Course Description
This creative writing course is an intermediate workshop involving critical analysis of students’ work-in-progress. It will also be a lively and active forum to discuss prosody, and explore the experience of close reading individual poems by well-known poets. We will use Mark Strand’s The Making of A Poem: A Norton Anthology of Poetic Forms as our foundational book for our workshop. From this textbook and from various directed writing assignments we will conduct writing experiments and utilize exercises focused on technical considerations like diction, rhythm, rhyme, and imagery as well as many other considerations that reflect our contemporary poetry culture.

Grading Policy
35% in class participation, 20% weekly assignments/responses (on time!) 20% mid-semester portfolio and 25% final manuscript. I expect full participation and will allow for only one absence*.

*Policy on absences and lateness:
The standard policy is that no more than two absences in a fifteen-week term may result in a grade of “no-credit.” Please arrive on time for class and stay until dismissal. Attendance will be taken at the beginning of each class. If there is an emergency please speak to me about it as soon as you can.

Pedagogy and Outcomes:
I encourage you to exchange University of Montana e-mail addresses with your fellow peers as you will be getting to know each other through your own work and responses. (You will only be able to share your UM e-mails and not personal e-mails.) Since we are creating a conscientious and supportive environment, I trust that you will be mindful and respectful of each other and your shared work and will not discuss the work with persons outside of our workshop unless you have permission from the author. Many of you will be making use of the class to explore personal and important themes and would enjoy a comfortable environment to do so.

Along with the reading and writing of poetry and the occasional essay, video or audio recording, each class will have a ten-minute freewrite. This means you are free to write in your notebook without worrying about revising or crafting in advance. I will also encourage a focus freewrite where we will have a theme or a stylistic consideration as a frame of reference. This will happen every class. This will be part of developing your portfolio and/or manuscript.

We will have a teaching format made up of weekly packet work. I will organize groups of four-six students to work in small groups for half an hour to 45 min. each class; we then come together to workshop a poem from each group in a collaborative fashion. This will allow each student to receive feedback from your group and rotational feedback from the class at large. We will spend the first hour of class on readings from the anthology and the remaining class time workshopping in groups and with the whole class.

All course work (unless stated otherwise) must be typed or computer printed on standard white 20-24lb paper, double spaced and with a minimum of 1-inch margins. Keep a copy (electronic or otherwise) of all material you submit to the class (or to me). Be prepared to make weekly copies of your work for peers. We will be doing weekly writing assignments in class, and you will be expected to write on your own time. We may also consider creating a blog or some kind of on-line community where you can share work.

Preferred Name & Preferred Gender Pronouns Professional courtesy and sensitivity are especially important with respect to individuals and topics dealing with differences of race, culture, religion, politics, sexual orientation, gender, gender variance, and nationalities. Class rosters are provided to the instructor with the student's legal name. I will gladly honor your request to address you by an alternate name or gender pronoun. Please advise me of this preference early in the semester so that I may make appropriate changes to my records.
