Koch fears impact of CI-27

By TAMARA MOHAWK

Kaimin Reporter

If property taxes are abolished in Montana, the University of Montana would lose the amount of money required to fund the schools of business, education and fine arts, according to UM President James Koch.

Koch used those schools as examples in an interview Tuesday to illustrate how Constitutional Initiative 27, which would abolish property taxes, could affect UM if it is approved by the voters of Montana in November.

"It would really end the university as we know it," Koch said, adding that 3,596 students are enrolled in the programs he mentioned as examples.

Local governments and public schools derive much of their income from revenue gained by the statewide property tax.

About $17 million from property taxes went to the state's six college campuses this fiscal year, Koch said.

Montana State University President William

Tietz has also criticized CI-27 as having potential to financially cripple MSU.

Koch said UM received about $4.4 million — or 12.2 percent of its budget — from property taxes this fiscal year.

"The impact would just be staggering," Koch said. "It would be a tremendous blow."

He said he did not yet know which programs and services might be eliminated to meet the budget cut if CI-27 passes.

But he said the amendment's consequences for UM would be felt the first year property taxes are abolished.

Koch said despite recent polls showing that CI-27 is not likely to pass, UM is "taking it very seriously."

He said he has been talking with Rotary clubs and other groups in several cities, including Great Falls, Billings and Kalispell, about the damage CI-27 would do to UM.

"We're trying to tell the university's story and the effect" of the initiative, he said.

RUNNING GURU Dr. George Sheehan delivers a "sermon" on exercise to believers and disbelievers Tuesday night in the Underground Lecture Hall. He said regular exercise will give a person more energy and a longer life.

Doctor-turned-runner touts exercise for body and mind

Exercise right. Eat right. Live long.

That's the advice Dr. George Sheehan gave about 150 spectators Tuesday night in the University of Montana Underground Lecture Hall.

The 67-year-old physician-turned-runner from New Jersey presented his speech "How to Feel Good 24 Hours a Day" in the first of the ASUM Programming fall lecture series.

Formerly a practicing cardiologist, he now writes books on physical fitness and running, tours the country giving lectures and competes in races.

Sheehan told his audience his mission was to promote "the generic drug, which is exercise. Your life depends upon it."

Overcrowded parking may soon end

By KEN PEKOC

Kaimin Senior Editor

Overcrowded parking at the University of Montana will be alleviated this year if three on-campus areas are ready to open, Ken Willett, UM safety and security manager, said Tuesday.

Two of the areas, a lot on the north side of Adams Field House and a portion of Campus Drive from the Physical Plant to Van Buren Street, closed when construction began on Washington-Grizzly Stadium. The parking areas will reopen when construction is completed.

About 195 parking spaces will again be available in those areas, Willett said.

The stadium will likely be completed by the end of the year, Bob McCraley, project manager for Washington Construction, said Tuesday.

He added that poor weather conditions have slowed stadium construction and could push the finish date to sometime in 1987. The stadium, however, should be ready for football games this fall.

The third parking area is a new lot which will be built in phases south of the Health Sciences building. The lot will add about 200 spaces when completed.

The lot will be bordered on the north and south by Keith and Beckwith avenues, respectively, and on the east and west by Helena and Maurice avenues.

Work on the new lot could begin by the end of October, Willett said, and a dirt or gravel surface could be ready for parking this year.

Three homes in the area, which are owned by the university, will be removed to build the lot, Willett said. Before the lot can be completed, two other homes must be purchased. Willett did not know when the final phase would be finished.

Until the new lot's completion, people searching for parking spaces will have to wait for nature's cooperation.

Fill a specimen bottle for someone you love

University of Montana athletes won't have to submit to drug tests this season because testing would be too expensive.

editorial

Human dignity will survive for at least another year, even if it owes its remaining life to a money shortage.

But the possibility of a mandatory drug test program has already cast a degrading shadow upon the university.

UM athletes in future years may have to prove their worth by scoring negative on a lab analysis instead of positive in character or ability.

Athletic Director Harley Lewis said recently that periodic testing of athletes could cost his department as much as $150,000.

He said he expects UM to establish a testing program when one becomes affordable.

Whether the UM athletic department can pay for a mandatory drug test program is moot.

But whether individuals on campus will ever be pressured into filling urine sample jars is critical.

Drug abuse is a problem. People die from it.

But forcing individuals to submit to such tests assumes they are guilty of drug abuse before proven innocent.

Student athletes on the whole, Lewis said, "have no problems" with the prospect of drug testing.

Those who have no problems with the prospect should fill one jar for themselves and one for someone who does.

Lewis says college athletes voluntarily place themselves in the public eye and they should do everything possible to keep themselves in a position that is publicly acceptable.

Nice theory. Bad solution.

Demanding submission to drug tests while holding the threat of a lost scholarship over an athlete's head is invasion of privacy on its lowest terms.

The athletic department should not establish a policy of suspicion with its people. It should practice trust.

Lewis said the department this year will administer a test only when an athlete is found to "have a documented drug problem."

The athlete with the problem would be subject to confidential "spot testing," Lewis said.

One hopes athletic department officials will use more than "spot judgment" when deciding whether to invade the privacy of the innocent people.

Wanted: On-campus Freshpeople

Reagan blinked. Daniloff was freed. The nation breathed a sigh of disgust. Time now to talk student government.

Abraham Lincoln or John F. Kennedy or Amy Carter once said that people get the kind of government they deserve. Someone else said that dogs end up looking like their owners.

These observations suggest one conclusion: student government is boring. There is no need to belabor the point, but why not?

For example, no honorable person ever hangs out at Central Board meetings. The handful or fingerful in the audience are invariably 1) conspiring politicians, 2) looking for money, or 3) newspaperers. Everybody has an ulterioriority complex.

But there student government is, year in after year out, practicing leadership and spending money.

Three delegates to Central Board have resigned or otherwise disappeared since last spring — and understandably so. Minus those deletions, the membership of the board is now at 20. Not one of those members is a freshman.

The long-suppressed truth is that the constitutional rights of freshguys are being downtrodden. They have been for years. The rules are wildly unambiguous, but Central Board sits around like an overturned turtle with its head in the sand.

The multi-talented ASUM constitution has this to say:

"That portion of the representatives from the dormitory district which corresponds to the percentage of dormitory residents who are non-freshmen shall be chosen in the spring election. The remaining delegates from the dormitory district shall be chosen in the fall election."

In broken English, this means that fresh elections should drop from heaven in the near future. There is just no why otherwise.

Ross Best

None of this is intended to reflect very personally on ASUM president Paul Tuss, who, by fastidiously refraining from barefaced bandithood, has so far branded himself a campus statesman. But isn't it about time ASUM learned how to read?

New students hit campus every year bubbling over with bright eyes, bushy tails, and the lust for power. They want to make friends and influence people. These new kids are the leaders of the day after tomorrow, yet they've had the ballot box stuffed out from under them.

So, here's the plan. One or two or three on-campus freshfolk should spontaneously walk up to ASUM and ask in no uncertain tones when the elections will be.

ASUM will say something like: "Oh, my, how very, very awkward, but you see, our constitution is, well, a bit antiquated. You know, inconvenient. We try to humor it, but really you shouldn't take it so seriously. We've been meaning to amend it any day now."

But that's no answer at all. Remind ASUM of its flyers, the ones that say "WE GIVE A DAMN." Ask why the three CB vacancies can't be filled with freshpeople.

When that doesn't work, drop subtle references to the ACLU, hunger strikes, and economic sanctions. Stand up for your rights. Participate.

And tell them William Rehnquist sent you.

(Ross Best is a senior in classics)

Environmental groups protest rain forest destruction

World Bank funds destructive development, groups say

By Deborah Richie
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

The World Bank is funding tropical rain forest destruction with American tax dollars, John Zelazny, coordinator for Environmental Study Advocates, said at a demonstration Tuesday in downtown Missoula.

"The World Bank is the most powerful bureaucracy that exists," Zelazny said. World Bank funding projects have contributed to the current loss of rain forests at the rate of 40 million acres per year, he said.

University of Montana EVST Advocates and Montana EarthFirst! joined forces to protest the World Bank's involvement in tropical rain forest destruction.

Bearing signs with slogans such as "World Bank, Friend or Foe" and "Rain forests: Our Responsibility," about 15 demonstrators in front of the Federal Building were part of a nationwide protest organized by the Rain Forest Action Network in San Francisco.

The event coincided with new World Bank President Barber Conable's address to the bank's board of directors in Washington, D.C.

tions agency which loans development money to member nations, and four other multi-lateral development banks are funded jointly by U.N. members. The U.S. government is the largest contributor to these banks.

"The types of projects most commonly funded are agriculture and rural development, energy and transportation, Zelazny said. "Unfortunately, these are also the most ecologically destructive."

Jake Kreilick, EVST graduate student who helped organize the protest, said private banks lend three times as much money to developing countries. People concerned about rain forest destruction should also boycott these major banks, he said.

"Right now, developing countries are using up their resources to repay loans and only digging themselves a deeper hole," Kreilick said.

Richard Fritz-Sheridan, professor of botany, said after the demonstration that the World Bank has made progress by supporting formation of National Parks within developing countries as an exchange for money owed by those countries.

Fritz-Sheridan said he teaches a course in tropical botany and has lived and researched in tropical rain forests of the French West Indies and Lesser Antilles.

In the delicate rain forest ecosystem, he said, where over two-thirds of the world's plant species are found, natural disturbances are minimal. Fritz-Sheridan said, but when rain forests are cut, burned and grazed they could take 1000 years or more to regenerate. He added that data on regeneration are very poor and research on tropical forest ecology is lacking.

The World Bank has assisted in moving landless people into rain forest areas, where farming and cattle ranching have destroyed rain forests, according to a Rain Forest Action Network news release. The World Bank loaned nearly $600 million for an Indonesian colonization program and over $400 million to developing the Amazon Basin in Brazil, the release said.

5 to receive honors at homecoming

Four University of Montana graduates and one professor will receive awards during the 1986 UM homecoming festivities, Oct. 2 through 4.

The awards will be presented Oct. 2 at 8 p.m. on the steps of Main Hall.

Distinguished Alumnus awards, given annually to outstanding UM graduates, will be awarded to the following alumni:

- Sterling "Jim" Soderlind, a 1950 graduate in journalism, who is the vice president of planning for Dow Jones & Co. He was a Rhodes Scholar and studied philosophy, politics and economics at Keble College and Oxford University. A native of Rapelje, Mont., he now lives in Short Hills, N.J.

- William M. Allen, who is being posthumously honored, was a 1922 UM graduate in economics from Lolo. Allen, once the chairman of Boeing Aircraft, died last year. He received a law degree from Harvard and an honorary doctorate from UM in 1954. His wife, Mary, will accept the award.

Young Alumnus awards, which honor graduates who are 35 or younger, will be presented to the following alumni:

- Shelley A. Hopkins, a 1982 law school graduate who also has a political science degree. Hopkins, from Butte, is an attorney with Poore, Roth & Robinson, P.C., of Butte and has received such awards as the UM Alumni Award of Excellence and the Thomas E. Mulrone Scholarship.

- Nils A. Ribí is a 1978 business graduate from Hamilton, who is the president, chief operating officer and director of Ribí ImmunoChem Research, Inc., of Hamilton. Ribí has been active in organizations including the Montana Advisory Council on Science & Technology and the Mansfield Foundation.

Professor Emeritus Thomas

Payne of the UM political science department will receive the Robert T. Pantzer Award for outstanding contribution to the UM learning environment.

Payne was the chairman of the political science department from 1959 to 1985 and served on the Executive Committee of the Faculty Senate and the University Planning Council.

Homecoming 'Swingtime' events begin Thursday

The wild and war-torn era of the 1940s is the theme for this year's Homecoming celebration, dubbed "Swingtime in the Rockies."

Homecoming starts Thursday with alumni events and the traditional lighting of the Oval, crowning of homecoming royalty and presentation of the Distinguished Alumnus and Pantzer awards.

Events continue through Saturday, including the homecoming parade and Grizzly football game against the Eastern Washington University Eagles.

The "Swingtime" theme, a variation of the Benny Goodman song titled "Springtime in the Rockies" from the 1940s, was chosen to honor UM's graduates from the 1940s and 1950s, for whom a "decade reunion" will be held.

The "decade reunion" was organized because World War II forced many students of the era to spread their college educations over most of those years, according to Truby Bachman, Alumni Office coordinator of the reunions.

"It was a very sentimental, hard time for all involved," she said. "One former student I spoke with said he spent his whole two years at UM at the Burlington Northern Railroad, saying goodbye to people going to war or welcoming those coming back."

Bachman said that despite sadness associated with war years, the reunion and homecoming events will "stress the positive."

Reunions will also be held for the classes of 1961 and 1966.

Alumni events include a 1940s style show, complete with uniforms, dances and a radio program and a "Swingin' '60s" barbecue.

Bachman said the unique gathering of alumni from an entire decade should attract more alumni than usual for homecoming.

In addition to gatherings planned for alumni and for members of the reunion classes, the following is a partial schedule of homecoming events:

Thursday

- Alumni and friends bus tour of Missoula and UM campus. 1-4 p.m. Departs from the Sheraton, 200 S. Pattee.

- Lighting of the Oval, singing on the steps of Main Hall, Homecoming royalty coronation, presentation of alumni awards. Begins at 8 p.m.

Friday

- Exhibit, UM Mansfield Library Archives: Missoula-area business and industry records and photos. Includes materials from local banks, the Missoula Mercantile Co., Worden and Co., the Bonner mill and other segments of the western Montana lumber industry. Opens at 10 a.m.

- Departmental receptions for alumni, faculty, staff and students. To discuss developments on campus in various areas of academic interest. 10 a.m. to noon.

- Lighting of the "M" on Mount Sentinel, followed by a pep rally.

- Wine and Cheese reception at UM President Koch's home, 1325 Gerald Ave., for UM alumni and friends. 9 p.m.

- Student Alumni dance, featuring the band "The Maxx," in the University Center, at 9 p.m.

Saturday

- Pre-parade, no-host breakfast for all UM alumni, 8 a.m., at the Sheraton.

- "Swingtime in the Rockies" parade begins at 10 a.m. The parade will run from the Burlington Northern depot down Higgins Avenue to University Avenue and end at Arthur.

- Homecoming football game between UM's Grizzlies and the Eastern Washington University Eagles. 1 p.m., Dornblaser Field.

- All-Alumni Dance at the Village Red Lion. The Don Lawrence Big Band Orchestra will play music of 1940 greats such as Glenn Miller, Benny Goodman and Les Brown. 10 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Sunday

- No-host alumni brunch at the Village Red Lion.

- For more information, call the UM Alumni Office at 243-5211.

Koch to address Central Board tonight

University of Montana President James Koch will address Central Board tonight during the board's first meeting this quarter.

Koch, who came to UM last month from Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., is expected to discuss his UM administration, according to ASUM President Paul Tuss.

Also during the meeting, ASUM Business Manager Dan Henderson will report on ASUM's general fund and discuss a special allocation session to take place soon.

CB has plans to distribute an estimated $15,000 to some student groups not given money during the regular budgeting session last Winter Quarter.

Tuss said CB is also likely to resume discussion from spring quarter on the Women's Resource Center.

An audit, ordered last May by ASUM, was conducted this summer on the student group for its alleged violation of financial and grant application policies.

The meeting starts at 7 p.m. in the University Center's Mt. Sentinel Rooms.

Hill says Soviet scientists suppressed

By ANGELA ASTLE
Kaimin Reporter

Soviet scientists are not challenged because they don't have the opportunity to communicate freely with foreign scientists, University of Montana chemistry professor Walter Hill said Tuesday.

Hill recently returned from an international scientific conference in the Soviet Union where he presented his findings in ribosome research.

He was one of six Americans invited to attend an eight-day conference on biological macromolecules held in early September.

Hill said one Soviet scientist asked him to read a journal report to check for mistakes in the English translation.

Before the Soviet gave him the report, Hill said, he cut off the bottom of the title page that listed his name.

He told Hill that removing his name would lessen the risk for them being accused of handling secret non-transferable documents.

"I felt like Daniloff," Hill said of the incident. "But then, I thought, if they want to create international incidents, there are more prestigious scientists than me."

DR. WALTER E. HILL, UM chemistry professor, discusses his recent trip to the Soviet Union where he attended an international science conference.

The conference was held in Poushchino, a community of nearly 25,000, about 50 miles south of Moscow.

"I'm not sure why I was included," Hill said. "I sort of felt like I was out of my waters, because there were some really famous people there."

He was invited to the conference by a colleague, Dr. Alexander Spirin, director of the Institute for Protein Research.

Hill, with a team of nine graduate students, has been researching for the past four years how ribosomes work. Ribosomes are macroscopic particles in cells of the body that manufacture proteins.

"The make-up of proteins differentiates every person from each other," he said. It will define body build and height, but will not determine the color of hair and eyes, he explained.

Hill's research includes seeking out a method to block production of proteins in ribosomes. According to Hill, an antibiotic does this to kill diseased cells inhabited by bad proteins.

"Whether it'll come to mean a cure for cancer or AIDS is unknown," he said.

Hill's excursion to the Soviet Union was his first time in the country and a chance to observe first-hand Soviet scientific advancements.

"They do excellent work because they have the numbers," he said. "But they lack innovation and motivation."

Hill said the Soviets are also well-supplied with excellent equipment and technicians, but that they are lacking in computer services.

"These guys should be able to do science like mad," Hill said. "But we run circles around them."

UM harriers shine; McRae named top athlete

By DAVE REESE

Kaimin Sports Reporter

University of Montana cross country runner Lorie McRae was named by league coaches as the Mountain West conference Athlete of the Week.

McRae finished first among 27 team competitors at the Montana State Invitational last Saturday, but actually came in 10 seconds behind Lorie Sax, who did not represent a team.

McRae's time for the three-mile course was 17:35.1.

UM finished second behind Montana State, followed by Idaho State and Utah State.

Lady Griz head coach Dick Koontz was pleased with McRae's performance last weekend. "This was by far the best three-mile race that Lorie has run this year," he said.

McRae placed second the week before at the University of Montana invitational in Missoula.

This weekend, the Lady Griz runners will travel to Moscow, ID, to compete in the Mountain West Pre-Conference Invitational, where they will be joined by two other teams: Conference rival Idaho and non-conference opponent Washington State.

The invitational will be run on the same course that will be used for the conference championships.

In men's cross country action last weekend, the UM harriers defeated Washington State 15-40, taking all first five places.

UM runner Frank Horn set a course record with a time of 26:20.1 over 5.2 miles, and was the meet's overall winner.

Coach Bill Leach said that Tony Poirier, who came in fifth, ran his best race ever during his college career last weekend.

Next weekend, UM will take to the road to compete in the Fort Casey invitational in Widbey Island, Wash., on Oct. 4.

Twenty teams will compete in the 10 kilometer race, which is hosted by the University of Washington.

In last year's meet at UW, the Grizzlies finished third in a field of 22 teams.

Rugby club ties twice

By FRITZ NEIGHBOR

Kaimin Sports Editor

In its first two matches of the season, the University of Montana Rugby Club tied the visiting Butte Crabs twice Saturday at UM's River Bowl.

In the first match, club president Kenny Hill scored the first try for UM, good for four points, and Jack Spencer kicked for two extra points. Garrison Wyse also scored a try, his first in five years. Spencer added a 3-point penalty kick for a 13-13 tie.

The second contest had an identical score, with rookie Jacques Manonian and Paul Pilskalns scoring one try apiece, and Spencer adding one point-after and another penalty kick.

Hill singled out Spencer, saying he "had an outstanding game." He added that Spencer played fullback, one of the more difficult positions in rugby, and that he "stayed right on the ball the whole game."

The second game was mainly to give the new players, such as Pilskalns, experience.

"The first half (of the second match) was really shaky," Hill said, but added that in the second half, the new players "seemed like they all pulled together."

Pilskalns had only two matches' experience with last year's team, Hill said.

The UM club is trying to schedule a match for this Saturday with Kalispell, but no match had been confirmed Tuesday. If the match is played, it will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at the River Bowl, Hill said.

A tough match is expected from Kalispell, which beat the Missoula Maggots earlier this year. Hill rates the Flathead team as "one of the best in the state."

Intramural rosters due

Those people at the University of Montana playing intramural volleyball and touch football have until Friday to turn in team rosters.

Rosters are due at noon on Oct. 3, at the Campus Recreation Office in McGill Hall, Room 109. These two sports have men's, women's, and co-recreational divisions.

Play begins for football on Monday, Oct. 6, while volleyball play begins on Oct. 7.

Other sports to be offered later in the quarter for men and women are 3-person basketball, a punt, pass, and kick contest, indoor soccer, a turkey race, and a racquetball singles tournament.

A women's indoor soccer clinic is also planned for Oct. 20 at 7 p.m., with no registration necessary.

In addition, touch football, volleyball, 3-person basketball, and the turkey race all count in competition for the All-Sports Trophy, given to the most successful men's and women's teams.

Further information can be obtained at the Campus Recreation Office.

What he's preaching has been around for centuries — from the Greeks of fifth century B.C. to the American transcendentalists of the 1800s, physical fitness has been the key to good health and mental sharpness, he said.

In Plato's gymnasium young Greeks learned philosophy and lifted weights, he said, while Hippocrates treated his patients with diet, exercise, proper climate and rest.

Centuries later, Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "Be first a good animal."

Using this quote, Sheehan told his listeners to hone their bodies to physical fitness.

"The idea is to be the best possible you," he said.

Humans have "lost our original splendor," he said, and the way to regain that splendor is exercise.

"We must go back, step by step," he said, to the condition of early humans for whom exercise was part of everyday life.

Exercising for two hours a week will make a person fit, he said. For "every hour you exercise, you live an hour longer," he said.

In the 1980 U.S. census, 5 million Americans were alive who should have died from cardiovascular ailments, he said. More than 50 percent of these people were alive because they changed their lifestyles, he said. They became active.

That activity, he said, not only helps create a healthy heart, it can help create a healthy mind. The best way to cope with stress, for example, is through exercise, he said.

He said a psychologist will recommend exercise as the "absolute best way" to deal with stress. The United States "should have mental institutions that are like boot-camps," he said.

With stress under control, he said, exercise releases the mind's creative ideas.

"We want white-water in (our minds)," he said. Without exercise, he added, "what we get is a trickle."

Exercise takes over the body and frees the mind, he said.

Quoting from the Bible, Sheehan said, "The glory of God is man fully functioning."

Through exercise, he said, "we become the person the Creator had in mind from the day we were born."

Parking

In addition to delaying completion of the stadium, rain has postponed the reopening of Campus Drive, McCraley said.

Crews have waited two weeks to begin paving the road, he said.

"If it's clear tomorrow," he said, "we'll go. We're desperate."

Paving will take about a week, McCraley said. Upon completing the project, the road's two lanes will be 40 feet wide and will reopen a "tremendous" amount of parking, he added.

However, he said completion of the roadwork does not mean parking will be available immediately.

The drive will be closed to traffic during working hours until the stadium's completion, according to McCraley. The road will be opened during the evening.

Long-term parking plans include the possibility of building a multi-leveled structure on campus for private use.

The building would offer students and faculty reserved parking spaces on a rental basis, Willett said.

Willett said he contacted a firm and asked if it was interested in looking at UM as a building site. The firm has not yet responded.

One area he mentioned as a possible building site for such a structure was near the Mansfield Library.

SOME COLLEGE COURSES ARE MORE EXCITING THAN OTHERS.

How many college courses teach you how to shoot the rapids? Or rappel a cliff? Or find your way out of a forest with nothing but a map and compass to guide you? At least one does—Army ROTC.

And you could find yourself doing any one of a number of exciting adventure training activities like these in the Army ROTC program.

Activities that develop your stamina. And your self-confidence.

But adventure training isn't the only way you develop. You'll also learn the basics of leadership and management by attending ROTC classes, along with the subjects in your major.

And you'll be excited about two other benefits Army ROTC offers. Financial assistance. Up to $1000 a year for your last two years of Army ROTC. And the opportunity to graduate with both a degree and a commission in today's Army—including the Army Reserve and Army National Guard.

ARMY ROTC.
BE ALL YOU CAN BE.
