This course introduces you to the major approaches to the study of ethics within the Western tradition. We'll supplement our philosophical reading with some vital American history and art from the 20th century.

Required Texts
Julia Driver, Ethics: The Fundamentals
Isabel Wilkerson, The Warmth of Other Suns

I have placed optional readings on Moodle. You will also find a copy of the syllabus there.

How the Course Works
Exams: There are three in-class exams worth, respectively, 25%, 35% and 40% of your final grade. As a rule, I will not offer make-up exams; you will receive a zero for any exams not taken. The exams will be short answer based on the lectures and readings.

Attendance and Etiquette: Attendance is critical, but there are too many of you for me to keep track of it. Come to class regularly, and be sure to get notes from a colleague if you miss one. You’ll get much more out of the course, including a better grade.

To avoid disrupting our collective learning space, please make a point to arrive on time and stay for the duration of the meeting unless you have made prior arrangements with me (in which case I’ll ask you to sit near the door). Occasional late arrivals will be tolerated, but repeat offenses will lead me to ask you to drop the course. You should ignore your cell phone for the duration of the meeting. We’ll sometimes take a five-minute break in the middle of our meeting and you should pay any visits to the restroom or to your cell phone at this time.

I would rather you did not use a laptop in class, but if you need one to take notes, please sit in the back.

Academic Misconduct
In fairness to your classmates, I’ll hold you strictly to the UM Student Conduct code (http://www.umt.edu/SA/). The exams are closed-note: you are not to consult anything, except your own mind, while taking them. Absolutely no cell phones or other devices may be used during the taking of exams. You’ll receive a zero for any exam that you cheat on. University sanctions may also be applied.
Special Needs
Let me know at the beginning of the term if you will need accommodations from Disability Services for Students (DSS). If you need to take your exams through DSS, you must arrange this in advance, and you must provide verification of your disability from DSS. You can find more information at http://www.umt.edu/dss/
