing Mt. Sentinel), Room 262. You are also welcome to contact me by e-mail at tobin.shearer@umontana.edu. My goal is to respond within 24 hours. You may also call or text me at 406-662-8227.

Missed deadlines

My goal is always to encourage your best work in the midst of multiple classroom demands and real life emergencies. Limited deadline extensions can be arranged if the student makes advance contact. Late papers or projects will be marked down 2/3 grade/day. Make-up exams and quizzes will be offered when arranged with appropriate documentation from medical, athletic, or administrative officials.

Academic honesty

Stealing someone else's ideas is the same as stealing someone's property. Cite any reference to others' ideas in standard footnote or endnote format (in written work and all projects). Paraphrase whenever possible. In general, a paraphrase uses no more than three of the same words in a sentence as the original source. For more information see the University of Montana's student conduct code (<http://www.umt.edu/vpesa/Dean%20of%20Students/default.php>).

Accessibility

The University of Montana assures equal access to instruction through collaboration between students with disabilities, instructors, and Disability Services for Students (DSS). If you think you may have a disability adversely affecting your academic performance, and you have not already registered with DSS, please contact DSS in Lommasson 154 or 406.243.2243. I will work with you and DSS to provide an appropriate accommodation.
