DEBATE

This has been Montana's year in the circles of debate. Few institutions can boast of such a record as that which our debaters have made for us this year. Our first debate was with the University of Utah, at Salt Lake City, on February the 13th, the question being: "Resolved, That immigration to the United States of all the unskilled laborers of the Slavonic, Italian and Hellenic races of eastern and southeastern Europe should be prohibited." Gordon Watkins, William Long and Payne Templeton represented Montana in this contest and won a decisive victory over the Utah team. This was a notable achievement and served as a stimulus for the following battles.

An innovation in the way of debating this year was the formation of a Triangular League which includes the College of Gonzaga, the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, and the University of Montana. Each institution had two teams in the field, one defending the affirmative and the other the negative side of the question, "Resolved, That the American government should take immediate steps toward the granting of independence to the Philippines, such independence to become a fact in 1920." These debates were held March 12th. For the Varsity, William Long and Payne Templeton upheld the affirmative against the representatives of the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. This debate was held in Missoula and resulted in a unanimous decision for the University. In Spokane, Alva Baird and Stuart McHaffie upheld the negative for Montana against the representatives of Gonzaga College. Here, too, Montana won the decision, this time two to one.

For the second time Montana has established her rights to the championship of the Northwest. In four years the University of Montana has held eight debates and has lost but one of these. Three successive times she defeated the debaters from Washington State College, twice the teams from the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, once the University of Utah and once Gonzaga College. The future is as promising as the past is encouraging. The glory of these victories must be shared by Professor Palmer, our last year's debating coach, and Professors Holliday, Coffman and Trexler, who so faithfully coached our teams this year.

ORATORY

The Buckley Oratorical Contest of 1913 was characterized by enthusiastic interest and splendid work on the part of the aspirants. The contestants were Miss Edith Merrifield, Mr. Edwin Stanley, Mr. William Long, Mr. Payne Templeton, and Miss Kathryn Sutherlin. Mr. Templeton won first place and Miss Merrifield won second.

In the Extemporaneous Speaking Contest, Mr. Long won first place. He and Mr. Templeton represented the University at the annual state contest of Oratory and Extemporaneous Speaking between the five institutions of higher learning: the University of Montana, Montana College, the Montana Wesleyan University, the Montana State Normal School, and the Montana State College of Agriculture and Meehanic Arts. In this contest, held in Dillon, Mr. Mosher of Dillon won first place with an oration called, "Night Brings Out the Stars." Mr. Templeton was awarded second place for his oration, "Humanity vs. Economic Tradition." In the Extemporaneous Speaking Contest, Mr. Long was given second place, first place going to Mr. Don Chappelle of the College of Montana, at Deer Lodge, Montana.

The Department of Economics, while making a survey of economic conditions in the Middle West, found conclusive proof that in the struggle between the Landowner and the Unemployed lay the beginning of our present College ATHLETICS.

ATHLETIC REVIEW

The University is closing a very successful year in athletics in that athletic activities have been broader than ever before. The football team won the championship of the state against almost overwhelming odds. They held champion teams of other states and conferences to fair scores. The basketball championship was lost only after a hard fight. Outside of the state more games were played, and against stronger teams than ever before. When the fact is taken into consideration that of two of the teams which the University played, and against whom they held their own creditably, one has held the Rocky Mountain Championship for the last two years, and the other last year won the Northwest Championship, it will be seen that the basketball season was a great deal more successful than might appear at first glance. The track championship of Montana was won by the University. They lost to Idaho, it is true, but only after a hard fight. The Varsity team did not lose the meet listlessly—they pushed Idaho for every point, and at no time during the meet was there a difference of more than ten points in the score. This, in spite of the fact that the University of Idaho men are in a class with the teams of the great coast universities. The track season for this year promises to be as successful as that of last year. There will be three big meets this year—one here with Washington State College, one in Idaho with the University of Idaho, and a triangular meet here with the Montana State School of Mines and the Agricultural College at Bozeman. The Tenth Interscholastic Meet held last spring was the best ever, and the meet this year promises to be even more of a success, if that is possible.

The whole year in athletics has been singularly successful. Teams of prominence and of "class" outside of the state were held down to comparatively small scores. Two state championships were taken, in football and track, while the State Basketball Championship was lost only after two hard battles.

Credit must be given the Chamber of Commerce and the people of Missoula for the support that was given the teams all through the year, and especially in football. For the first time in years the town really got behind the University, and for the first time in years, the games at home were on a paying basis. Practically all of the deficit was incurred on trips, and even now the A. S. U. M. is in better shape financially, as far as athletics are concerned, than it has been for years. In every respect the spirit both over town and at the University, was better than ever before. The year was a year to be proud of; it carries a promise of a better one next year. But most of all it has made for the development of real spirit at Montana, the spirit that wins, that is what counts.

FOOTBALL REVIEW

Captain Smead's first call for candidates brought forth a promising squad, but for a time there was no official coach, and little could be accomplished. While Dr. Craighead was looking through the east for new faculty members, and incidentally a coach, Mr. Leaphart volunteered his services and put the squad through a few rudimentary workouts. With the arrival of Coach Heilman the squad began hard practice, but before a team had been whipped into shape the game with W. S. C. came due. Montana was defeated in a hard-fought contest by the heavier and more experienced Washington opponents.

Two weeks of snappy practice added much life to the team, and they went into the Utah Aggie game on the home gridiron confident of winning. It may have been over-confidence, but certainly the Varsity did not get together and play real football at any time during the game. The listless contest ended in a defeat for the Varsity to the dissatisfaction of all her supporters.

With the Varsity-M. S. C. of A and M. A. battle but a week off, and with Captain Smead out of the game with a bad knee, the best hopes of the Varsity were far from bright.

It was a determined squad of Montana brawn that journeyed to Bozeman; and their determination became more firmly fixed when the confidence of the M. S. C. of A. and M. A. was learned. The game, a fight from whistle to whistle, and declared by many authorities the best game ever played in Montana, ended in a 7 to 0 victory for the Varsity. The M. S. C. of A. and M. A. championship hopes were blasted, and their bonfires remained unlighted. Two weeks later on the home field the Varsity piled up a 20 to 0 score on the discouraged visitors.

The coast trip ended rather disastrously. Again in the Gonzaga game the Varsity failed to get together, and met defeat in a listless game. The Thanksgiving Day game with Whitman stood scoreless at the end of the first half, but several Montana men were out with injuries, and there were no more substitutes. When the game ended the Whitmanites had beaten through the crippled Montana line for a 35 to 0 victory.

BASKETBALL REVIEW

In spite of the fact that the University lost all but a few games of the season, the basketball year was fairly successful. The men were handicapped right along by illness and injuries, but especially they were held back by a lack of friendliness and good feeling among the men themselves. It is generally better not to mention a thing like that, but it is almost necessary, to explain the scores made against us. Even so, the results would have been far more encouraging had it not been for the injuries which kept the men out of the games and out of practice, and the general hard luck experienced all along the line. One of the players himself in talking the season over said: "The St. Louis Browns are our own rivals." That is hardly a true comparison, though, for although the scores were unfavorable, the season was successful in other ways, and under the circumstances the scores were almost as good, at least, as could be expected.

For one thing, we may say that basketball is only four years old in the University. Until the last two years we have not risked our reputations by playing teams from outside the state. The teams that were on our schedule this year were the very best in this part of the country. The University of Utah, against whom the University of Montana played a fairly good game, has for the last two years held the championship of the Rocky Mountains, and Washington State College last year won the Northwest championship. In Utah there have been held high school tournaments for the last twenty years, while we are just commencing to get in our University men who are familiar with the game and have played it in high school. It takes years of familiarity with a sport and confidence in old victories to turn out a winning team. Even the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, who defeated us twice this season, and who have had years more of experience than we have, won only one game outside of the state with all that their schedule was unusually heavy. Battles with strong outside teams is what the University needs to develop a good team and the right kind of spirit to back it. A sport that is new to a college needs years of development, and a string of defeats such as we were forced to take this year is only a part of the story.

THE SENTINEL

We did win two games from the Miners but the less said about them the better. The School of Mines has been out of the basketball game longer than we have, and they were practically forced to train themselves.

The two big games of the year, in point of interest, were the games with the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. Montana lost both of the games, but only after a bitter fight. With the exception of one man, their team was just as it was last year, while all but one of our men were new on the team this year. With the odds all against us, and a pitiable lack of team work on the part of the Varsity team, in spite of flashes of the old Montana spirit, both games were lost. The trips to Utah and to the coast might be called disastrous, but "disastrous" is too mild a word.

At any rate the season was valuable in the experience it gave us, and the chance to get in touch with the big universities of other states.

To change the subject to more pleasant things: they brought a good story about one of our smallest men, Ricketts, back from the Utah trip. At the Brigham Young University, the baskets are hung from the running track, and the place underneath is exceedingly dark. Ricketts ran behind the basket, and ducked out a few seconds later to receive the ball from one of the other men. "Hey, kid!" some one yelled, "Put that little kid out, did he pay his admission?"

Red Cummings, who captained the team, and later was disgraced by permitting himself to be embarrassed in the library, came back with his share of the glories. Red is very fussy about his meals. He can easily be induced to leave the table. There was one restaurant keeper in Logan who talked incessantly while the fellows were eating. Red didn't enjoy the meal much—some of the things the fellow said took away his appetite. Next day Red, for the first and only time in his life, expressed a desire to have the ladies around. "Say," he said, "you scoot down to that restaurant and see if there are any ladies there. If there are not I won't go there to eat again!" This is deep, but if you read it over it will penetrate.

Next year we can start a new sheet and redeem ourselves.

Of the two big meets of the season the first was with the University of Idaho on Montana field, May 7. The meet was fast and exciting from start to finish, although the Montana men lacked condition. While the final score was 68 to 58, the meet was no walkaway for Idaho. The Montana men put up a game fight, and the team from Idaho had to struggle for every point they got. Two Montana records were broken, when Craighead raised Greenough's shotput record from 37 feet 8 inches to 39 feet 1 inch, and Wolfe broke Toole's high jump record by a jump of 5 feet 9 inches. Morrison of Idaho was the individual champion, winning 11 points by taking first place in the hundred and two-twenty, and third in the broad jump. He surprised everybody by defeating Brown in the dashes. The hundred-yard dash, particularly in 10 1-5, was one of the prettiest races in the meet. The 440 was run in 52 2-5, the fastest time made on Montana field since Leo Greenough made his record in 1906. First place in this event went to the man who finished third, Dingle of Idaho, Whitten and Cameron, who finished first and second, being disqualified.

To Nicholas Taylor, '15, captain of this year's track team, must go the honor of being the hero of the meet—"The gamest little mile-runner who ever put a spike into the cinders of Montana field." Running against men almost twice his size, he made one of the best races of the day. After losing the lead at the 660 yard mark, by one of the best efforts of the day, Taylor finished but a few feet behind the lanky, experienced Downing.

Phillips of Idaho starred in the hammer throw, breaking Ryan's 1911 record of 124 feet 10 inches by a throw of 136 feet 2½ inches. Phillips also gave the prettiest javelin exhibition ever seen here.

Another real display of Varsity spirit came when Bill Long, the smallest and youngest man on the team, won the two-mile from Warren of Idaho by a lead of 75 yards.

NINETEEN FIFTEEN

THE SENTINEL

The meet with the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts was slow and not at all spectacular. The meet was held in Bozeman, May 14. The University had an easy time with the meet and won by the substantial score of 71 to 53. One state record was broken in spite of the unfavorable condition of the weather, when Craighead hurled the discuss 114 feet, breaking Patterson's record by seven feet. The time in most of the events was slow and no other records were touched.

In spite of the inefficient way in which the meet was managed, and the imperfections in the track, the Varsity had no trouble. They took nine firsts out of the total of fifteen, and a majority of the seconds and thirds. Captain Owsley worked in his old-time form, and together with Brown, the Freshman star, ran away from the Farmers in the hundred and the two-twenty. Had Dowd been able to run he would undoubtedly have taken third place, and the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts would have been cut out of the sprints altogether. Craighead was Montana's best point winner, taking first in the shot-put and discuss, and third in the hammer throw.

Taylor was again the hero of the meet when he ran away from his old rival, Captain Schumacher, in the mile. Taylor showed surprising strength. This was young Taylor's first victory, and was one of the pluckiest, headiest races ever run by a Montana man.

Even the 440 yard dash, which was one of the few races in which the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts expected a victory, was lunch for the Varsity. All three places were taken by the University, the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts trailing far behind. Captain Schumacher beat Bill Long in the two-mile, but all of the other races went according to schedule, Montana getting better than was expected in the half-mile when Cameron and Weidman won first and second. The only spectacular thing in the meet occurred in the low hurdles, when Kenek of M. S. C. of A. and M. A beat Brown of Montana by an inch. Brown really deserved victory in this race, for someone had left a hurdle out of his course, and instead of running straight ahead, Brown turned out, waited for Ronan, and played Alphonso to the Dago's Gaston, waiting until he had passed before going ahead again.

On the whole, the track season was very successful. The indications for this year are that Captain Taylor's men will have everything coming their way this spring. The schedule is heavier than it has ever been, two out-of-the-state meets being planned, one with W. S. C. and one with I. U., as well as the Triangular State Meet.
