CB to discuss proposed new ASUM constitution

By Jim Mann
Kaimin Reporter

Central Board will review a draft for a new ASUM constitution tonight and ASUM President Scott Snelson said it could be the first constitution to be approved by the The Montana Board of Regents.

The proposed constitution would rename CB the ASUM "Senate" and would require ASUM to hold its elections in April instead of Winter Quarter.

CB debated last year whether elections should be held during Winter Quarter or Spring Quarter. CB members have said the old constitution is ambiguous about which quarter was intended.

The new constitution would also require the yearly ASUM budget session to be held in February.

In the past, ASUM has held the session at varying times during Winter Quarter. The old constitution does not specify when they should be held.

ASUM President Scott Snelson said in an interview Tuesday that the proposed constitution is more concise and streamlined.

He said much of the old constitution, including sections requiring an ASUM student auditor, is "archaic." He said ASUM has not had a student auditor for several years.

Koch said Tuesday he does not think the old constitution is legitimate because it has not been approved by a UM president or by the regents, as regents' policy requires.

Koch said that the old constitution has been merely an "informal guideline" for ASUM.

The old ASUM Constitution went into effect Spring Quarter 1970, but the regents have never approved it.

Previous ASUM administrations have worked on drafts for a new constitution, but only two drafts in the past five years have been presented to UM presidents for approval, the head of ASUM Legal Services said.

Bruce Barrett said ASUM proposed a constitution during the 1985-86 school year to former UM President Neil Bucklew, but Bucklew rejected it.

Barrett said ASUM has not been worked consistently in the past to produce a constitution that is acceptable to the regents and administration.

Snelson said he wants CB to submit the final draft to Koch and the regents before holding a student vote on the proposed constitution.

But Koch said UM students should vote on the proposal before sending it to the regents.

Koch said he reviewed a rough draft of the constitution with the UM Legal Counsel this summer, and found no major problems with the draft. He said he suggested a few small changes to Snelson.

Snelson said he intends that students voice their opinion on the proposed constitution.

"All we were thinking was that it costs ASUM and the students money to hold any kind of election," he said. "And it seems pointless if Dr. Koch has no intention of approving it."

UM PRESIDENT JAMES KOCH made his teaching debut on campus last night in his economics class offered this quarter. Koch will teach an introductory course.

President Koch sharing knowledge

By Lou Joon Yee
for the Kaimin

University of Montana President James Koch spent three hours in a classroom Tuesday night doing something he truly enjoys — making contact with students and helping them "open intellectual doors."

Koch, who spent most of last year, his first year at UM, lobbying legislators for university money, began a new money-related project Tuesday night — teaching economics 211.

He will teach the introductory economics theory class from 7:30-10 p.m., each Tuesday night, in Room 103 of the Liberal Arts Building for the rest of the quarter.

During the early moments of his lecture, curious passers-by and tentative students stood near the back door of LA 103, surprised and enthralled by how the president turned economic theory into anecdotes and practical examples.

It wasn't long before members of the back-door gathering slid themselves into open seats. More students arrived and soon the seats were filled and the class swelled to about 70 students.

Instead of wearing his usual presidential garb — a suit — Koch went casual Tuesday night, wearing a gray sweater over a white shirt and khaki pants. He seemed more at ease in the classroom than he is in Main Hall.

Physical therapy program grows

By Marlene Mehlhoff
Kaimin Reporter

The University of Montana's physical therapy program has expanded this fall and admitted four more students in its limited-enrollment courses, the program's director said Tuesday.

Just last winter, physical therapy students and faculty members were afraid their program wouldn't last another year.

The program was on UM President James Koch's "hit-list" of programs slated for possible elimination to help UM comply with a state budget cut proposed by Gov. Ted Schwinden.

The program survived the cuts, but physical therapy students were required this year to pay a $1,000 tuition surcharge as well as regular fees.

But program director Janet Hulme said the surcharge hasn't cost the program any students.

As in past years, about 80 new students applied for admission to the program this fall, she said. The UM administration decided last June to let the program accept 20 new students, instead of the previous limit of 16.

Hulme said the school has found 20 new grant sources from hospitals and health services in the state that can help most students pay the new tuition surcharge.

Students must apply for the grants, which range from $2,000 to $4,000, she said.

Maybe 'star quality' needed to boost faculty salaries

For years now, the University Teachers' Union — the collective bargaining representative of University of Montana faculty members — has been battling tight budgets and tough negotiating teams in an effort to make some more money for its members. One of the UTU's most eloquent and compelling arguments for more money has been based on what other public institutions of higher education in the region pay their faculty members.

The argument is this: Faculty salaries at UM range from about $19,000 a year to about $50,000 a year, depending on rank and tenure. While that salary range may sound hefty to most Montanans, UM faculty members generally do not make as much money as their peers at similarly sized institutions in the region.

From this argument, the union argues that UM is losing bright, hard-working teachers to big-money colleges and to private business, and that's bad news for students, the university and the citizens of Montana.

The argument, though compelling it may be, has not sent UM's faculty members searching for loopholes to escape the suddenly high tax brackets into which they've been rocketed. Faculty salaries at UM are mediocre at best.

Perhaps, then, the union needs a bit more leverage in its negotiations, and perhaps that extra leverage lies in the salaries of celebrity professors around the country.

Newsweek on Campus reports in its September 1987 issue that Jehan Sadat, the widow of assassinated Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, was paid $212,000 in salary and honorarium for a three-semester teaching stint at the University of South Carolina at Columbia. Sadat taught one course a week from the spring of 1985 through the spring of 1986.

The magazine also reported that Steven Weinberg, a Nobel Prize-winning physicist, is paid more than $126,000 a year by the University of Texas.

Jehan Sadat probably made for some interesting lectures. A winner of the Nobel Prize in physics can probably throw a pretty good lecture together as well. But Sadat taught one course a week, and Weinberg has more to do with fund raising than he has to do with teaching. They are being paid for being stars.

UM faculty members, too, often put pretty good lectures together, and they often do it more than once a week. In addition, many are involved in fund raising. But few have been branded celebrities.

Perhaps the UTU ought to expand its argument and think big at the bargaining table in the future. It should offer its members services at rates which are both competitive and fair, and if that fails — as it has in the past — it should vow to retrain its members in the fine art of being a celebrity.

A professor, it seems, who can teach English or philosophy or math or physical education isn't worth much, but what if that professor were retrained to sing "Thriller" in a high falsetto and moonwalk?

The university might just think it has something there.

College life is a new game

Maybe it was years ago, and maybe it was last spring, but most of us leave high school feeling pretty good about ourselves, who we are, what we know, etc.

Then comes college.

Mark Twain said that in high school he knew his father was a fool, but upon his graduation from college he couldn't believe how much the old man had learned in four years.

Yes, we were making the rules when we left high school. But now it's a new game.

Now it's waiting in lines, new roommates, strange clothes and people, new town and probably a different you.

Do you know who that new you is? Those temporary checks you have from your new account don't even have your name on them. It's time for an identity crisis.

Speaking of money, have you gone through registration and paid fees? Were you always sure you were in the right line?

One of these days I'm sure I'll end up in a line leading to a GI haircut and a suit designed by Fidel Castro and worn by Daniel Ortega.

When waiting in line, why not discuss the Central American problem? It's important. You even can read a book while waiting. If you don't read at all, then you're in the wrong line anyway.

What about campus attire? Does your new peasant dress match your Sores?

By Mark Downey

This is the toughest campus I've ever dressed for.

Should we wear friendship bracelets with an Izod? Does a pirate's bandanna clash with cords? I recommend you wear what's clean. That will solve most folks' morning wardrobe wondering.

What about dorm roommates? Did housing select someone nicely compatible with your lifestyle, someone right to share a room so small that breaking wind can break the windows?

Or does your new roomie listen to high decibel bad rock on headphones while studying and sleeping, as my first roommate did?

If you don't get along, then one of you should move. If you're compatible, well then you already have a new friend.

Yes, college is a new game. If you leave knowing more than you did when you got here, and you realize how much more you don't know, then you've got it right.

Can you wear a Montana forester's cap with Birkenstocks? I don't know. Call your dear old dad, maybe he knows.

Mark Downey is a senior in English.

Details of UM and Western merger ahead of schedule

By Rebecca Manna
Kaimin Reporter

Mike Easton, acting vice president of Western Montana College in Dillon, said Tuesday that details are nearly finished on the University of Montana merger with Western Montana College.

Easton, who is UM's vice president for university relations, also said that he isn't sure if he will apply for the WMC provost position when his WMC term ends June 30.

When the two schools merge on July 1, 1988, the Dillon school will be known as Western Montana College of the University of Montana and will have a provost as its top administrator instead of a president.

vice the merger, which was ordered by the Board of Regents to help save money in the university system.

The regents requested the schools to submit a merger plan at its December meeting — a deadline that Easton said will be met ahead of schedule.

The plan has been developed by campus committees in charge of specific areas — like graduate education, academic advising and transfer requirements, admissions and student relations and fiscal affairs.

UM President James Koch, Easton and faculty and staff members from each school are involved in writing the merger plan.

Koch said Tuesday that although Easton has done a good job at WMC, his performance does not "give" him the provost position.

"Whether or not Mike (Easton) becomes the WMC provost is not his decision," Koch said. "First there would be some kind of search for applicants, then I would have to recommend him to the regents and they would make the final decision."

Until Easton returns to Missoula — or becomes WMC provost — UM Alumni Association Director Sheila Stearns will work double-time — taking over Easton's UM duties along with her alumni duties.

Easton said that although he remains affiliated to UM by an open-door option that allows him to return to UM, he now is primarily an advocate for Western's interests.

Easton said some of those interests include:

- Developing a graduate degree program either at Dillon or Missoula that UM faculty members will instruct. The WMC program was cut by the regents last year.

- Reinstating an undergraduate degree program in business education. Easton will propose that students study for two years at Dillon and transfer to UM to finish their degree.

- Reinstating the football program — although Easton said this is not a "high-priority" goal.

NEWS BRIEFS

Economy slips

HELENA (AP) — The business magazine "Inc." says Montana has slipped one notch — to 48th — in its annual survey of business climates in the United States, ahead of only North Dakota and Wyoming.

The magazine said its ratings are based on job growth, the number of new businesses and the progress of young firms.

Other states in the region also ranked low in the survey. Idaho was 42nd and South Dakota was 45th.

Buckle-up law begins Oct. 1

HELENA (AP) — On Thursday, Montana becomes the 29th state to require its citizens to buckle up.

Authorities will begin enforcing the law immediately, but will issue only warning tickets for three months to allow citizens time to adapt.

The $20 citations will be issued beginning Jan. 1. The fine will be the same, regardless of how many passengers are not wearing their seat belts.

Seat belt violations will be secondary offenses. In other words, a driver can be cited only if a law enforcement officer has stopped the vehicle for another violation.

The law contains only two major exceptions: people unable to wear belts for medical reasons and those making frequent stops as part of their jobs. The statute does not apply to vehicles made before 1968 when federal law made seat belts standard equipment.

Imports costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 98-0 Tuesday to ban all Iranian imports into the United States.

The United States has imported $500 million to $600 million worth of products annually from Iran in recent years, according to the proposal offered by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Iranian oil sales to the United States are skyrocketing this year. The Commerce Department reported Monday that imports of oil and petroleum products from Iran went from $498 million in all of 1986 to $819 million through July of 1987.

South Dakota begins lottery

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — The South Dakota State Lottery started selling tickets for the first time at 12:03 a.m. Wednesday, with officials hoping for good first-day sales.

Gov. George Mickelson announced the starting time for the lottery Monday evening during a festive ceremony on the steps of the state Capitol. He was surrounded by members of the lottery commission.

Estimates show that the lottery should raise $20 million by July 1988.

UM to form checklist of campus priorities

By Rebecca Manna
Kaimin Reporter

To help protect the University of Montana from future budget cuts, President James Koch has assigned UM's provost and vice president for academic affairs to create an Academic Issues Project.

Although the project's specific points haven't been formed, Koch said during his recent State of the University speech that Provost Don Habbe will study the university's financial and academic situation to determine areas that should receive more emphasis.

For example, examinations of budget cuts at the Mansfield Library, the unavailability of offering some summer courses and problems with reaccrediting some university programs are possible discussion topics, Koch said in his speech.

Habbe will work on the project — with assistance from the Council of Deans and the Faculty Senate — for the next six years.

Koch, contacted Tuesday, would not elaborate on any specific points in the project.

He did say, however, that he and Habbe will develop a checklist of campus-related issues and problems by Friday and begin working on the project.

Stearns hopes to increase enrollment, funding

By Greg Van Tighem
for the Kaimin

Although Sheila Stearns' University of Montana job title reads "acting" vice president for university relations, there are no theatrics involved in the way she's handling her position.

Stearns, who is filling in for relations vice president Mike Easton, said Monday that she'll spend much of the 1987-88 academic year working on projects designed to boost UM enrollment and secure funding.

Easton left May 15 to serve as acting president at Western Montana College in Dillon. His duties there last until July 1988.

Until that time, Stearns said ROME will be on her mind — that is the ongoing Recruiting, Outreach, Marketing and Enrollment project designed to draw more students and alumni donations to UM.

She said Easton has also worked on the project and that her only intention is to make the program more of a priority with top university administrators.

Creating a strong campaign for voter approval of the state education mill levy is another of Stearns' goals for the year.

She said she hopes to coordinate a letter-writing campaign among students, faculty and administrators that will educate voters and gain support for approval of the levy — which generates money for education.

The levy provides about $12 million a year to the budgets of the six schools in the university system.

If the mill levy does not pass, Stearns said, losing the money would result in "definite budget cuts" in every school.

While much of Stearns' time is spent dealing with her duties as vice president, she still holds the job she had before Easton left — UM alumni association director.

But there is a chance she can drop the word "acting" from her vice president's title.

Easton said Tuesday that he is not sure whether he'll apply for the permanent job at WMC's top administrator, but if he does — and he gets the job — Stearns said she would consider applying for the vacant relations vice president position.

U.S. ships escorting another tanker in Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. warships on Tuesday escorted a Kuwaiti tanker toward a major Persian Gulf shipping channel where British mine sweepers were searching for explosives believed planted by Iran.

U.S. officials said the Navy would respond strongly if Iran continued "intensified" war activities they said increased after U.S. helicopters attacked an Iranian minelayer.

"We're not looking at routine operations," said one U.S. source who spoke on condition of anonymity. But he said the Navy's gulf-based resources were already seriously strained.

Iraq said its warplanes attacked a ship off Iran and bombed a weapons and ammunition factory in the suburbs of Tehran, a large power plant near the Iran-Soviet border and an oil pumping station in the south.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said a number of people were killed in the raids and in Iraqi shelling of the southern cities of Khorramshahr and Abadan. It said Iranian artillery shelled the southern Iraqi port city of Basra in retaliation.

The United States began to escort 11 Kuwaiti tankers through the gulf in July to protect them from attack by Iran, which considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. Kuwait insists it is neutral.

On Sept. 21, the Navy attacked and captured the landing craft Iran Ajr and said it was caught in the act of laying mines. Iran said the vessel was not carrying any military cargo and vowed revenge.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, back in Washington after a trip to the gulf, said Tuesday that the United States would not hesitate to attack any other Iranian vessel caught sowing mines.

Iran's Foreign Ministry said similar statements by Weinberger on Friday in Bahrain were "hostile and provocative."

Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said the 10th convoy left Kuwait on Monday and was steaming "uneventfully" south through the central gulf.

Philippine troops deployed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Troops were deployed at strategic points around Manila after the military received reports that anti-government soldiers might try to enter the capital, a senior officer said Wednesday.

Brig. Gen. Ramon Montano, commander of a new anti-coup force, ordered the troop movements beginning late Tuesday after receiving reports that right-wing mutineers might stage new attacks in the wake of the Aug. 28 coup attempt, said Col. Emilio Templo.

There were no reports of any mutineer movements or attacks as of midmorning, he said.

One army battalion of the 56th Infantry Division was moved from the central Visayas to Fort Magsaysay, a major training camp about 70 miles north of the city, Templo said.

Fort Magsaysay was the base from which renegade Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan launched the Aug. 28 coup attempt in which at least 53 people were killed and hundreds wounded. Templo said the pro-government movements were responsible for a wave of late night rumors in the capital of unusual military activity.

Earlier Tuesday, more than 60,000 people chanted slogans against President Corazon Aquino and the military, turning the funeral of a slain leftist leader into the largest protest rally in the capital this year.

Mourners raised clenched fists and denounced Mrs. Aquino as they marched behind a truck carrying the casket of 27-year-old Lean Alejandro during a 10-hour procession from a university chapel to a suburban cemetery.

Indian professor strong believer in Ghandi

By Adina Lindgren
for the Kaimin

When visiting Professor Chandra Mudaliar from India told her friends in the eastern United States she was coming to Montana, they told her students would not even know where India is.

Mudaliar, who came to the Montana from Madras, India, in early September, said University of Montana students are very different than her friends back East said they would be.

"When I came here I was so pleasantly surprised with the certain amount of sophistication students have," she said.

"Students are not so provincial and ill-informed of foreign cultures as I imagined."

A visiting Professor from the University of Madras, Mudaliar will teach Politics and Religion in Indian Society, a course that examines religious values in public politics with a study of Modern Asia.

Mudaliar is the distinguished visiting faculty member in the UM Mansfield Center this quarter.

She holds a doctorate in political science and has degrees in history and political sociology. She has also taught in England, Germany and Japan and has written three books on India.

But Mudaliar's own life is a textbook in the cultural and social upheaval of modern India.

She was raised during Mahatma Gandhi's freedom movement, which brought India from under British rule.

"The atmosphere was always so charged and electric," Mudaliar said.

"That was the time we were fighting for freedom. Mahatma Gandhi said we must be competent for freedom, and that is only possible for the people who are educated, especially women."

When she was 15, despite ~~heavy pressure from her relatives~~ to marry, Mudaliar followed the advice of her parents to continue her education.

Two years later, in 1945, she wrote to Mahatma Gandhi asking to join his ashram, a Hindu retreat of meditation and instruction.

Although Gandhi welcomed her, and even sent a bullock to pick her up, Mudaliar said her parents told her she should continue her education.

In later letters, Gandhi also approved of her remaining in school.

While in school, she also participated in protests and civil disobedience demonstrations. She boycotted the sale of foreign goods, and wore only hand-spun clothes, which she still prefers. She also boycotted the British school, which most wealthy, higher caste children attended.

Born of the Kshatriya, India's second highest caste, Mudaliar calls herself a "professing Hindu."

She said, "Don't classify me among the staunch Gandhi-tes," who live and work in ashrams.

"I try to realize the Gandhian principles through my work," she said. Gandhi worked for, among other things, non-violence and equality for men and women of all castes.

She said even her visit to UM this quarter is a form of protest against her home University of Madras, which, despite the presence of a strong anti-discrimination caste and tribes committee, has been denying funding for study abroad for lower caste students.

Admiral says Navy underestimated threat from mines in Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy underestimated the threat posed by Iranian mines when it prepared to carry out President Reagan's plan to protect Kuwaiti tankers, the nation's top military officer said Tuesday.

"I think it's eminently fair to say we made a number of underestimates," Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"Obviously, we didn't want the Bridgeton to happen," he said, referring to the July 24 incident when the first reflagged Kuwaiti tanker hit a mine while it was being escorted by U.S. Navy warships.

"We made some mistakes," he said. "If I had it to do over again, I wouldn't do it that way."

He said the Navy "probably overrated our intelligence" about Iranian capabilities.

The Navy is now looking at ways to reduce the number of ships and men in the region, Crowe said, but he warned that it would be a "terrible error" for the Democratic-controlled Congress to order a U.S. withdrawal.

Crowe said the Pentagon is "groping as to what the long-term level of forces should be there. ... We are looking at ways to draw down our forces to a more reasonable level."

He said about 10 U.S. ships are in the gulf itself and another 20 in nearby waters. It is costing about $20 million a month to carry out Reagan's program of reflagging 11 Kuwaiti tankers and using Navy convoys to protect their passage through the war-torn waterway.

Crowe spoke as the Senate was considering a Pentagon budget bill that Democrats want to use as the vehicle for a proposal that would halt the reflagging program within 90 days unless both the House and Senate approve it.

The amendment is backed by Democrats who complain that Reagan should have invoked the War Powers Act,

Lady Griz harriers strong; men's team must improve

By Dave Reese
Kalin Sports Reporter

With little change in personnel this year, the University of Montana women's cross country team has a good chance of winning the conference title, according to head coach Dick Koontz.

The women's team finished second in the Mountain West Athletic Conference last year. Among this year's returning runners is junior Loreen McRae, last year's individual conference champion.

But the men's cross-country team has more work ahead if it hopes to improve upon last year's fourth-place Big Sky Conference finish.

The team is battling injuries and illnesses, according to head coach Bill Leach. The runners will have to be more consistent throughout the season, he said, instead of starting out like a flash and then fading, as they did last fall.

And junior Frank Horn, one of UM's standouts last year, has not been "100 percent healthy," Leach said, adding that he won't run this weekend in UM's final home race of the season. In the Saturday meet, UM faces Eastern Washington University at noon at the UM Golf Course.

Although the long-range goals may be clear for both cross-country coaches, each is a little uncertain about how his team stands.

"We haven't run enough to know where we are," Koontz said in an interview Tuesday, but added "If we stay healthy and train hard, we should be right up there."

And Leach said he has "a lot of questions right now" about his men's team.

The women's team is led by some strong returning runners, including McRae, Vonda Harmon and Michele Buresh, Koontz noted.

However, Koontz said a knee injury has hampered another top runner, Michelle Barrier. Barrier finished in the top 20 MWAC runners last year and she also set the MWAC and UM record in the 800-meter run with a time of 2:07.94.

Last weekend the women went up against Montana State University, the reigning conference champion, but lost 33-32.

But Koontz said the Lady Griz "can outrun" MSU and the team should be able to win the next time the two schools meet.

The Lady Griz will have a chance to avenge that loss this weekend as the women harriers meet MSU in Moscow, Idaho, to compete in the University of Idaho Invitational meet.

While the Lady Griz have had a chance to preview their opponent for this weekend, this will be the men's first encounter of the year with EWU.

However, because EWU has lost several athletes to transfer this year, Leach said, the Grizzlies shouldn't have much trouble with the Eagles.

Still, he said he will be counting on his number-one man, Mike Lynes, to pull Montana through. Lynes is fighting a cold and has been training lighter this week, Leach said.

UM rugby team looks to veterans

More than 20 rugby players are returning to the University of Montana Jesters rugby team this year and Coach Jim Meagher says he is expecting one of his best seasons ever.

"We've got a lot of good veterans," Meagher said, "and we're looking for some decent things this year."

"We're definitely going to vie for the title."

Three of those veterans, Dave Reese, J.T. Moore and Kelly Clinch, were on the Montana State All-Star team last year.

In an interview Tuesday night Meagher said the team, which finished third in the state last year, lost only six players over the last two years.

But he said he would like to have at least 10 more new recruits this year so he can put together two teams of 20 players each.

Meagher said the team began practicing last week and has played one scrimmage game "to get the newer players some playing time."

He said 10 new players are trying to win starting spots on the team, but an additional 10 recruits are needed so there is "pressure at each position."

The Jesters will play a six-match fall schedule including a match at Montana State University before the Grizzly-Bobcat football game. Practices are at 4:40 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays, at Playfair Park behind Missoula Sentinel High School.

Grizzlies' Rankin, Waak net Big Sky honors

BOISE (AP) — University of Montana quarterback Scott Waak, linebacker Mike Rankin and Weber State running back Fine Unga have been named the Big Sky Conference football players of the week.

Waak and Unga share the honor this week on offense and Rankin was named for defense, Big Sky Commissioner Ron Stephenson announced Monday.

Waak, a 6-foot 3-inch, 195-pound freshman from Bend, Ore., was instrumental in Montana's 41-29 upset of No. 1-ranked Nevada-Reno. He completed 20 of 28 passes for 249 yards and four touchdowns, tying a freshman touchdown passing record at Montana.

Unga, a 5-11, 220-pound senior from Provo, Utah, helped lead the Weber State offense to its 55-44 victory over previously unbeaten Boise State. He had a career high 20 carries for 97 yards with two touchdowns.

Others nominated for the weekly award on offense were Boise State wide receiver Eric Andrade, Idaho wide receiver Eric Jorgensen, Eastern Washington kicker Eric Stein, Idaho State wide receiver Shawn Beals, Montana State running back Kirk Copeland, Nevada-Reno running back Lucius Floyd and Northern Arizona tackle Pat Meech.

Rankin, a 6-0, 235-pound sophomore from Edmonds, Wash., helped the Montana defense limit Nevada-Reno's potent rushing attack to 105 yards, well below the Wolf Pack's 326-yard-per-game average heading into the contest.

He was credited with 14 tackles, including five unassisted stops and two for losses of three yards. He also had one pass interception and one fumble recovery.

Others nominated on defense were Idaho strong safety Ernest Sanders, Eastern Washington end Aaron Hansen, Idaho State linebacker Mike Calley, Montana State linebacker Ron Hanson, Nevada-Reno nose-guard Bill Bonsall and Weber State linebacker Vernell Quinn.

Before you choose a long distance service, take a close look.

You may be thinking about choosing one of the newer carriers over AT&T in order to save money.

Think again.

Since January 1987, AT&T's rates have dropped more than 15% for direct-dialed out-of-state calls. So they're lower than you probably realize. For information on specific rates, you can call us at 1 800 222-0300.

And AT&T offers clear long distance connections, operator assistance, 24-hour customer service, and immediate credit for wrong numbers. Plus, you can use AT&T to call from anywhere to anywhere, all over the United States and to over 250 countries.

You might be surprised at how good a value AT&T really is. So before you choose a long distance company, pick up the phone.

Contragate figure set to speak at UM this fall

By Kate Ripley

For the Kaimin

Oliver North's "right hand man" during the Iran-Contra affair and one of Gary Hart's key political advisors will speak at the University of Montana this fall, the ASUM Programming lectures coordinator said Tuesday.

Kevin Connor said Robert Owen, a former National Security Council staff member, will discuss U.S. involvement in Central America. The lecture will be at 8 p.m., Oct. 15, in the Underground Lecture Hall.

Owen, who was known as "the courier" for U.S. weapons sales to Iran, first came into the public eye when he testified before the U.S. Senate Select Intelligence Committee last winter and spring.

The other speaker, William Shore, has a "close, personal relationship" with Gary Hart, Connor said.

Shore accepted Connor's invitation to come to UM soon after Gary Hart dropped out of the presidential race in May, Connor said.

Shore will be at UM Nov. 12, and will talk with several classes as well as lecture at 8 p.m. in the Underground Lecture Hall.

He will also discuss Hart's withdrawal from the race and Hart's involvement with model Donna Rice, he said.

Shore's speech "Why the Presidency?" will focus on presidential campaigning and how the press affects political campaigns, he said.

Shore will be at UM Nov. 12, and will talk with several classes as well as lecture at 8 p.m. in the Underground Lecture Hall.

Turman still looking at gubernatorial race

HELENA (AP) — Lt. Gov. George Turman has changed his mind about announcing his political plans today, saying he is reconsidering his initial decision not to run for governor.

In an interview Tuesday, Turman said support for his candidacy appeared to increase the day after news reports appeared that indicated when he planned to announce his decision.

The Democrat said his office became a "flurry of activity" as supporters called or stopped by to encourage him to seek the party nomination.

"As people look at the field, they are beginning to question who best serves the party interests," Turman said.

Thus far, Frank Morrison is the only Democratic gubernatorial candidate. He resigned his Supreme Court seat and began his campaign in March, getting a big jump on potential contenders.

Sen. Ted Neuman, D-Vaughn, has said he will reveal Friday whether he will run for governor. House Minority Leader John Vincent of Bozeman and Sen. Joe Mazurek of Helena are two others pondering entry into the race.

Donaldson replaces late husband in state House

HELENA (AP) — Beverly Donaldson of Helena has been chosen to replace her late husband in the Montana House of Representatives.

Rep. Gene Donaldson, R-Helena, died this month from cancer.

On Tuesday, the Lewis and Clark County Commission unanimously chose Mrs. Donaldson to serve the rest of the House District 43 term. The commission had been given a list of three names by the Lewis and Clark County Republican Committee.

But her role as a representative is uncertain, since to serve in the 1989 Legislature, Mrs. Donaldson would have to run for election in 1988.

Gene Donaldson was not appointed to any interim committees at the end of last session, presumably because of his ailing health.

House Speaker Bob Marks, R-Clancy, controls all the interim committee appointments and assignments. But he is currently abroad, so no one is sure what Mrs. Donaldson's responsibilities will be.

"HOW I MADE $18,000 FOR COLLEGE BY WORKING WEEKENDS."

When my friends and I graduated from high school, we all took part-time jobs to pay for college.

They ended up in car washes and hamburger joints, putting in long hours for little pay.

Not me. My job takes just one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Yet, I'm earning $18,000 for college.

Because I joined my local Army National Guard.

They're the people who help our state during emergencies like hurricanes and floods. They're also an important part of our country's military defense.

So, since I'm helping them do such an important job, they're helping me make it through school.

As soon as I finished Advanced Training, the Guard gave me a cash bonus of $2,000. Then, under the New GI Bill, I'm getting another $5,000 for tuition and books.

Not to mention my monthly Army Guard paychecks. They'll add up to more than $11,000 over the six years I'm in the Guard.

And if I take out a college loan, the Guard will help me pay it back—up to $1,500 a year, plus interest.

It all adds up to $18,000—or more—for college for just a little of my time. And that's a heck of a better deal than any car wash will give you.

Reagan signs budget-balancer but not happy about it

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Tuesday signed legislation reviving the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law and vowed that "the big spenders in Congress will have a fight on their hands."

In a Rose Garden ceremony, Reagan put his signature to a bill that would require $23 billion in deficit reductions in the fiscal year that begins Thursday, and a balanced budget by fiscal 1993. It would cut military and domestic programs across-the-board if its goals are not met.

The president complained bitterly about the legislation, saying Congress was seeking to raise taxes or cut the Pentagon budget to comply with it. He had no choice but to sign it, he said, because it included an urgently needed increase in the national debt limit.

"I will not allow the American people to be blackmailed into higher taxes," Reagan said, repeating his call to trim "pork-barrel spending" that he said was at the root of the deficits.

"The big spenders in Congress will have a fight on their hands," he said, adding that those who expect him to agree to tax hikes or defense cuts were "nuts."

Reagan's harsh words at the ceremony contrasted sharply with his statements earlier Tuesday before an audience of international financiers critical of the huge U.S. deficit.

There, he praised the bill as "a signal that America is not backing down from its responsibilities."

In a speech to a joint meeting of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, the president called for a cooperative effort among the world's financial powers to help Third World nations solve their debt crisis. But he said he cannot lecture others without dealing first with America's own problems.

"It is imperative that the United States consistently reduce its federal deficit spending," Reagan said, taking note of the Gramm-Rudman bill.

"It should be seen as a signal that America is not backing down from its responsibilities," he said. He then called on Japan and West Germany "to find the political gumption to stimulate their economies without re-igniting the fires of inflation."

Reagan's support helped the original Gramm-Rudman become law in 1985. At that time, it included the automatic spending cuts later thrown out by the Supreme Court.

The president's enthusiasm for the law has cooled since the Democrats took control of the Senate this year. He said Democrats were trying to use it to force him to accept a tax increase or cuts in military spending.

House Democratic leaders said Tuesday that Reagan could no longer dodge the deficit issue.

"What he signed, in effect, says, 'No, Mr. President, you're at the end of the rope,'" said Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the majority whip. "The fact that he signed the bill says, yes, he's going to talk about it."

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said that even if domestic spending was eliminated entirely, "you still wouldn't balance the budget."

Reagan said he was signing the measure mainly because it was attached to the urgently needed legislation to increase the federal debt limit.

The Treasury needs to borrow to finance the government's deficits, and without the debt bill was in risk of default later this week. Even before the signing, the government was holding auctions of its securities.

The bill increases the debt limit to $2.8 trillion, the largest single boost in the statutory debt in history, up from the old limit of $2.111 trillion. Reagan had sought the $2.8 trillion figure.

Even with the revived Gramm-Rudman law, the deficit for fiscal 1988, which begins Thursday, would be about $144 billion. By bipartisan compromise, the bill relaxes the law's original deficit-reduction schedule — leaving most of the deficit-cutting for after next year's elections.

Gorbachev back in view

MOSCOW (AP) — After seven weeks out of public view and with the Soviet capital buzzing about his long absence, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev resurfaced Tuesday for a Kremlin meeting with a French delegation.

The 56-year-old Communist Party chief was last seen in public Aug. 7, when he received a group of American teachers of Russian language in Moscow. His whereabouts was a main topic of conversation among foreigners and their Soviet contacts.

His prolonged absence prompted reports by some foreign newspapers that either he or his wife, Raisa, were ailing. Soviet officials repeatedly said Gorbachev was on vacation.

Soviet television broadcast an 80-minute report on the meeting with the French group during its evening news program, showing a smiling, tanned Gorbachev seated in the Kremlin's Sverdlov hall.

In comments distributed by the official Tass agency but not broadcast on television, Gorbachev spoke of his absence.

"Some people think that I've been on vacation too long," he was quoted as saying. "I officially inform you that I was on vacation from Aug. 24 until Sept. 24." In the television report he said he had completed writing a book on his government's policies.

Gorbachev met Tuesday with a group of 370 French politicians, clergymen, cultural figures and other members of the "Initiative 87" visit to Moscow.

French television, which had a cameraman and correspondent present during a photo session, showed Gorbachev smiling and gesturing as he listened to a speech by the delegation leader, former Socialist Premier Pierre Mauroy.

Mauroy told The Associated Press after the two-hour meeting that Gorbachev seemed "in excellent health and in good form."

He also reported the Soviet leader remarked that he had been working on a book during his vacation.

Reporters at the picture-taking said Gorbachev apparently was referring to a book scheduled to be published simultaneously this fall in the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain.

Harper & Row, the U.S. publishing house, announced last week that it will print Gorbachev's book, "Perestroika: Our Hopes For Our Country And The World."

Perestroika is the Russian word for restructuring, and has more widely been used to describe the changes that have occurred in the Soviet Union since Gorbachev came to power in March 1985.

Young Hamilton girl drowns in pond near her home

HAMILTON (AP) — Nearly two hours of resuscitation efforts failed to revive a 7-year-old Hamilton-area girl after rescuers pulled her from a beaver pond behind her home, authorities said.

Kysha Loretta Springer, daughter of Ralph and Charlotte Springer, was pronounced dead at Marcus Daly Memorial Hospital here at 11:50 p.m., Monday, about seven hours after she disappeared from her Gold Creek-area home south of Hamilton.

sy Tuesday indicated the girl had drowned, and he ruled the death an accident.

Printz said the girl came home from school shortly after 4 p.m. and last was seen in the house between 4:30 and 5 p.m.

The family notified the sheriff's office about 8 p.m., Monday, and Printz said members of the Ravalli County Search and Rescue team were called and joined in the search.

The girl's body was found about 10 p.m. in the 3-foot-deep pond about 300 yards from the house, he said.

He speculated that the girl had walked toward the Bitterroot River and through a marsh, got cold and disoriented, and then fell into the pond.

He estimated she had been in the water about two hours before she was found.

President Koch

While bringing economic theory to life, Koch's hands would swirl from time to time, slicing and fanning the air. He slapped his hands together, paced to-and-fro and wrote an occasional key word on the chalkboard — all this while weaving real-world examples into his lecture.

One of his students, Angela Atkinson, a non-degree graduate student, said she enrolled in the class because of her interest in economics and specifically chose the Tuesday night section because Koch is the instructor.

But another student, Joel Becker, a recreation management major required to take the course, was surprised to learn that his instructor also is the university president.

Becker had come to Missoula only a week ago from Bemidji, Minn.

In an interview Tuesday morning, Koch said he missed teaching.

The former Illinois State University teacher-of-the-year (1977-78) said he has taught throughout his life, even while provost and vice president for academic affairs at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., his job of six years prior to coming to UM.

He taught as many as three courses a year then, he said.

Koch, 44, married with two children, said he enjoys teaching because of the contact with students and the intellectual work involved in sharing knowledge.

He said it's a challenge to introduce economics to students who don't have an understanding of the subject and that his entry-level course is "fairly powerful logic and applied in nature."

Koch received his doctorate degree in economics at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., in 1968.

He said he likes his students to be open and excited about learning, to desire new knowledge as well as to be prepared for and attentive in class.

During last night's lecture, Koch encouraged his students to "collude and conspire" over their study list.

They just might have to do a little conspiring — that is if their homework assignments aren't ready on time.

"The only way to get out of handing in assignments is to call me and say you're dead," he said.

Physical Therapy

In return, the institutions providing the grants require the students to work for them after graduating, she said. The student would be paid a full salary during this time, she added.

The physical therapy program was also up for reaccreditation last spring. Despite the program's uncertain fate last year, it was reaccredited in May for the next eight years, Hulme said.

But in its report, the Commission on Accreditation in Education of the American Physical Therapy Association said the UM program should have one more full-time faculty member.

Hulme said she is looking for an additional faculty member, but increasing demand for physical therapists has made instructors hard to find.
