Consultant studies asbestos problems

By Jeff McDowell
Kaimin Senior Editor

The presence of asbestos on the University of Montana campus is widespread but apparently not a serious hazard, according to a recent study.

D.J. Pinchin Technical Consulting Ltd. of Mississauga, Ontario, recently completed a five-week, $44,000 study of asbestos in all UM buildings. According to the study, "asbestos-related problems at UM are less extensive than would normally be encountered in a university this size."

The Pinchin report is the latest development in concern at UM about the presence of asbestos, a material widely used in building construction during recent decades.

The consulting firm analyzed 147 samples taken from all buildings owned by the university, and found sprayed asbestos material in 11 of them. According to the report, the sprayed material found in UM buildings is well covered with paint, which reduces its friability, or tendency to crumble. That in turn reduces its potential hazard.

Asbestos, a mineral known to cause two types of lung cancer as well as asbestosis, an incurable lung disease, is found in some form in almost every UM building, the study said.

The presence of asbestos in some products, such as floor tiles, is generally insignificant, according to the report, but products such as sprayed insulation on walls and blanket

Regents prepare shopping list for 1985 Legislature

By Dave Fisher
Kaimin Reporter

The Board of Regents is gearing up to ask the 1985 Montana Legislature for more money, and several University of Montana requests are included on the regents' shopping lists, according to Mike Easton, UM Vice President of Student and Public Affairs.

In addition to requesting a $7.4 million increase in basic operating costs of the statewide system, the regents will ask the Legislature to pay for a new $11 million business administration building and a new $1 million central computer system for the campus, Easton said.

Besides the business building and computer, he said, the regents want $274,000 to hire more research and overhead staff at the Yellow Bay Biological Station; $431,000 for expanded research facilities at the Lubrecht Experimental Forest; and $29,000 for the soon-to-be-completed Performing Arts/Radio-TV Building.

None of the requests are sure bets to survive the Legislative budgeting, Easton said, but inclusion in the regents' budget means they have cleared their first hurdle.

The regents' budget is only one of three competing budgets the Legislature can choose from when it makes its final decision on university financing next spring. It can also devise its own.

The Legislative Fiscal Analyst's office and the governor's office both submit budgets that often propose spending amounts significantly lower than the regents' budget, but both generally use the regents' budget as a guideline for the recommendations.

Each competing budget will be divided into three parts; basic operating costs, program modifications, and long-range building plans.

The basic operating costs section will include requests for the day-to-day operations including faculty salaries, building maintenance, library facilities and administrative and secretarial services.

The budget writers will use a formula adopted by 1981 Legislature to estimate operating costs for each of the six campuses in the University System.

The formula multiplies student enrollment estimates by a figure known as the productivity ratio, a number intended to represent the average student credit load taught by each faculty member.

If the Legislature appropriates full funding of that figure, the University System will theoretically maintain salaries and staff at a level comparable to its peer systems in the region, Easton said.

Idaho State University, the University of Wyoming, and Northern Arizona University are among UM's peer institutions.

The Legislature appropriated about 97 percent of the formula in 1983, he said. The regents will lobby for full financing in 1985, he said. If they are successful, the basic operating budget for the system will increase by that $7.4 million.

Program modifications, the second section of the budget, include funding requests for new academic programs or improvements.

UM's law school faculty, computer, research station and fine arts building maintenance requests fall under that section of the regents' budget, Easton said.

The fine arts maintenance request receives top priority among UM requests in the regents' budget, he said, and is the only one virtually assured of passage in the Legislature, since it requests money necessary to maintain an existing building.

Easton said he has no way to gauge the chances of the other requests.

The Business Administration building request is second on the regents' list of major long-range building requests, behind a new $9.2-million special education building on the Eastern Montana College campus, he said.

Several long-range building requests for various roofing and electrical-wiring projects at UM also are virtually assured of passage, he said.

Mirage now a reality

By Eric Williams
Kaimin Senior Editor

After thousands of miles of travel, hours of negotiations and probably a few bottles of aspirin, University of Montana Athletic Director Harley Lewis and President Neil Bucklew were able to set a final date for the Mirage Bowl.

The UM football team will take to the field at noon Saturday, Nov. 17, in Tokyo against Army for the eighth annual Mirage Bowl contest. That translates to about 10 p.m. Nov. 16 in Missoula.

The Nov. 17 date "is the best of all worlds for us," Lewis said last week. It will give UM the opportunity to remain eligible for the Big Sky Conference title and will not interfere with any prospective 1-AA playoff dates.

UM and Army had been scheduled to hit the gridiron Nov. 18, Tokyo time, but that had to be changed because it conflicted with Japan's other big TV-sports event, the Asahi women's international marathon, and the date was changed to Nov. 25. That date did not sit well with UM and was unacceptable to Army.

Army turned it down because the Cadets want two weeks to prepare for their traditional clash with Navy. Playing Nov. 25 would also make it impossible for UM to be in the first round of the Division 1-AA playoffs scheduled the same weekend.

Earlier this month, Bucklew, Lewis and Army Athletic Director Carl Ullrich flew to

Missoula housing market tight for students residing off-campus

By Pam Newbern
Kaimin News Editor

The off-campus housing market in Missoula is tighter than it's been in years, according to local rental agencies, but students who search long enough probably will find a place to live.

"We've been seeing some people who are really having trouble," said Rick Wilcomb, owner of Garden City Property Management. Wilcomb, whose agency manages more than 300 rental units in Missoula, said many students never left Missoula this summer, while others came to town in August to find a place to live.

Wilcomb said his agency's rentals were full by Aug. 15, and no openings were expected until Oct. 1.

Rex Moss, owner of The Rental Hub, echoed Wilcomb's statements, saying the housing situation is "worse than normal" this year in Missoula.

"There was quite an influx this summer of people moving into the community," Moss said, which contributed to the tight housing market this fall. He said he thinks the situation will improve once the University of Montana begins its fall session and most students have found places to live.

Both Wilcomb and Moss said they thought students who searched long enough would be able to find some place to live. Wilcomb recommended students take any apartment they could find and then look for something better.

"That's all they can do," he said, adding students probably would have more success finding a place to live if they look for rentals which will be open in a few weeks, rather than those vacant now.

Moss said his agency is "really looking for places" that are currently vacant. He said he tries to have one employee calling landlords in Missoula constantly to find places for rent. In the past, the agency would find 10 new locations for rent every day, he said, adding that number is now down to three or four.

In addition to consulting rental agencies, students also can check the rental listings in newspapers or look through off-campus housing listings at the ASUM office in the University Center.

Many rentals listed in the newspapers are filled within a day or two. One landlord said earlier this month she received two calls on her apartment before 8 a.m. on the day it was first advertised in the newspaper. The callers raced each other to the rental, and the one who got there first took the apartment.

Students looking through the off-campus housing listings at the ASUM office may have better luck. Pam Grier, ASUM secretary, said her office had received several new listings the past week from landlords.

Grier said many of the listings were probably not advertised in other places, and students who kept up on new additions probably would have a good chance of finding a place.

At least one student who was looking through the ASUM listings for a place to live last week did not seem too concerned about finding a home.

"I knew it was going to be tough to find a place," said Brian Kaech, a transfer student from Ohio who arrived in Missoula about Sept. 17. Kaech said he had "lines on a couple of places" and added he had a place to stay during his search.

Other alternatives for students trying to find a place to live include Married Student Housing and the University Residence Halls.

Married students and graduate students are eligible to live in MSH and can place their names on a waiting list. All MSH units are full, according to Judy Hansen, a clerk at the MSH office.

Dormitory rooms still are available. For more information, call 243-2611.

Former UM law professor to receive reprimand

By Deirdre Hathhorn
Kaimin Associate Editor

The Montana Supreme Court has ordered that former University of Montana law professor Ronald Wyse be publicly reprimanded for disclosing confidential information about a client.

Wyse taught at the UM law school for eight years, where he was promoted to full professor status and received tenure. John Mudd, dean of the law school, said Wyse resigned last spring for family reasons.

Wyse was hired in 1980 by California state senator Alan Robbins, who was running for re-election. Robbins was charged with the statutory rape of a Missoula woman, and asked Wyse to investigate the woman's background.

The court found that Wyse violated the lawyer's canon of ethics in his investigation and ordered his public censure. The date of the censure, which will be held in Helena, has not been set.

Wyse obtained information on the girl from a closed file he found in the archives of the Missoula law firm of Warder, Thane and Haines where Wyse worked part time.

The file contained records of a case filed by the girl's mother in which she charged that the girl had been sexually harassed by her stepfather. No charges were pressed in the case.

The court also charged that Wyse obtained additional information from the clerk of court and court's attorney's offices in Missoula by posing as a member of the law firm representing the girl.

Robbins wanted the information to show the court that the girl had previously made false charges of sexual abuse in Montana. Robbins was acquitted by the California jury.

Mudd called the situation surrounding Wyse "unpleasant," but doesn't expect the controversy to have an effect on enrollment or the law students.

UTU lawsuit still in preliminary stages in court

The University Teachers' Union lawsuit against a faculty member and two former faculty members is still in a preliminary stage in Missoula District Court.

The UTU filed a civil suit last spring to force Robert Banaugh, Walter Briggs and Rahul Dhesi to pay either the union dues or an equivalent. The lawsuit asks for back dues, current dues, costs and attorney fees.

Banaugh is a professor of computer science. Briggs, formerly an assistant professor of computer science, now teaches at the University of Alaska, while Dhesi, formerly an assistant professor and chairman of the computer science department, now teaches at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind.

David Weber, a professor of accounting and finance, originally was named in the lawsuit. However, the action against Weber was dismissed after he settled out of court with the UTU by paying the dues but not joining the union.

According to Joan Jonkel, attorney for the UTU, and Robert Phillips, attorney for the defendants, both said they are awaiting a ruling by District Judge John Henson on a counterclaim by Briggs.

Briggs has asked for judicial review of an unfair labor practice charge he brought against the UTU. The initial charge and an appeal by Briggs were both denied by the state Board of Personnel Appeals.

At issue is the union security clause of the collective bargaining agreement between the UTU and the Montana University System.

The clause requires faculty members to pay dues and join the union, pay dues and not join the union or pay an equivalent amount to one of seven charities designated by the UTU.

According to court records, the defendants claim the UTU "has no authority to bind the defendants to any obligation that is not a term or condition of employment."

A faculty member cannot be dismissed for failure to pay either the dues or the equivalent fee. According to the security clause, if a faculty member fails to pay, the first step is for representatives of the UTU and the university administration to meet with the faculty member to discuss the matter and explain "the duties and obligations of the employee to him or her."

The second step is for the UTU to file a civil suit to require payment. The university itself is not involved with the lawsuit.

Performing Arts Building opening may be delayed

The University of Montana Performing Arts/Radio TV Building could be ready for use by the scheduled Oct. 28 completion date — if the work continues on schedule, according to Bill Howard, superintendent of the Great Falls based Sletten Construction Co.

Sletten is the main contractor for the $8.6 million glass and brick building.

Howard said the main problem with getting the work done on time is installation of an air control system. The system is needed to keep the humidity in the building at a constant level so the wood dance floors can be installed without warping, Howard said.

John Kreidich, UM planning and construction consultant, said the installation of the system was delayed by a contract dispute when Sentinel Construction Company, a subcontractor for the project, refused to do some of the final wiring. The contract dispute has been resolved and the final wiring is being finished, he said.

"We haven't given up on Oct. 28," Howard said, adding that Sletten Construction has had problems installing the wood floors, which cannot be laid until the air control system is working.

The building's timely completion, according to Howard, depends on cooperative effort among the four prime contractors—Sletten and three sub-contractors.

"Everybody is trying," Howard said. "We're going to do our best."

Howard said the contractors have applied for an extension because of problems with the floor installation.

"We feel that we're entitled to approximately six weeks after Oct. 28," Howard said. "That's how much time we've lost due to circumstances out of our control."

Kreidich said that if the building deadline is not met, the prime contractors could be fined $250 per day until the construction is completed.

In most cases, Kreidich added, the construction is delayed by some other factor. In this case, he said, construction was delayed in the first stages of the project because power and telephone lines blocking construction had to be moved.

Jon Drake, construction bureau chief of the Montana Department of Administration, said a 20-day notice is required before the deadline if the contractors know they will not meet it. He said the MDA has not received a formal extension appeal from Sletten.

If the deadline cannot be met and an extension is required, it is likely that the MDA will grant it, Drake added.

Howard said the nearly completed building, located just north of the Harry Adams Field House and east of the Business Administration building, was vandalized during the summer.

It was "nothing really serious," he said, adding that the vandalism was caused by

"just some kids goofing off."

They appeared "ambitious," he said, because they used a ladder to climb on the roof and enter the building from above. Among the damages were burned blue prints, tic tac toe formations painted on the ceilings, graffiti, and acid poured in the showers.

Ken Willett, UM safety and security manager, said no suspects have been apprehended.

New chairman appointed for UM Radio-TV department

By Brian Justice

Kaimin Reporter

The University of Montana Radio-Television Department has gained a new chairman and associate professor for Fall Quarter—Joseph Durso Jr., a graduate of Cornell University with a bachelor's degree in biology and a master's degree from the Columbia University School of Journalism.

"This is a tremendously professional department," Durso said, calling the new equipment in the soon-to-be-completed Performing Arts Radio-TV building "a rare chance to do your thing in a terrific setting."

"We're at the verge of a brand-new era with radio and television," Durso said.

Durso began his broadcasting career in 1970 as a television news reporter for WETA, a public television station in the Washington, D.C. area. He later served as director of editorials and community affairs for WCBS Radio in New York, CBS's all news station.

Durso also served as director of the CBS Radio Station's News Service in Washington, D.C., which serves as the Washington bureau for the company's radio stations and as production and distribution center for news features.

He joined WBBM, a CBS-owned all-news station the Chicago area, in 1982 as director of news and programming. He resigned during the summer of 1984 to accept the UM position after acting chairman Philip J. Hess resigned to return to teaching full time.

Durso, an avid fisherman who grew up in the New York

City area, is the co-author of an article about fishing Montana's Bitterroot River in the April 1983 issue of Field & Stream magazine.

Despite the fact that the Missoula area offers access to excellent fishing and his wife's parents now live in Victor, Durso said "none of that would" have any bearing on his accepting the UM position if the UM Radio TV department didn't meet the professional standards that he desires.

In comparing UM's department to the other types of professional news work that he has done, Durso said "It (the work) is really completely different." Professional news is "different in just about everything" from teaching, Durso said.

Applications due

Student teaching applications for Winter Quarter are due by Oct. 5, according to Lyle Berg, University of Montana director of student teaching.

Students wishing to apply for student teaching positions Spring Quarter should submit their applications by Jan. 18, 1985. Applications should be picked up and returned at the Student Teaching and Certification Office, room 133 of the Liberal Arts Building.

The deadline for Fall Quarter applications was last April.

Lopach chosen acting director of Mansfield Center

A University of Montana professor has been appointed acting director of the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Center.

James Lopach, professor of political science, was appointed Sept. 1 to preside over the center's first year. He will report to Don Habbe, UM academic vice president.

Plans for the center, which will be located on the fourth floor of the UM Maureen and Mike Mansfield Library, began in 1978, two years after Mansfield, now U.S. ambassador to Japan, retired from the U.S. Senate. The regents approved the plans for the center in June, 1983.

The center honors Mansfield, a UM alumnus, for his commitment to high ethical standards and for his contributions to the nation's Far Eastern policy. Lopach said the purpose of the center is to focus on Mansfield's accomplishments by promoting studies on the Far East and in ethics and public affairs.

Lopach will supervise the hiring of a director for the center, who also will be a professor in ethics and public affairs. Another staff member—a professor of modern Asian affairs, will be hired too.

The positions probably will be advertised in a month or so, Lopach said, since the professors will begin teaching at UM next fall. Search committees composed of UM faculty, students and administrators will assist the hiring process, he added.

"I think the most important thing is to hire two individuals of high quality in these positions because they are the ones that are going to have to implement the programs," he said.

Lopach has taken a year off from his position as chairman of the UM political science department. Once his year-long tenure as center director is up, Lopach will return to the chairmanship.

Currently, Lopach teaches political science courses part-time, and Tom Payne, UM professor of political science, is acting chairman of the department.

In addition to coordinating the hiring of staff members, Lopach will establish and chair a Mansfield Center Advisory Committee. In consultation with the committee and with Habbe, Lopach will oversee conference planning, development of preliminary policy statements and preparation of the center's offices in the library.

Lopach said the center is asking the 1985 Legislature for $60,000 for construction of the center's offices, which will consist of a reception area, two employee offices and a seminar room. The library now uses the space as a study area.

Money for the Mansfield Center is raised by the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation, which also will finance a planned Mansfield Center for Pacific Affairs at Flathead Lake. Lopach said the UM center focuses on education, while the Flathead Lake facility will be used mainly for conferences and cultural exchanges. The centers are independent of each other, he added, but will coordinate closely on events.

The next event planned for the UM center is a Burlington Northern conference to be held next year. Lopach said

BN recently donated $250,000 to the Mansfield Center. The money will be invested, and the interest accrued will be used to finance the conference. Lopach said the BN conference still is in the planning stages, and no specific topics have been chosen for it yet.

Lopach serves on the UM Mansfield Center Executive Committee and has been involved in all phases of the center.

A native of Great Falls, Lopach began teaching at UM in 1973 and became chairman of the political science department in 1977. He taught for a year at the University of Notre Dame, where he earned a doctorate in American government and public law.

New law would put more pressure on draft evaders

(CPS)—Rep. Gerald Solomon, author of the law that denies federal aid to students who refuse to register for the draft, says he may soon introduce a new law to apply even more pressure on students to sign up with Selective Service.

"My impression is Congressman Solomon would be encouraging schools' attention to concur with the Solomon amendment, which is the intent of Congress and the U.S. law," said Jeff Gleason, a Solomon aide.

Although no evidence exists that schools have actually established student support funds, Gleason said "some (schools) have said that's what they intend to do."

Harvard, Northwestern, Swarthmore and Yale universities did announce plans to give private aid to students who can't get federal aid, regardless of the reason.

Solomon's new amendment would cut off money for medical, dental, allied and other health profession schools that help non-registrants. That money is awarded under Title

VII of the Public Health Services Act.

Health educators, like aid administrators in 1982, are lobbying to alter the amendment before it reaches the House, claiming it's not the job of schools to force student compliance with Selective Service laws.

"We don't object to the underlying premise that students must register for the draft to get student aid, but it is quite another thing to expect the health professions schools to do the job of the Selective Service," said Marty Liggett of the American Association of Dental Schools (AADS) in an interview with Higher Education Daily.

The American Council on Education and the National Association of Land Grant Colleges have joined AADS to change the amendment, while other education and professional groups are withholding official reaction.

Even though 98 percent of the eligible men already have complied with draft laws, "it's a question of principle," said Gleason. "Even if a large portion of people are abiding by the law, you still want full compliance."

The illegal activity of a few students isn't fair to those who do register or to colleges and universities which abide by the law, he said.

As written, the amendment denies grants and contracts to schools that refuse to comply, Gleason said, and will affect only those schools.

"Remember, he (Solomon) is not sure he'll even offer the amendment," he added. "He'll decide before the House session begins."

WHAT EVERY STUDENT SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE DIFFERENCES BETWEEN LEASING A TELEPHONE AND LEASING A CHICKEN.

Yes, there are differences. And we think you should know what they are. Ask yourself these questions.

WHEN YOU LEASE A CHICKEN, DO YOU GET THREE MONTHS FREE DURING THE SUMMER?

Probably not. But when you lease your telephone from AT&T this fall, you won't pay any lease charges next summer. You can use your phone at home, and bring it back to school in the fall.

DO LEASED CHICKENS COME IN A SELECTION OF COLORS AND STYLES?

No. Chickens don't come in many colors. But the AT&T telephone you lease this fall comes in a variety of colors and three popular styles.

ARE LEASED CHICKENS REPAIRED FREE?

Don't kid yourself. Repairing a chicken is a delicate process that requires the work of expensive professionals. However, in the off chance your

AT&T leased telephone needs repairs, we'll fix it absolutely free when you visit any of our AT&T Phone Centers.

ARE LEASED CHICKENS SHIPPED DIRECTLY TO YOU?

Ship a chicken? Don't be silly. However, your AT&T leased telephone will be shipped directly to you after one call to 1-800-555-8111, or you can pick up your phone at any of our AT&T Phone Centers.

ONE FINAL QUESTION: DOES IT COST THE SAME TO LEASE A CHICKEN AS TO LEASE A TELEPHONE THIS FALL?

Hardly. While we have no hard data on the exact cost of leasing a chicken, we can tell you with some certainty that the cost of leasing a telephone this fall is far less than you might think.

The decision to lease a chicken or a telephone, of course, rests with you. But should you opt for the telephone, remember: you get three months free next summer, and you can take the phone home with you. There's a choice of colors and styles, free repair, and we'll ship you the phone or you can pick it up at any of our AT&T Phone Centers.

It doesn't cost much either. And that's something to crow about.

Several college football programs losing money

(CPS)--As the regular college football season and a new era in televised college sports begin, many campus officials complain their programs are losing money.

Thanks largely to a series of bitter lawsuits, battles with television networks and, ultimately, the June, 1984, U.S. Supreme Court decision to let individual schools and conferences negotiate their own TV contracts, the 1984 season could start an era in which football superpowers permanently eclipse the rest of the nation's programs, officials say.

Many already are urging a return to the old days of 1983.

"It's a disaster from an economic standpoint," said Tom Hansen, commissioner of the Pacific Athletic Conference (Pac 10), whose 10 members will gain little, if anything, from the new TV situation.

"It's obvious there isn't the money out there that there was last year," said UCLA sports department spokesman Mark Dellins. "It will take more appearances for less money to match last year."

"It's caused the NCAA (National Collegiate Athletic Association) and all of us a big mess," agreed Jim Walden, head football coach at Washington State University (WSU).

The "mess" arose from a 1982 lawsuit against the NCAA, which for 32 years had negotiated TV contracts for all college football games.

Two years ago the universities of Oklahoma and Georgia sued the NCAA, claiming individual schools had the right to say when, where, and for what price their football teams will appear on TV.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in June that the NCAA's exclusive control over football TV rights was, indeed, an illegal monopoly.

Now individual schools—or groups of schools like the Pac 10 and Big 10 conferences—frantically are negotiating their own deals with major networks, cable systems, and regional TV stations. And most observers fear that when the dust finally settles few teams will be better off than under the NCAA's voided TV plan.

"If everything goes right, we'll come close to breaking even" with last year, says the Pac 10's Hansen.

Nationwide, colleges will lose about $40 million in TV money this year, according to NCAA President John Toner.

"I think our members are feeling an economic crunch" as a result of the new TV plan, NCAA spokesman Dave Cawood added.

Toner estimates colleges this year will make only about half the $78 million in TV revenues they would have made under the old NCAA arrangement.

In a kind of exclusive, upper-crust version of the NCAA, the College Football Association—comprised of 63 major football powers—recently negotiated a $21-million deal to have ABC broadcast its games.

The Pac 10 and Big 10 conferences have likewise signed a $10 million deal to broadcast 16 games over CBS.

Other schools—lacking the clout and popularity of the CFA, Pac 10 and Big 10 teams—are signing contracts with TV stations and cable networks to broadcast their games regionally.

WSU, for instance, will earn about $600,000 in regional TV revenues this year, said coach Walden, $200,000 less than last year.

And worse, Walden added, because the superpower teams have scheduled most of the prime network TV time,

"we have no room to get on (national) TV even if we do great later in the season."

"The big teams are getting all the exposure, and my team is being shortchanged," he said. "That's just not fair to my players."

"Numerous, less-prominent institutions with fine football programs are now essentially shut out of any significant participation in the market for television," Toner said, creating a "panorama of diminishing opportunity."

Even Boston College, which last year earned over $1.5 million in four TV appearances, this year must appear eight times to make $750,000, according to BC head football coach Jack Bicknell.

The new conflicts, moreover, have colleges suing one another over which teams will appear on which network under whose TV contract.

UCLA, Southern Cal, the Big 10 and Pac 10, are suing ABC because it won't allow CFA members to appear on CBS when they play against USC and UCLA this fall.

The CFA "has offered compromises to get the games on TV," said CFA spokesman Dick Snyder, "but we can't abort our contract with ABC."

Until the suit is decided, schools with different TV contracts may not be able to televise their games, critics say.

Others can't even get TV contracts.

"We checked with the networks, Turner Broadcasting, ESPN, you name it, and none of them have any intention of covering" lesser-known college games, said Jim Delany, commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference, which consists of Division II schools.

Consequently, Ohio Valley members will lose "between $400,000 and $600,000" in TV revenues this fall, Delany said.

The chaos has made many sports officials ready to bring back the NCAA as their exclusive negotiating agent.

"I think we're all giving the NCAA more credit" than it got a year ago, said WSU's Walden. "I hope we can come up with some new plan that would allow the NCAA to get us out of this for next year."

In the meantime, he said, "I wouldn't be very proud of myself if I were Georgia or Oklahoma."

A Congressional subcommittee is considering legislation to overrule the Supreme Court, and allow the NCAA to establish a "legal" monopoly over college football TV rights.

"This is a new era in college football, and one that's still too early to assess," said subcommittee aide Jerry Waldron. "It's something that will be closely followed by Congress this year, and if there's too much abuse (Congress) may well consider passing a law to correct the situation."

Registration blues

Most University of Montana students faced few problems in getting classes they needed during autumn registration, according to Phil Bain, UM registrar, but that's no consolation to the few who find mostly closed sections when they try to register.

"I'm sure some individuals have problems in getting the classes they need, but that's always a problem," Bain said, adding that classes in interpersonal communications, racquetball and business fill up early and students who register later can't get some of the classes they need.

Kim Naru, a freshman in pre-engineering and computer science, wasn't able to get into a communications class when he registered Thursday at 3 p.m. He needed the class as a general requirement. Instead, he opted to take an elective computer science class to fill his schedule.

However, UM students who have gone through similar problems at registration will get a break in 1985.

According to Bain, a computer-controlled class registration system will be used at UM for the first time in mid-February 1985. Registration will begin two weeks before the start of Spring Quarter, when students can choose classes and talk with their advisers.

The university's computers will sort the information before the quarter begins. That way, Bain said, the class schedule can be arranged to accommodate students' needs. Alternate sections can be added to popular classes or larger classrooms can be used if needed.

Bain said the new system will eliminate long billing and payment lines.

LISA MAY BE TOO YOUNG to attend classes but she wasn't too little to avoid waiting in line at registration with her father Tom Lowry, a graduate student in accounting.

1984 to feature thriving UM sports program

By Doug Whittaker
Kaimin Sports Editor

Until this weekend, it was looking to be a good year for grizzlies. Bears were up 5 to 0 over Yellowstone tourists while here in Missoula, Griz and Lady Griz teams were staking out territory for themselves and seemed to be getting more than their share. That is, until this weekend.

Apparently, for the football Grizzlies anyway, that territory will not encroach on Idaho State's, who smashed UM on Saturday in the first conference game of the season for either school. The Griz may yet recover their winning ways, and still do hold a 2-1 record, but a once potent and aggressive offense needs to get back on track to balance an obviously struggling defense. Last Saturday could have simply been a bad day, but a mediocre Big Sky finish is about the best UM can expect.

Even less successful in the record book so far, the Lady Griz volleyball team has had to run from a number of big guns at a trio of tournaments, but has shown potential against a highly touted New Mexico squad. Look for improvement on their 4-11 record as they go on to face Mountain West foes and figure on a second or third place finish.

In cross-country, the other fall intercollegiate sport, both the men's and women's teams have raced off to an excellent start with decisive victories this past weekend. The young men's squad could produce a pair of stand-outs to carry them to the conference title while the women will probably have to depend on four or five runners placing near the top of every race. At the end of the year look for the men's team hovering around second place and count on the women, with their fabulous depth, to take the whole shot.

As winter comes on, do not look for the Grizzlies to hibernate, either. The Lady Grizzlies basketball team may well improve on their 27-4 mark of a year ago and go on to take a third conference championship in as many years. And while the men cannot hope to dominate like that, they will be a force in their league also. Taking advantage of superior team depth will make the difference. Gymnastics, swimming and men's wrestling also begin this winter, and they too should provide the University with exciting and competitive results.

Trying to maul intercollegiate rivals however, is not the only Grizzly activity on the agenda. Club sports and intramurals fill spaces left by the varsity program, as do open facilities, for those inclined to shirk organized sports.

clined to shirk organized sports.

But does that even cover it? Outdoor Recreation runs "common adventures" for the hiker, biker, climber, skier or water rat, as well as a resource center should one want to (and everybody ought to) head out on one's own. Running, hacky-sack, frisbee, hang-gliding, rodeo—if you can think of a sport, somebody at UM is going to be doing it.

Sports fanatics have it good here in Grizzly Country; a competitive intercollegiate program and a massive participatory one. This is one Grizzly species that is not threatened, but thriving.

In Brief

Cross-Country

The UM Men's and Women's Cross-Country teams opened their seasons with impressive victories this past Saturday. In the meets held at the UM Golf Course, the men's team hosted Weber State while the women's team held the UM Invitational with visiting teams from Weber State, Eastern Washington, Boise State and North Idaho.

The Grizzly men outdueled Weber State 21-36 over the 4.15 mile course, sweeping the top three places.

The Grizzly women took five of the top seven places on the 3.1 mile course.

Team results had Montana first with 20 points followed by Weber State with 36, Boise State with 85, Eastern Washington with 99 and North Idaho with 150.

Volleyball

The UM Volleyball team finished 14th out of 28 teams in the Brigham Young University Invitational tournament this past weekend at Provo, Utah. It was the team's third tournament of the season.

On Thursday, UM lost to Washington but beat Southwest Missouri. On Friday UM lost to Utah and later to Idaho, eliminating them from championship round consideration, advancing them to the consolation playoffs. There they overcame Washington State, but in their final match Saturday were defeated by Utah State.

The team is currently 4-11 heading into their Mountain West Conference opener against the University of Idaho.

Football Griz blasted in conference opener

By Mike Olinger
Kaimin Sports Reporter

The best words University of Montana Head Coach Larry Donovan could find to describe last Saturday's defeat at the hands of Idaho State were, "It's over."

It was the worst football defeat in 11 years for the Grizzlies. Montana took a 2-0 record and high hopes into their Big Sky Conference opener against Idaho State Saturday night but came away shellshocked after a 43-3 drubbing at the hands of the Bengals.

Starting quarterback Marty Mornhinweg was sidelined because of an injury suffered in last week's game and did not suit up for the game. Possibly the best aspect of this game is that it was not played before a home town crowd and can be quickly forgotten. These are the games that give coaches nightmares. Donovan enters his fifth year at UM, having compiled a 22-22 record to date. Coming off a Big Sky Conference Championship in 1982, the Grizzlies took an experienced team to the field in 1983 and sprinted to a 4-0 record. All this occurred without standout quarterback Mornhinweg who was forced to sit out the season because of an academic suspension. Then, injuries at key positions and the resulting shuffle in personnel along with bad breaks and poor play combined to cause the Griz to lose the last six games of the season. The 4-6 Grizzlies finished sixth in the conference.

The outlook is better this year despite questions about defense. Mornhinweg is back as an All-American candidate and was pegged by the conference sportswriters as the top prospect for Offensive Player of the Year in the Big Sky.

Mornhinweg exhibited these qualities in a superb offensive showing against Abilene-Christians, leading the Grizzlies to a season opening 43-28 victory. UM rolled up 530 yards on offense while the defense allowed 502 to the opponents. A victory is a victory however, and the home opener was ohhh-so-sweet.

One discouraging note was the injury to the most experienced member of the defensive line. Tackle Scott Poole suffered a fractured kneecap and was lost for the season.

Montana then took to the road to play Portland State, always a tough opponent. The Grizzlies had not won at Portland since 1974 and had lost the previous four matches. A repeat seemed in the making during the first half of this year's game as UM trailed 7-0 at intermission and had managed just 60 yards offensively. With a strategy change in offensive formations, UM scored twice to take a 14-7 lead early in the second half. The Grizzlies held on for an exciting 17-16 victory as Portland State's two-point conversion failed with just 27 seconds remaining when a UM defensive lineman batted down a pass.

This past weekend, however, the Idaho State Bengals showed UM why they were chosen as one of the three favorites for the Big Sky title. The "Throwin' Idahoans" bombed the Grizzly secondary for 359 yards and kept the defense off balance by running over, around and through them for another 201.

The defense had played a tough first quarter, causing three turnovers and keeping Idaho scoreless. Late in the first quarter however, defensive leader Jake Trammel, who plays inside linebacker, was forced to leave the game with a broken bone in his left hand. Donovan said he does not know whether Trammel will be able to play in next week's game.

When the senior linebacker left, he seemed to take the strength of the Grizzly defense as the Bengals offense exploded for 30 second-quarter points. Montana's only points came in the first quarter when the defense recovered a fumble on the Idaho one-yard line. With first and goal, Idaho threw UM for two successive losses and the Grizzlies could salvage only a field goal. Neither starting quarterback Bob Connors nor his substitute, Kelly Richardson, were able to generate any offensive threats. Richardson, who filled the signal-caller slot much of last year, has been playing at wide-receiver this season. Freshman quarterback Rob Kunka displayed some poise and received some valuable playing experience during the fourth quarter. The Grizzly offense, which before the Idaho game had committed only two turnovers, gave up four interceptions and raised their fumble total to three.

The defense, which had caused six turnovers in two games, afforded the offense more opportunities with four fumble recoveries and one interception against Idaho.

The Grizzly defense was questionable before the season, and now, due to a rash of injuries, has holes at several key positions. Against ISU three linebackers left the game with injuries and Ed Apostol, a freshman cornerback, was forced to play the unfamiliar position.

Freshmen are seeing plenty of action at other positions too. Defensive line, defensive back, tight end and offensive back slots are being regularly filled with first year players. Donovan said many of the first-year players will see action against Weber State next weekend.

In looking forward to the remainder of the season Donovan said, "We're two and one and a lot of teams would like to be there. We're hoping to get back on track and put this game in the past."

Fund raising for new football stadium on schedule

Although no dollar amounts will be released for a month, fundraising for the University of Montana football stadium "is on schedule."

William Zader, executive director of the UM Foundation, said numbers will be available when the Foundation officially kicks off a major fundraising effort in October. Along with raising money for the $2.9-million stadium, which will be built with private funds only, the campaign will include money for professorship and scholarship endowments, Lubrecht Experimental Forest and UM's Yellow Bay Biology Station on Flathead Lake.

Zader said a definite monetary goal has not been set for the effort, but added that the amount will be in the several millions and will take years to get. "That kind of money can't be raised overnight."

Athletic Director Harley Lewis said a target date of next spring has been set for starting construction of the 14,000-seat stadium, with completion expected before the Grizzly's home opener in the fall of 1986. Lewis said that is "a realistic timetable," and said much of the design work is already finished.

Zader said that, though he foresees no difficulties in raising the money for the stadium, UM may have to borrow some money to begin working on it in the spring because "the state will let us dig a hole in the ground" only if part of the money is available. He added that because the Foundation was able to raise $1.1 million for the Performing Arts/Radio-TV Building, it should have little difficulty in coming up with the stadium's price.

The UM Foundation has hired Brakeley, John Price & Jones, a California consulting firm that specializes in raising money, to help with the project.

Zader said that, historically, 80 percent of the money given for similar projects comes from 20 percent of the donors.

Neil Bucklew, UM president, said that, if one donor were to give something in the neighborhood of $1 million, there is a possibility of the facility carrying that person's name. But Zader added that, compared to similar structures across the nation, $1 million "would be quite a bargain" for buying the right to name it.

The stadium will be built on the practice field behind the Harry Adams Fieldhouse and will be constructed so that a dome could be added in the future.

A Missoula architectural firm, Fox, Ballas & Barrow Associate, has teamed up with Rossman, Schneider & Gadberry of Phoenix, Ariz., to design the stadium. Lewis said the Phoenix architects have designed several large facilities, including Northern Arizona's, the University of Portland's and one in Tacoma, Wash.

Last spring, UM students defeated a referendum which would have been the first step in putting $500,000 in student building funds towards the facility.

No nationwide tuition trends appear this autumn

(CPS)—In-state students at Michigan's four year state colleges and universities won't have to pay any more tuition than they did last year.

But students at Arizona's three state universities will pay 14 percent more, even though the national inflation rate has been around four percent since last fall.

Students nationwide, in short, are finding a mixed tuition picture as they start fall classes. While scattered colleges and university systems have managed to hold increases to a minimum, many other schools have imposed tuition hikes well above the inflation rate.

"There's no trend toward freezing or raising tuition that I'm aware of," said Brooke Dreslow, of the College Board. "There will be different states and institutions each year that freeze. Some stay stable for two years, then go up. Then others freeze the next year."

In mid-August, the College Board predicted total costs, which include room and board, books, supplies, transportation, and personal expenses as well as tuition, will rise an average 6 percent this fall.

The estimated tuition cost for a full-time University of Montana resident student beginning Fall Quarter 1984 is $341 per quarter. The comparable non-resident tuition is $905 per quarter. This does not include room, board, books or spending money.

At UM, all full-time students pay a flat rate for tuition. This means a student taking 12 credits pays the same tuition as one taking 18 credits. Students are required to have a total of 195 credits to graduate from the University. If a student averages 16 to 17 credits per quarter, he will complete a degree in four years. A student taking less than 16 credits each quarter will have to attend at least one additional quarter before he can graduate.

Some colleges, of course, have been more successful than others in keeping increases down.

Administrators at all of Michigan's four-year colleges took Gov. James Blanchard's offer to freeze in-state undergraduate tuition in exchange for an 11 percent increase in state funding.

"There was some concern among administrators that tuition was too high," said Ron Jursa of Michigan State Higher Education Management. "Colleges were afraid of being priced out of the market."

"I think the freeze is good," said Jim Labadie, a senior at Wayne State University in Detroit. "But tuition is still fairly high. I think we're still among the top ten in the country in terms of high tuition rates."

Tuition freezes, in fact, typically don't last. The University of New Mexico has followed last year's tuition freeze with a 10 percent hike this year.

"The 10 percent reflects the change in state funding," said UNM budget director Jim Wiesmann. "We also needed to make up somewhat for the 1983-84 freeze."

And this year's freeze in the state of Washington could translate into a 24 percent increase during the 1985-87 period at state community colleges, said Kate Brown, of the Washington Association of Community Colleges.

The cost of education continues to climb, she noted, and while inflation is only 4 to 5 percent nationally, the Higher Education Price Index, which measures the costs of goods and services to colleges, is running at 10 to 11 percent increases.

Colleges will spend a total of $85.5 billion this school year, according to a National Center for Education Statistics report released last week.

In Arizona, legislative pressure on campuses to raise more money to pay the higher costs convinced the Board of Regents to kick up tuition 14 percent at the three state universities.

"Tuition is set by the regents," said Otis Elliott, spokesman for the regents. "But it's certainly influenced by the governor and the state legislature."

But when legislators and the governor attempted to raise in-state tuition at the State University of New York system, student protest helped kill the proposal.

"The students made their unhappiness clearly known," said Dick Gillman of SUNY Affairs and Development. "We have a pretty strong student body. They went directly to the legislators. Tuition stayed where it was, which pleased us very much."

At least one school managed to roll back tuition this year.

First through third year students at George Washington's med school will pay 1.4 percent less—or $250—than last year. Fourth year students get a $100 tuition decrease, from $17,000 to $16,900.

Even those tiny rollbacks, however, are rare nationwide as many schools impose double digit increases again this fall.

Penn State's increase, for example, is 10 percent for 1984-85. An administrative study shows costs at Penn have increased 170 percent since 1972.

"We have looked at every available avenue for breaking the 16 year cycle of tuition increases," University President Bryce Jordan said this summer. "Unfortunately, this year's budget reflects the cumulative effects of past underfunding."

Oklahoma students face 10 percent in-state and 15 percent out-of-state increases this year because of legislative cuts in education funding.

Private colleges and universities are averaging tuition increases of approximately 7.5 percent in 1984-85, the College Board says.

Stanford raised tuition 7.5 percent, considerably below its 10.7 percent average yearly increase since 1971. But in the past decade, the school has risen from eighth to sixth place in tuition costs among comparable institutions.

Cornell and Dartmouth students will pay 7.9 percent more this year. Administrators blame higher energy and maintenance costs and diminishing federal college aid funds for the jump.

Universities crack down on overnight dorm guests

(CPS)--University of Florida students soon may find their indoor nocturnal activities curtailed by a ban on members of the opposite sex spending the night with them in residence halls and fraternity houses.

And if Florida and other colleges are any indication, students everywhere may soon be facing tough new restrictions on what they can do in campus housing.

Florida decided to think seriously about joining the growing number of colleges that restrict visiting hours when a university task force suggested the changes in July.

Student reaction was mixed.

The 13-member task force, made up of faculty, students and community representatives, was reacting to an alleged rape at a fraternity house and a campus hearing into a student's complaint about being disturbed by late-night visitors, said Hugh Cunningham, director of university information.

"Currently, overnight visitation is not permitted," Cunningham noted. "But 24-hour visitation is, so obviously overnight visitation probably exists."

Among the suggestions were in-house monitoring by students and staff of individual residence halls, and live-in adult supervision in fraternity houses.

Most fraternity members reacted "very well" to the recommendations, reported Tom Dougan, campus fraternity advisor, though many feel they have been singled out because of the alleged rape this spring.

"In the coming year we'll start staffing the fraternities with grad students or house mothers," Dougan said. "But most fraternity members don't feel the presence of a house mother would have prevented what allegedly occurred."

Last week, a 16-year-old girl visiting UF claimed she was raped at a pre-rush party at Sigma Alpha Epsilon, which does not have a resident adult supervisor.

UF police are still investigating the incident.

Some fraternity members also say they can't afford the $15,000 a year to hire a house mother.

Student reaction to the suggestions was minimal because of the summer release of the task force's report, but Cunningham expects more feedback as students return to campus this fall.

Florida is one of a number of colleges that have changed overnight visitor policies recently. While sign in/sign out sheets and curfews are outdated, restricted guest hours are replacing the more liberal policies promoted in the sixties and seventies on many campuses.

In 1980, the University of Pittsburgh revised its 24-hour visitation policy and now restricts overnight guests to the same sex. Kent State, Kansas and Alabama, among others, soon followed suit.

The changes at Pitt and Kent State were prompted by dormitory murders.

Administrators there and at other schools cite security as the reason for the changes.

Students themselves are the ones asking for the stricter housing policies, claimed Paul Jahr, research committee chairman of the American Association of College and University Housing Officers (ACUHO).

"The nature of college students in general is changing," he explained. "They are making an economic decision to go to college and they want to make the best use of their time."

Dorm visiting policies were a question "way back when," Jahr added, but as society has changed in the past two decades, so have students.

"Most students now were born after Kennedy was assassinated," he says. "They've grown up in a more permissive society and the question of visitation hours just isn't that big an issue to them."

Some students, however, are unhappy with college administrators' attempts to regulate visiting hours regardless of security or social reasons.

Western Illinois University student Pat Botterman and ex-student Craig Roberts are suing WIU over its attempts to end a 14-year open-door policy.

WIU wants to ban co-ed visits after midnight on weekends and after 2 a.m. on weekends, with the curfew ending at 8 a.m.

Botterman claims the change violates the student constitution, approved by the university's Board of Governors, which specifies that students will be consulted in every level of policymaking.

"The administration brought out the policy with no debate," he said. "The students protested. The current policy has been in effect since about 1969 and dorm residents vote by floor on visitation hours."

Botterman and Roberts actually will file two suits. One, alleging violation of the student constitution, may be settled by the university's Board of Governors in September, Botterman hopes. The other, protesting the proposed policy changes, will probably require court settlement.

Visitation rules also have been challenged at Alcorn State University in Lorman, Mississippi. A female student sued the university for extending her one-semester suspension to two for violating the policy.

Memorial fund established in honor of UM student

A fund has been established to honor the memory of Matthew Hansen, an honors student at the University of Montana who died earlier this year of cancer.

Hansen was 23 at the time of his death last April.

The Matthew Hansen Endowment for Wilderness Studies will offer support grants to independent scholars, writers and students for research and writing on Montana. Areas specifically named in the endowment are wilderness studies, historical research and creative writing.

Hansen was a former UM student in the wilderness and civilization program of the forestry school's Wilderness Institute and an honors graduate in Montana history. He was also co-founder and first president of the Rocky Mountain Front Advisory Council, founded to provide information on habitat and wildlife along the eastern boundary of Montana's Bob Marshall Wilderness. Additionally, Hansen worked on the oral history project of the Montana Historical Society.

The endowment advisory committee consists of Henrietta Whiteman, director of the Native American Studies program at UM; James Welch, an internationally known writer, Bill Cunningham, director of the Montana Wilderness Association, based in Helena; a member of Hansen's family, Dr. George Schemm, who is a neurosurgeon and conservationist; and Robert Ream, director of the Wilderness Institute at UM and member of the Montana House of Representatives.

Welch, author of such books as "Winter in the Blood" and "The Death of Jim Loney," said it is the goal of the endowment to provide adequate financial support to one or more projects each year.

"We are hoping to attract grant applications from people who have an interest in and commitment to Montana. This is a state in which people are looking at the great natural resources available. But if we exploit those resources, we must do so intelligently. It is our hope that the endowment in Matthew's name will help us all understand Montana better through the history, research and creative writing the grant will foster," Welch said.

The deadline for grant applications is Feb. 20, 1985. Welch said he hopes to see proposals about many different areas of Montana.

An advisory committee release said "We are not strictly interested in applicants who have a strong academic or research-oriented background. People who have a great interest in Montana future are encouraged to submit proposals."

The endowment is being administered by the UM Foundation. Contributions are tax-exempt and may be made out to the "Matthew Hansen Endowment for Wilderness Studies." Checks should be sent to the UM Foundation, 600 University Avenue, Missoula, MT, 59012.

Sears intern chosen

Timothy K. Huneck, a senior in journalism from Columbus, Ohio, has become the 19th University of Montana journalism student to receive a Sears Congressional internship.

Huneck, a straight-A student and managing editor of the campus daily newspaper, the Montana Kaimin, was one of 20 journalism students throughout the country selected for the program, which begins in Washington, D.C., Feb. 1. He was the only student selected from a university in the Northwest.

The internships give outstanding junior and senior journalism students the opportunity to spend three months on the staff of a U.S. senator or representative.

Huneck won the 1984 Lee Newspapers of Montana award for outstanding performance as a journalism student, and was an intern in 1983 for the Tobacco Valley News in Eureka.

Students face battle of bulge

(CPS)—If you're a college freshman, arm yourself for a four year battle of the bulge.

A just-released study of Penn State students, by nutritionist Jean Harvey and two other researchers, reveals men gain an average of 9.1 pounds during their first year of college and women average a nine-pound gain.

The extra pounds continue to sneak up each year. Sophomores gain 7.3 pounds while juniors put on seven pounds and seniors 6.5 pounds, the study found.

Many students blame fattening dorm food, but Harvey said the study exonerates it.

"Residence (on or off campus) wasn't a factor in weight change," she said. "So students' claim that dorm cafeteria food caused the gains aren't accurate."

The questionnaire, sent to 2,400 Penn State undergraduates, drew about 1,000 responses to 36 questions about weight, eating and exercise. Results show 67 percent of the men questioned and 62 percent of the women admitted gaining weight.

Only senior respondents lost weight, apparently thanks to exercise, Harvey said.

Emotional and psychological factors, such as living away from home, weren't surveyed, but Harvey said he had "a feeling people at Penn State are planning a study to determine the influence of these factors on student weight gain."

No one knows if all students put on pounds at the same clip Penn State students do.

The American College Health Association shows no record of any national surveys similar to the Penn State study, though a 1970 federal study determined college students were an average of six pounds heavier than the students of 1960.

Yet, overweight students and health and nutritional concerns have prompted many colleges to institute diet and exercise programs.

Wayne State University in Detroit bases weight control on behavioral methods to improve eating habits.

Many student health clinics publish diet tips in campus newspapers, especially during the spring "get-in-shape" rush.

In 1982, Stanford developed a dorm nutrition program, posting nutritional information for cafeteria food. It listed the caloric, fat and cholesterol contents of each item it served.

A similar program exists at the University of the Pacific in Stockton, Calif.

Dietician Joan Nikirk calls it an "educational program, presented mainly through posters and pamphlets, to make students aware of basic food groups and nutrition."

MY ARTS DIARY

The state of the arts: looking for the upbeat mood

THE ARTS EVENT OF THE SEASON may well be the return of Zonker (above) to daily newspapers everywhere, as cartoonist and part-time social critic G. B. Trudeau reactivates "Doonesbury" after a 20-month layoff, just in time for the November elections. The Kaimin will carry the strip as soon as it becomes available. (Drawing copyright 1984 G. B. Trudeau.)

By Rob Buckmaster

Kaimin Arts Columnist

Dear Diary—September 25, 1984—As I arrived in Missoula after a wildly western summer in Virginia City, I wondered what the state of the arts would be in my hometown of Missoula. On my mind recently was the author of the Official Preppie Handbook, who says that the University of Montana's surroundings are almost as beautiful as the Swiss Alps, while Time magazine's most recent cover is boasting of "America's upbeat mood."

Well, Missoula is not quite the Swiss Alps. It lacks that European ambience. Missoula doesn't even have the wide cultural opportunities of Seattle or any of the big cities of California (not to mention the east). But the mood at the Top Hat is as upbeat as ever, and, judging from an overstuffed arts calendar, the opportunities to "sample" are also within my grasp. Here's some of what can be expected fall quarter.

THEATER THEATER THEATER

The University of Montana's Drama department has compiled a season that will be filled with more contemporary comedy and drama than in its sometimes stodgy past. Sam Shepard's "Fool for Love" and Ira Levin's "Deathtrap" are some of this spring's more popular titles, as well as Shakespeare's classic "Taming of the Shrew."

This fall expect a revival of Riverfront Summer Theatre's "Pajama Game", as well as the recent "American Buffalo" and "Lady House Blues." Alan Ayckbourn's "Bedroom Farce" will wind up the quarter.

Off campus, Theater Alert (formerly Proteus Productions) always promises up-to-date and interesting titles. If you're in the mood for a musical, the Missoula Children's Theatre will undoubtedly produce one or two sparkling extravaganzas every quarter. "Annie" starts a season that MCT hopes will be "the one you've been waiting for."

MUSIC MUSIC MUSIC MUSIC

Some weeks the Music department has more performances a person could ever attend. This fall is no different. The choirs plan a Christmas Choral Concert in early December. Voice, piano and flute recitals are slated throughout the quarter. The kickoff will be Dennis Alexander's Faculty Piano Recital October 16.

The University Wind Ensemble has a performance scheduled for November 30 and the UM Jazz Band season starts November 9. Chamber music by faculty and students begins with "An Evening of Faculty Chamber Music" on October 30.

ART ART ART ART ART ART

Campus galleries include the Gallery of Visual Arts in the Social Sciences Building, now showing paintings and mixed-media pieces by UM faculty, and the University Center Gallery, offering around 20 works by photographer William Munoz.

Other Missoula galleries of interest include the Northwind Gallery (specializing in graphic art and posters), the Wonderworks Gallery and Studio (watercolors and silkscreens) and the Missoula Museum of the Arts.

DANCE DANCE DANCE

The Dance department always has numerous concerts and workshops during the year. The two major dance concerts are scheduled winter and spring quarters. The Magic Movers, a professional dance troupe from UM, plan a concert in January.

A variety of concerts by local dance studios such as Danceworks and Dance Network are also in rehearsal for the fall. Dates and times will be announced later.

ASUM PROGRAMMING ASUM

The 1984 Performing Arts Series is titled "Around the World in 12 Great Events." The emphasis appears to be a variety of international performers. American Ray Charles and his orchestra, the Raylettes, start the series on October 14.

The Fall Film Series should be a success, with such titles as "Fanny and Alexander", "The Hunger", "Racing with the Moon" and "Singing in the Rain," among others.

(Submissions to the Arts Diary should be turned in to Journalism 206 no later than the Friday prior to the week of your event.)

Nightclubbing

'... 'til Daddy took the T-Bird away'

By John Kappes

Kaimin Arts Editor

Fun, regrettably, is a free-market concoction. It's permanently sold out in those drab socialist kingdoms of the cinder block the Russians keep setting up on our front porch. Even when its different brands share an ingredient—booze, for instance—they remain securely sealed in separate wrappers, each garish and extravagant.

Now Missoula boasts a fun surplus. But newcomers will need to match product to taste—no easy job. To help, we'll have to indulge our lower natures for a moment and haul out the stereotypes. Luckily, self-indulgence is no stranger to fun.

Here, then, is a selection of nightspots where fun is yours for the buying. As a former head football coach at Ohio State once put it, "No guts, no glory."

THE LIVING

Stockman's (125 West Front): "Stocks" is always crowded on weekends. October, February—always. Part of the charm here is wading through a hot, sweaty crowd of white polo tops, English Leather and plastic earrings just to fetch a Coors or find the tiny bathrooms. Everyone you met at rush will be there, or will claim to have been there. So you can actually go, or you can claim to have gone. No one will know for sure, but everyone will care.

Stocks is an institution.

DRINKS: Coors, Rainier, Coors.

MAJORS: Business, HPE.

MUSIC: Jerry Jeff Walker ("Redneck Mother"), Huey Lewis ("I Want a New Drug").

PHRASE: "shitfaced."

Mary's Place (above Corky's, at 119 West Main): Mary's is still the beat/jazz/boho capital of the Pacific Northwest, but now there's a Top 40 band on weekends (the Reactors, who play with a skinny-tie/new wave inflection). Small, a trifle cliquish, but always fascinating.

DRINKS: downstairs.

MAJORS: English (MFA), art, music.

MUSIC: Miles Davis, Pat Metheny, the Cars.

PHRASE: "... graduate program..."

Connie's (130 West Pine): Connie's used to be O'Laughlin's, and was Connie's before that. Even when it was O'Laughlin's, though, people called it Connie's. Friendly, reasonably quiet (except when they turn on the tape deck that plays at three-quarter speed) and filled with aspiring journalists, it's well suited to serious, late-night drinking. Thank God.

DRINKS: JD, vodka tonic.

MAJORS: Journalism.

MUSIC: Beatles ("Get Back"), Stones.

PHRASE: "outta there."

THE DEAD

The Trading Post Saloon, home of one-word pop metal (Lion, Patriot, et al.), has become the Rodeo Company, home of MOR country. The Tijuana Cantina, which was once the mighty Forum, is closed for good. One-word metal now lives at the Rocking Horse in Southgate Mall and at the Carousel, 2200 Stephens. Both bars are for adults, as in polyester, and like to serve pastel-colored drinks in big frosted glasses. For fans only.

THE UNDECIDED

Oxford (337 North Higgins): The Ox is the one place in town where anyone can go, anytime, regardless of anything at all, wearing whatever he wants, almost, and NOT GET HASSLED. They have the finest polished wood bar in the area, interesting employees and the best beer-and-burger special since the Mo Club (which has nowhere near the Ox's, ah, class). Recommended.

DRINKS: what's on tap.

MAJORS: all.

MUSIC: none.

PHRASE: "We don't have a cashier."

Maxwell's / The Ritz (in the old Palace Hotel, at 147 West Broadway): An upscale singles bar, with a twist. The Ritz, a Deco cabaret, offers Casablanca's unique cocktail jazz on weekends. It's more than a little androgynous, this whole scene, but cynical enough to be sound. Highly recommended.

DRINKS: Long Island Ice Tea, Bud Light.

MAJORS: Drama, religious studies.

MUSIC: Duke Ellington, James Taylor.

PHRASE: "... is he ... ?"

Luke's (231 West Front): A lot of people are afraid of this place, because they think it's a biker bar. It is. It's also a good place to hear everything

Anonymous gift given for scholarship

The University of Montana Foundation has received a gift of $350,000 from anonymous donors to endow Erasmus Scholarships at the university for 10 years.

The scholarships for 1983-84 and 1984-85 are financed by gifts from the same donors. The awards were first given for 1983-84 to 24 students, who received a total of $42,000.

Erasmus scholarships, which range from $500 to $4,000, are for full-time students, including incoming freshmen, transfer students and graduate students. They are granted on the basis of financial need and other factors to students who have shown a determination to work toward humanistic ideals.

Applicants must be majors in philosophy, English, history, political science, foreign languages and literatures, environmental studies, or interdisciplinary studies linked to these disciplines.

Law students also are eligible.

The scholarship money is administered by the UM Foundation and the philosophy department, and recipients are chosen by the philosophy department.

Asbestos

insulation around pipes and equipment pose a greater risk.

The report recommended four approaches to deal with asbestos in UM buildings: removal, encapsulation (such as several layers of paint), enclosure with a physical barrier, or deferred management and custodial control in such out-of-the-way areas as underground pipe tunnels.

The report also noted that factors determining the relative hazard of asbestos include: material condition, water damage, exposed surface area, accessibility, air flow, friability, asbestos content and the maintenance work required in a given area.

Because of the work done by UM maintenance workers, they are most at risk to exposure to the asbestos hazard. Workers involved with projects that expose them to asbestos wear special suits and respirators and use air monitors to determine the level of asbestos at the work site. They also use high-power, high-efficiency vacuums to collect loose asbestos. The vacuums also attach to saws and drills used on sprayed panels, and the material is wetted to reduce dust levels.

Lynda Brown, Equal Opportunity and Personnel Services director, said two workers have filed workers' compensation claims in regard to asbestosis.

Since the workers are not disabled, are not off work nor receive compensation now, Brown said the claims apparently were filed now in case a disability develops later. She said information now available regarding the claims will be on file later in that event.

A campus task force also was formed last year to study the asbestos problem and recommend solutions. The task force was disbanded at the end of Spring Quarter, but chairman Wayne Van Meter, a chemistry professor, said he is generally satisfied that if the conditions set by the Pinchin report are met, "it will result in a successful handling of the problem."

"If the workers are properly trained and are conscientious, the program will succeed," he said.

However, Van Meter was critical of the recent demolition of a building across from the Lodge since asbestos had been used to insulate the heating system. Van Meter said, "Good sense as well as federal regulations dictate that the asbestos be removed...before the demolition occurs."

Richard Walch, Physical Plant operations supervisor and head of the asbestos cleanup program, noted that the Pinchin report recommends removing asbestos products during major remodeling projects.

As part of the asbestos cleanup, the Physical Plant is working on 10 major projects and has completed nearly all of them. Walch said those projects include removing asbestos pipe insulation in the basements of Brantly and Elrod halls and repairing or enclosing pipe insulation in McGill Hall (Women's Center), the University Theatre and the Music Building.

Walch said such major projects will be done between quarters and during the summer to avoid exposing more people than necessary to asbestos. Some minor projects, such as reinsulating where asbestos has been removed, can be done during the regular school term, he said.

Mirage

Japan to meet with executives of Mitsubishi and its subsidiary, Teleplanning, the company sponsoring the contest. The meeting followed months of long-distance negotiations, which Lewis said were unproductive because UM and Army officials were "unable to talk with the decision makers" in Japan.

He said because the three parties, UM, Army and Teleplanning, were able "to talk directly, eye to eye," they were able to accomplish more in one day than had been in the previous "distressing and frustrating" three months.

But Mitsubishi's decision to switch the date to please the two schools was not the only conceding done during the negotiations. Initially, UM was to send an entourage of 171 people, (at Mitsubishi's expense) but that number was cut to 158. Further, Lewis said they made "a modest compromise on the game guarantee," in which UM will receive $45,000 rather than $50,000 for playing. The team will also leave the day of the game rather than staying an additional night.

Army's contingent was reduced from 250 to 220 and its guarantee dropped from $150,000 to $130,000. Lewis said the guarantees are based on the size of the teams' home stadiums.

Along with the UM team, its support staff of coaches, trainers and the like, the cheerleaders and the president's party will make up the UM 158-person group. Lewis said he also expects nearly 350 UM supporters to take tours centered around the game.

UM and Army had considered playing the game at West Point, and UM had lined up the University of Ohio to play in Tokyo if an arrangement could not be made to include the Cadets.
