Course Description:

Often linked to politicians or public policies we don’t like, the word “rhetoric” has a negative connotation in popular culture. In this course, you will come to understand how and why rhetoric has assumed a negative connotation. Along the way, we will explore topics including the relationship between language and truth, knowledge, democracy, community, justice, politics, and social power. By the end of the course you should have a greater appreciation for the role of rhetoric in our lives. We begin with a discussion of classical rhetoric; we move through a discussion of British and continental rhetoric; and we end with a discussion of contemporary rhetorical theory.

Objectives:

By the end of the semester, students will be able to:
* Articulate the fundamental concepts of classical, British and continental, and contemporary rhetorical theories.
* Utilize those theories in the analysis of rhetorical artifacts.
* Apply what they have learned to everyday life situations.

Readings:

Articles available on Moodle. Please note that you should plan to bring Moodle articles to class for discussion.

Major Assignments

Quizzes:
Over the course of the semester you will be given at least twelve quizzes. Each quiz will be worth twenty points and your ten best quiz scores will be counted toward your final grade. Quizzes may be administered anytime during the class period. Students who are absent or who arrive after or leave before a quiz is administered will not be allowed to make up the quiz. The purpose of the quizzes is to test whether you have done your assigned readings and paid attention during lecture; they are not meant to be difficult. You simply will be asked to demonstrate that you know the type of issues covered in the day's readings/prior lecture. I will not announce when quizzes will be given; however, I will spread the quizzes out evenly over the semester. Quiz scores will be posted on Moodle.

Exams:
Exams will consist primarily of multiple-choice questions; they may also include short essays, matching, or fill-in-the-blank questions. Study guides will be provided approximately one week prior to the exam dates. One full class period will be devoted to review for each exam.
