FOOTBALL SEASON

Starting the season with a large squad built around several lettermen and veterans from the 1932 season, the Grizzly football team began slowly but finished the 1934 season in a blaze of glory after one of the most successful schedules in several years. During the season, Coach B. F. Oakes' men played seven games, winning three and losing four. The State University gridders lost the season's opener to Oregon State's powerful eleven, but came back to hold the mighty Washington State squad until a freak mishap caused a Cougar victory. In the big game of the year, the Grizzlies trounced their arch-rivals, the Bobcats of the State College, to win the state intercollegiate football title for 1934. Then, after losing a heart-breaking game to Idaho, the team went to Spokane to knock over the highly-touted Gonzaga Bulldogs. Stanford, co-holders of the Pacific Coast conference title, won from the Grizzlies easily, but the final game of the year was one of the most gratifying of the season, the Grizzlies trouncing Utah State in the Thanksgiving Day contest here.

Coach Oakes had several outstanding players from the previous year around which he built his 1933 aggregation, and he moulded a fine combination from his veterans and 1932 freshmen. Oakes' team, although it won only three of its games, received mention all over the West as one of the hardest-fighting teams as well as one of the best coached clubs in this section. The Grizzlies developed a scoring play on the kickoff return, under the tutelage of Coach Oakes, and used it to an advantage. They were held scoreless only once, that being in the first game of the season against Oregon State; and they used their scoring play to an advantage, running the ball all the way through the powerfully defensive Stanford team for a touchdown. The 1933 Grizzly team will go down in the State University history as the hardest-fighting, most courageous aggregation ever assembled at the Montana University.

Coach Oakes had some very valuable assistance in the coaching department from A. J. Lewandowski, who also coached the Cubs; Harry Adams and Augie Vidro, who acted as trainer for the team.

At the end of the season, twenty-six men were awarded letters for their services on the Grizzly team. They were Leif Anderson, Frank Benson, Henry Blastic, Herbert Brandenburg, Kenneth Carpenter, Cale Crowley, Alfred Dahlberg, Cal Emery, Louis Hartsell, William Hawke, Al Heller, William Hileman, Edison Kent, George Kuka, Leonard Kuka, Rodney McCall, Morris Newgard, Monte Reynolds, Naseby Rhinehart, James Roberts, George Sayatovich, Robert Stansberry, Leland Story, John Sullivan and Hubert Zemke. Tom Roe was awarded a manager's letter. Of these men, eight were seniors, and these men are lost to next year's squad.

WASHINGTON
STATE

In addition to winning the state intercollegiate title, several of the Grizzly players received honorable mentions for their work on the gridiron during the 1933 season. Bob Stansberry, who ended his college football career in such fine style that he has been likened to one of Montana's finest gridiron heroes, Bill Kelly, was chosen by many on the second all-Pacific Coast conference team, and he received honorable mention as a halfback on the official all-American selections. Stansberry's performance rated as good as almost any of the other Coast stars, and it was due only to an error that he was not invited to play on the West's team in the annual East-West Shrine benefit game at San Francisco. Others who won honors for the Grizzlies are Henry Blastie, who was chosen for honorable mention on the all-American team; and the men who were chosen on the all-state football team. The all-state club contained the names of Naseby Rhinehart, Leonard Kuka, Monte Reynolds, William Hawke, George Sayatovich, Henry Blastie, Bob Stansberry and William Hileman, while the second team was manned by Al Heller, Herb Brandenburg, Ken Carpenter, John Sullivan, Cal Emery and Leland Story.

The summaries of the Grizzly games show that the Grizzlies scored 91 points in the seven games, against 85 for their opponents, or the Grizzlies outscored their opponents 13 points to 12.1 points per game.

The Grizzlies journeyed to Corvallis, Oregon on September 20 to meet the Oregon State team in the season's opener, and lost a hard-fought game, 20-0, on bad breaks and lack of experience. The Oregon State club had played two games, and the Grizzlies were playing their first contest of the season, and were unexperienced in the type of play used by the Orangemen.

The alert Grizzlies played hard, and kept the Oregon team on edge all the time, but intercepted passes and the star backfield of the Oregon Staters were too much for the smaller team. The Grizzlies threatened several times, but they were forced back on downs or by bad breaks.

Passes from Franklin to Curtin and Pangle paved the way for the first Orange touchdown, and Bowman intercepted a Grizzly pass and ran 90 yards for the second score. The last score was the result of a last-quarter drive ending with a long run by Pangle, making the score 20-0.

The Grizzlies threatened three times, but lost the ball near the Oregon State goal line all three times. In the first period, a long pass from Emery to Heller placed the ball on the Orangemen's 21-yard line, but the Grizzlies lost the ball on downs there. The biggest threat of the game came in the second quarter when Hawke intercepted a pass and ran it back to the eight-yard line, but on the next play, an Oregon State player intercepted a Grizzly pass and ran for a touchdown. Late in the game, the Grizzlies had the ball on the 18-yard line, but the gun ended that rally and stopped the game.

This game was the only one of the season, in which the Grizzlies were held scoreless, and, in spite of the heavy score, the Oakes men did well against the team that held the Trojans to a scoreless tie and defeated Fordham's great team.

MONTANA

The Grizzlies came back in the second game of the season against the Washington State Cougars and played one of the best games of the season, losing a heart-breaking contest, 13-7, on a blocked punt. The Cougars came to Missoula touted as one of the leaders on the Coast, but the Grizzlies put up such a stout fight that the Cougars were badly frightened until the gun ended the game.

The Cougars put over the first touchdown, but they had only lined up for the next kickoff when the Grizzlies retaliated with their famous scoring play. Blastic took the Cougar kick near his own goal line, and ran the ball back for a 96-yard return behind a near-perfect screen of interference, putting the ball in position for a team mate to score on the next play. This kickoff return was one of Coach Oakes' pet plays, and the timing and precision with which the Grizzly blockers formed their interference and the neat side-line open field running of Blastic amazed both fans and Cougar players.

After these two scores, the teams battled up and down the field without threatening, and the Grizzlies staged one of the finest defensive games seen on Dornblaser field for some time. Bendle, Sorboe and the rest of the Cougar star backs were unable to penetrate the Grizzly line, and they couldn't make consistent gains around the secondary defense.

The margin of victory for the Cougars was a discouraging one, the Washington Staters winning by a blocked punt. Montana had the ball near its own goal line, and a Grizzly back was sent back to kick out of danger. The ball was kicked and a Cougar end rushed in to block it, the ball rolling backwards over the Grizzly goal line. There, another Cougar end raced toward it and fell on it for the touchdown that won the game for the visitors.

Crowley, Stansberry, Blastic and Emery were the outstanding Grizzly backfield men on the field against the Cougars, reeling off long runs that kept the Cougars on the defensive. The game ended with the ball in Montana's possession, and the Grizzlies were cut short on the three-yard line by the gun.

The Grizzlies, after a short layoff, traveled to Butte on October 21 for the annual championship contest with the Bobcats, and came out of that game with their rival's pelt after a humiliating defeat for the State College. The Grizzlies entered this game on a fighting edge, and opened their attack in the last half to score an overwhelming 32-0 victory, winning the state intercollegiate football crown for 1933.

The Grizzlies opened up in the first nine minutes of play, scoring a touchdown and kicking the extra point to lead, 7-0. From then on, the two teams battled stubbornly back and forth for three periods without a score, and the fans began to see another close game between the traditional rivals. Then, in the last quarter, the Grizzly offensive opened up with a start, and the University eleven put over four quick touchdowns to beat the Bobcats by one of the largest scores ever run up between the two teams.

UTAH

The scoring in the last quarter wilted the Bobcats, and they were unable to stop the Grizzly onslaught from that time on. The Grizzlies blocked a Cat punt on their 17-yard line, and after a few short gains, Blastic carried the ball over for the second score of the game, following Kent's earlier attempt. The Grizzlies kicked off, got the ball again and Hartsell caught a pass and galloped 20 yards for the third score. After a long kick return by Blastic, Bergeson tossed a pass to the goal line where Brandenburg leaped high in the air to score the fourth score, and the Grizzlies led by a 26-0 score. After an exchange of runs and a Bobcat punt, the Grizzlies carried the ball back down the field and Bergeson carried it over for the final touchdown of the game, the gun sounding a few minutes later.

Bill Hileman played one of the best games of the season against the Bobcats, blocking and playing defensively with power and ability that kept the Bobcats from threatening. Kent and Emery and Story played nicely, while Blastic and Stansberry did most of the yardage gaining on long runs. In the line, George Kuka and Bill Hawke were outstanding, breaking up many Bobcat plays and holding against the Cat line.

The Grizzlies went to Moscow to play another conference game against the Idaho Vandals with the conference cellar at stake, and came away after losing one of the closest and most disheartening games of the season. The teams battled without a score for three periods through the mud and rain that was on the field, and three quick touchdowns in the last quarter ended the game with the Vandals winning by a 12-6 margin.

The field at Moscow was a veritable lake of water and mud, and Idaho's heavy line had the advantage over the crippled Grizzlies. The teams battled listlessly in the mud for three quarters, with neither team threatening very seriously until the last quarter. The Idaho line broke through the Grizzlies time after time, and both teams had to punt out of danger frequently. At one time during the game, a Grizzly guard was badly needed, but no available alternates were to be had for they all nursed injuries.

After three quarters of cautious football, both teams came to active life, with little Willis Smith of Idaho playing the leading role. Smith made the first score possible by tossing a long pass to Honsowetz who ran across the goal line for the first touchdown. The fans had scarcely quit their applause when the Grizzlies retaliated with a drive that tied the score. A long kickoff return and two passes netted the Grizzly score, but Willis Smith came back to the game to squirm through the Montana line to put the ball in scoring position. A penalty by Referee Bobby Morris put the ball close to the goal line, and Smith dived through for the winning score.

Montana's crippled team did as well as could be expected, with Hileman, Stansberry and Emery leading the backfield men and Reynolds and Anderson playing the best games for the Grizzly line.

A band of determined Grizzlies left for Spokane to tackle the highly-rated Gonzaga defensive machine in their next game, eager to wipe out the overwhelming defeat suffered at the hands of the Bulldogs the year before, and eager to win the game and put an end to the State University "whisker campaign". The Montana students had refused to shave until Montana won a game, and the Grizzlies, playing for these stakes, upset the powerful Gonzaga eleven for an unexpected 13-7 win.

Gonzaga started its threat in the opening minutes, taking the ball down the field by long runs to the Montana six-yard line, but Montana obtained the ball and kicked out of danger. From then on, the two teams battled strenuously, with Gonzaga holding the upper hand. In the second quarter, Peterson tossed a lateral pass to Justice out near the side-lines, and Justice galloped across the goal line untouched for the first score of the game, giving the Bulldogs the lead.

After that score, the Bulldogs threatened several times but were unable to put the ball over. The third quarter brought the Grizzlies out on the field fighting mad, and their vicious attack wilted the strong Bulldogs before them. Blastic returned a Gonzaga punt 23 yards, and then caught a long pass from Emery to score. Emery kicked the point, and the score was tied at seven all. The winning score came late in the last period when Story leaped high in the air to intercept a Bulldog pass and dash to the Gonzaga 18-yard line. Fumbles lost the ball, but Gonzaga kicked and Montana came back with a strong offensive that carried the ball straight down the field. Then, Emery flipped a pass to Heller who stepped across the goal to score, his touchdown winning the game.

In this game, the Grizzly club did some of its best work, all the men blocking and tackling in fine style to upset the powerful Bulldogs, who had entered the game as heavy favorites. The line functioned well, and outplayed the heavy Gonzaga forward wall at its own defensive game. Emery's passing was the best performance of the game, and Blastic and Stansberry led the backs with several long gains. Story was another consistent ground-gainer, while Hileman and Crowley shone in the defensive phase of the game. The entire Grizzly line functioned as one man.

The Montana Grizzlies wound up their Coast conference schedule by playing the Stanford Cardinals, later conference titleholders, at Palo Alto, and although they lost the game by a 33-7 score, the boys on the Grizzly squad put up one of the finest exhibitions of fight and spirit that was ever seen down there. The Grizzlies started out strongly, and played the Cardinals on even terms throughout the first period, and put up a stubborn defense for three quarters that the Stanford backs were unable to break down, only to wilt in the last quarter and go down to an overwhelming defeat. It was the old story of reserve power as the Cards, showing three or four full teams, substituted freely to stop the tired Grizzlies who lacked extra players.

Despite the one-sided score, the Grizzlies put up a defensive battle that kept the Stanford men guessing, and one Grizzly man—Bob Stansberry—was rated as the best individual player on either team during the entire game. His running, blocking and all-around play marked him as one of the best backs in the Pacific Coast circuit, and his 96-yard kickoff return gathered the only score for the Grizzlies.

The Stanford scores all came from long runs, most of which were the result of a reverse play which completely fooled the Grizzlies throughout the game. In the final period, dazzling reverses and power plays tore big holes in the tired Grizzly lineup, and sent the Stanford backs through for two scores. Stanford made one touchdown a quarter, piling up two in the last period, while Montana's score came in the first quarter.

The Grizzlies played strong defensive football throughout most of the game, failing to cooperate only when they were tired and battered from the ceaseless hammering of the heavy Stanford line. Bob Stansberry did a fine piece of running in returning the kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown, but his run was helped along by some of the best blocking of the afternoon. Emery, Hileman and Blastic helped Stansberry, all three turning in fine performances, and the best line work was done by Hawke, Sullivan and Rhinehart.

The Grizzlies wound up their 1933 season in grand style on Thanksgiving Day here by trouncing the powerful Utah Aggies by a 26-0 margin, in one of the biggest and best games in Missoula history. The Aggies came from the Rocky Mountain conference with a good record, and were expected to make things tough for the Grizzlies if not beat them, but the Grizzly blocking, tackling and running were all too much for the invaders, and they never made a serious scoring threat.

The Grizzlies opened up in the first quarter, taking the opening kickoff right down the field to score, and from that time, were never endangered. Long gains by Stansberry, Blastic and Story accounted for the margin of victory, and several other Grizzlies cooperated to sew up the game. Stansberry, playing his last game in a Grizzly uniform, turned in the best performance of the day, reeling off several long gains and always adding yardage when it was needed. Blastic made several nice gains, and scored once on a 65-yard run after a statue of liberty play and a lateral pass that completely fooled the Utah team. Story proved himself a driving fullback, and Hileman, who is used mainly for his strong defensive game, stepped out of character long enough to make a few long gains.

Utah State's highly-touted defensive line did not function against the Grizzlies, and the Montana forward men kept their opponents bottled up all the time. The first score came in a hurry with repeated gains, and the second one followed a pass interception by Story and an 81-yard run that put the ball in position for the touchdown. Stansberry passed to Emery for the third score, and Blastic's long run ended the game safely in the hands of the Grizzlies. Leonard Kuka, Hawke and Reynolds ended their careers at Montana with good line games, and were ably supported in stopping the Utah State forward wall by Sullivan, Carpenter and Brandenburg.

BASKETBALL SEASON

Climaxing their efforts by winning the state intercollegiate basketball title for the first time in twelve years, the 1934 Grizzly basketball squad played one of the most successful seasons ever recorded, winning 16 games and losing 10. After defeating their arch-rivals, the State College Bobcats, in four straight games and winning other contests against such great teams as the House of David, Ellensburg Normal, the Pacific Coast conference champion Washington team, School of Mines and several other lesser opponents, ten men were awarded letters for service on Coach A. J. Lewandowski's hoop club. The men who were awarded letters were Jimmy Brown, William Erickson, Henry Blastic and Charles Flanagan, forwards; Al Heller and Al Dahlberg, centers; William Hileman, Monte Reynolds, Naseby Rhinehart and Don Hollaway, guards. Lehman Fox received a letter as manager of the team.

The Grizzlies tallied a remarkable record, scoring 929 points against 954 registered by their opponents, or an average of 35.7 points a game against 36.7 points for the opponent teams. Jimmy Brown led the scorers of the team with 207 points during the season, and was followed closely by three of his teammates, Erickson gathering 164, Heller gathering 151, and Dahlberg scoring 108. These men were responsible for most of the Grizzly scoring, while Reynolds, Hileman, Rhinehart and Hollaway turned in fine support on the defensive phase of the game.

The Grizzlies opened their season by drubbing the Polson Independents, composed mostly of ex-collegians from Carroll College, the State College and Intermountain Union, by a 34-29 score. Jimmy Brown and Bill Erickson led the Grizzly scorers with 10 points apiece, as the State University squad triumphed easily in the first game of the season.

Leaving Missoula for a Christmas holiday trip, the Grizzlies journeyed to Helena where they trounced the Helena Independents, 38-29.

The Grizzlies traveled to Great Falls and there lack of experience cost them the first loss of the season as they dropped a 57-32 contest to the great Golden Bobcat aggregation. The Golden Bobcats had such players as Frank Ward, "Cat" Thompson and Max Worthington who were chosen as all-American candidates during their college careers; and that team had lost only to the Ogden Boosters, who boasted the lineup of an ex-national championship team.

The Grizzlies returned to Missoula and engaged the Idaho Vandals, losing a heart-breaking contest, 27-29, when the Vandals nosed into the lead in the final minutes of play and kept the ball away from the Grizzly club. Brown scored 13 points to lead the scoring, but the rest of the team could not cope with the height of Grenier and Klumb of the Idaho club, and were unable to help enough in gathering points.

The Grizzlies began another tour after the Idaho game, and went to Billings where they engaged both college teams of that city. In the first game, the Montana team got into its stride to swamp the Billings Polytechnic team, 52-38, with Brown again in the leading role scoring 18 points. In the second game of the Billings series, the State University tossers started slowly but gathered speed and trounced the Eastern Montana Normal School by a 59-35 margin. Al Heller starred for the Grizzly club, tossing 16 points for high scoring honors.

Returning here for a long stay, the Grizzlies opened their home campaign by trimming the Gonzaga Bulldogs, 29-19, in a fast rough game that was featured by much unnecessary roughness and many fouls. Poor passing lost many chances for both squads, but the Grizzlies proved to be accurate in the tight places to win the game without much trouble.

The Grizzlies opened their assault on the state hoop title one week later by defeating the highly-touted School of Mines Orediggers, by a 46-38 margin. Bill Erickson led the scorers with 18 points, while Reynolds and Hileman cooperated effectively to stop the high-powered threats of Ray Gallant and Erick Erickson, the two Miner stars.

The Grizzlies had a short rest, before they entertained the fast Ellensburg Normal team in a two-game series. The Ellensburg aggregation came to Missoula highly touted as the class of central Washington, but the determined Grizzlies surprised them to edge out a 34-33 victory in the first contest of the series. The Grizzlies led most of the game, but the visitors crept up until the final minutes saw them only two points behind. Holl, the giant Ellensburg center, was awarded two free throws, making the first one and failing to convert on the second try. Reynolds took the ball off the backboard and kept it from the visitors until the gun ended the game, giving the Grizzlies a well-earned victory. The next night the Ellensburg team came back with a powerful offensive to stop the Grizzly attack and win by a 26-24 margin. The visitors showed better than they had the first game, and kept the local varsity quint dazzled by their smooth ball-handling and passing. Ellensburg started strongly, and maintained a large lead until the final minutes of the second half when they stopped a determined Grizzly rally.

The Grizzlies journeyed to Butte for their next game, and strengthened their claim on the state hoop crown by beating the Miners again by a 47-37 margin. The game was one of the roughest of the season, 34 fouls being called on both teams. The Grizzlies were slowed by 19 personal fouls, losing two men by that rule.

The road-weary State University quint stopped off at Dillon and was stopped by a determined State Normal School team that tossed too many free throws to win by a 44-35 score. The Normalites proved to be very accurate at the foul line, tossing 14 shots of the 18 attempts they had. Heller shot 17 points to lead the scorers, but his tired teammates could not support him enough to win the game.

The Grizzlies ended the tour by nosing out the basketball team of the University of Idaho, Southern Branch by a 38-37 score in a hard-fought contest at Pocatello. The teams were even on the number of field goals made, but the Grizzlies tossed one more free throw which proved to be the margin of victory.

The Grizzlies began an extended Pacific Coast trip by dropping another game to the Ellensburg Normal team on the Normalites' home court. The Grizzlies showed traces of weariness from the long trip, and could not cope with the Normal's flashy attack and stout defense led by Case, one of the fleetest forwards in the Northwest conference. Blastic was the only Grizzly who could consistently hit the hoop, and he contributed eight points as the Grizzlies went down to a 24-46 loss.

The Grizzlies journeyed to Tacoma for the next series, winning the first game from the College of Puget Sound by a 40-34 margin. Both teams started slowly, and the first half was almost even. A furious second-period rally, led by Heller who scored 12 points, netted the Grizzlies their winning tallies and put them ahead as the game ended.

The College of Puget Sound Loggers came back in the second game of the series, and nosed the Grizzlies, 42-39, in the final minutes of play. Blastic led the Montana tossers with 11 points, while the scoring of Captain Stan Bates of the Loggers proved too much for the Grizzly sharpshooters.

An alert Grizzly team took the Washington Huskies by surprise the next night, and nosed out a hard-fought 32-29 victory over the team that later became the champions of the Pacific Coast conference. The Grizzlies hit the basket from all angles, and kept the Husky aces, Bob Gale and Hal Lee, throttled. The champion Huskies, who had ridden rough-shod in the northern division of the Coast conference, were taken off their feet by the smooth playing ability of the Grizzlies and could not solve their attack enough to win the game.

The Huskies, angry and puzzled by their defeat, came back the next night and ran up point after point to trounce the Grizzlies by a 60-24 margin and even the series. The entire Husky team was used against the battered Grizzlies, with Wyman and Lee, two hot-shot Huskies, leading the scoring column.

Although the Grizzlies could not penetrate the Husky defense, the players received much credit from Seattle fans who witnessed the game. Dahlberg led the Grizzlies with seven points, while Heller's backward shots and the rustling of Hileman and Reynolds received much comment.

The Grizzlies returned home after the Coast invasion and engaged the Bobcats in two home games. The first game was a thriller, with Montana leading up until the final minutes when the Bobcats cut a nine-point lead to one point. Then, their rally fell short and another Grizzly basket cinched the game, and allowed the local varsity to triumph by a 36-33 margin. Heller again tossed 11 points to lead the scorers, while the rest of the Grizzlies had some trouble with Doyra, the huge Bobcat guard who spoiled many plays.

The next night, the Grizzlies came out again to nose their traditional rivals by a 40-38 margin, with Jimmy Brown in the leading role with 14 points for the Grizzlies. The Bobcats started off to a big lead, but the Grizzlies rallied, cut the lead and edged into the winner's column as the gun ended the contest.

The Grizzlies surprised even their most loyal fans in their next home game by coming from behind in a thrilling contest to defeat the traveling House of David club by a 38-36 margin. The Grizzlies provided the thrills by matching the clowning efforts of the visitors, and went into the lead which they held until the game ended. Brown and Erickson gathered 10 points apiece, but none of the Grizzly tossers could match "Red" Johnston's 29 tallies.

The Grizzlies put up a stout defense in the second game of the series, but the Davids were too much for them in the final minutes of play, going into a lead and ending with a 36-31 triumph. The two teams were even most of the way through the game, but the bearded basketweavers hit the ring with amazing regularity in a final spurt which netted them a victory.

The Grizzlies journeyed to Bozeman to play the title series against the Bobcats, with the winner of the series taking the championship. In the first game, the teams were even all the time until Jimmy Brown slipped through the Cat defense in the final 10 seconds of play and scored a basket, giving the Grizzlies a 37-36 win and the state hoop title for the first time since 1922.

The Bobcat threat was maintained by Vavich and Young, who accounted for almost all of the Bobcat scores, but Brown, Erickson, Dahlberg, Hileman and Reynolds cooperated in championship style to cinch the crown.

Playing in anti-climax atmosphere, the Grizzlies and Bobcats battled through a slow, uninteresting second game, with the State University tossers coming out ahead by a 31-23 margin.

Olsen's Terrible Swedes came here as the world champions of amateur basketball, and displayed their wares in a slow, uninteresting contest, winning by a 38-17 margin. The Grizzlies came back in the second game and wound up their 1934 season by giving the Swedes a bad scare before they went down before a heart-breaking 44-43 loss in a fast overtime game.

TRACK SEASON

Grizzly track and field stars are working hard this year to build up a strong contender from the ten lettermen who are the nucleus of the 1934 Grizzly squad. Coach Harry Adams has many point possibilities among several of the track and field events, but is lacking in talented distance runners to balance his team.

The ten lettermen who will form the foundation for this year's squad are co-captains William Hawke and Arthur Caven, Al Dahlberg, Nasely Rhinehart, Lew McDaniels, Ken Duff, Roy Peden, Monte Robertson, Monte Reynolds and Billy Vickerman. In addition to these men are several freshmen numeral winners from last year who will make strong attempts for points, among them being Gene Davis, Henry Lowney, Tom Wigal, Jack Price, and others. Others who have entered in varsity and freshman competition and who may develop into strong point-winners are Ben White, Melvin Maury, William Wagner, Jack Lubrecht and many others.

Coach Adams has four men who are capable of less than ten seconds in the hundred yard dash, Robertson, Duff, Peden and Davis being the quartet who will offer the most points for the Grizzlies. These four men are all excellent sprinters, and efforts are being made to have them sent to one of the big relays or meets in the east as a 440-yard relay team. As a relay team, the quartet presents one of the best lineups that has been seen here at the State University and they ought to cooperate for many points this season.

Other certain point winners are Hawke in the javelin, Reynolds and Rhinehart in the weights, Vickerman, Davis and Caven in the hurdles, Holloway in the weights or javelin, Dahlberg and Heller in the jumps, Robertson and White in the broad jump, McDaniel and Wigal in the pole vault, Robertson, Duff and Peden in the 220-yard dash, Duff in the 440-yard dash, Maury in the half-mile, Taylor in the mile, and many other candidates who may show possibilities in any of the track or field events.

The Grizzly meets this year include the annual state intercollegiate meet here, a dual meet with Idaho and the annual Pacific Coast conference meet, in addition to some other invitational affairs to which all or part of the Grizzly squad will be sent.

Last year the Grizzlies won the annual state intercollegiate meet, gathering 102½ points for the largest total ever run up by a Montana team in this meet. The Grizzlies were the masters at almost every division, winning every event but two, these two being the distance races which were won by Gus Holst, the Bobcat star. Nearly every first place winner is back this year, and the State University is looking forward to another decisive triumph over such colleges as the State College, the School of Mines and Carroll College.

Idaho won last year's meet by two points, but the Grizzlies have a good chance to get even this year if things break right. The Montana squad is better balanced than it was last year, and may gather a few more points where they were missed at Moscow.

Last year's freshman team did well in several telegraphic meets, and Gene Davis wound up the season by beating Gene Garner, the highly-touted flash from the State College in two special races here. So Coach Adams may look to the frosh for a few needed points when those track men vie for places on this year's varsity.

It looks like a good season for the Grizzlies, and they will have plenty of opportunity to show what they can do under keen competition. An early spring is giving the Grizzlies a better chance to get in shape for the coming season, and they have plenty in their favor to get out and win points for the State University.

M CLUB TOURNEY

Five new boxing champions and two new wrestling champions were crowned this year following furious battles for the titles of the various divisions at the State University in the annual M Club tournament held under the auspices of the lettermen of the State University. In what proved to be one of the best tourneys of the past few years, only two champions defended boxing titles and won, while four mat titleholders retained their crowns.

An extra-round fight between Rex Henningsen, the defending welterweight champion, and George Niewoehner proved to be the most exciting of the evening. Henningsen finally showing more power and clever boxing in the extra round to win the decision. Two state amateur champs were on the card, Hubert Zemke retaining his state amateur middleweight and State University 160-pound championships, while Roy Babich, winning the State University heavyweight title, came into the ring as the Rocky Mountain heavyweight titleholder.

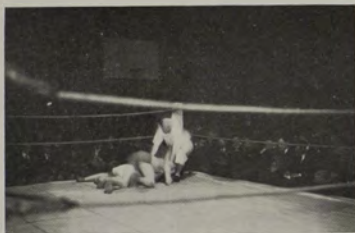

Hubert Zemke, in successfully defending his title, won the M Club trophy, awarded each year to the best individual boxer in the card. Zemke fought a newcomer to the ring, John McDonald.

Randall Jarvis showed a hard punch and good condition in the opening fight of the evening with Bill Erickson to win the State University lightweight crown.

In the first wrestling match of the card, little Leland Yates staged one of the biggest upsets of the evening to defeat the defending featherweight champion, Dick Karnes, by throwing him in one minute and 55 seconds. Virgil Stephens started the titleholders' parade by successfully defending his middleweight wrestling title in a ten-minute decision from Hugh Copenhaver.

Wilfred Gits won a thrilling overtime match from Joe Ferrara to win the featherweight boxing crown of the State University, Gits piling up his lead by landing more effective punches than his whirlwind punching opponent.

The second upset of the evening came in the wrestling division when Harold Lewis threw Champion Jack Congill to win the welterweight title. Orvo Kinonen, a little blonde flash, furnished the fireworks in the next bout by showing a clever defense and a powerful offense to win the bantamweight boxing title from Eddie Cook by the technical knockout route.

Ray Rimel again took the lightweight wrestling title after more than seven minutes of fighting with Bob Hoflard, after it had seemed that the fight would go the ten minutes. Rimel showed more experience but was unable to get the proper hold until he obtained a half-Nelson that spelled defeat for Hoflard.

In the next fight, Roy Babich, Rocky Mountain heavyweight champ, showed that he was everything critics said he was as he pounded out a quick technical knockout over Glenn Shultz to win the State University boxing crown in that class. It took only 45 seconds of fighting to show the fans who was master, and Shultz, who had been dazzled by the flying gloves, was stopped and the fight given to Babich.

Bob Myers used almost the identical route that he used last year to again defeat Roger Grattan after two minutes of fighting, successfully defending the light-heavy wrestling title. A half-Nelson and armbar showed the way to victory for Myers and he won quickly after getting Grattan in place to apply the pressure.

Larry Bowler brought a sleep-producing left out of nowhere in his fight with Bill Kreuger, and that left brought a clean kayo for Bowler over Kreuger after a few minutes mixing in the first round, Bowler winning the State University light-heavyweight crown with the kayo. As the fight started, it looked as though Kreuger would have the upper hand, but Bowler uncorked his powerful mit soon to settle the issue.

Leonard Kuka took the ring in the next fray and soon subdued Clifford Olsen to win the State University heavyweight wrestling title again. Experience and more weight spelled victory for Kuka, as he slammed Olsen around to win the fight.

The last fight of the evening proved to be one of the best, as Rex Henningsen and George Niewoehner fought three furious rounds to a draw and then Henningsen applied the power in the extra frame to win from his opponent and retain his welterweight boxing crown. Niewoehner had the edge in the first, but Henningsen solved the attack in the second and took the lead in the fighting. In that last round, both fought furiously and the bout was called a draw. Henningsen had more endurance and piled blows all over Niewoehner in the final set-to to take the decision by a wide margin.

UNIVERSITY SWIMMING TEAM

The State University swimming team, organized better than it has been in the past, had one of the most successful seasons in many years. During the training period, an Inter-fraternity swimming meet was held and won by the Independents over Sigma Alpha Epsilon in the finals. Then, during the winter quarter the Grizzly squad was organized and a meet was held between two divisions of the team, one team headed by James Hennings and one by Albert McArthur, the team headed by the former winning an exciting tourney. The team held its annual meet with the State College team during the Inter-collegiate Minor Sports Meet, and piled up enough points against them, so that in spite of losing that meet, helped the State University to win the annual minor sports carnival for the first time in many years.

Albert McArthur was elected by the team as captain, and his squad consisted of James Hennings, Steve Angland, Robert Bell, John McClernan, George Roskie, George Boileau, William Garvey and Ira Kopelman. Entries for the meets were: McArthur, Hennings, Angland and Garvey in the 40- and 100-yard free style events; Bell and Hennings in the backstroke and breast stroke; McClernan and Boileau in the 220-yard free style event; Roskie in the backstroke; and Kopelman in diving. The Grizzlies scored a big surprise on the favorite Bobcat swimmers in the minor sports carnival, and led 31-29 after all the individual events had been run off. But, in spite of the breath-taking races by Hennings and McArthur in the 160-yard relay race, the Bobcat team won that event in record time and nosed ahead to win the meet. The relay record set by the Bobcats was one minute, 24.5 seconds, lowering the old mark by .3 seconds. In this meet, Hennings led the scorers with 12 points, while McArthur was second with eight points. Early in the spring, Al McArthur was sent to Portland where he entered the free style events of the Pacific Northwest Intercollegiate swimming tournament. Although he was eliminated just before the final races, he staged a fine performance and showed good time in the races he entered.

INTER-FRATERNITY BASKETBALL

The Alpha Tau Omega quint won the annual Inter-fraternity basketball race for 1934, defeating the Phi Delta Theta team in a close battle in a play-off after both teams had tied for the league lead. The Phi Deltas started the season strong and continued their winning form by defeating the Alpha Tau Omega team in an earlier game and then losing one other contest to fall back into a tie for first place with the A. T. O's. The playoff game was one of the most thrilling of the season, with the A. T. O. club taking advantage of a few Phi Delt mistakes to nose out their rivals, 20-19, and win the championship.

The 1934 Inter-fraternity league was successfully run off, with the following fraternities entered in the competition: Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Phi Sigma Kappa, Sigma Nu, Delta Sigma Lambda and Sigma Phi Epsilon. Every team showed good playing, and, with a few exceptions, every game was either closely contested or fiercely fought. Differing from years before, most of the teams were composed largely of freshman students, and many varsity prospects were found in the Inter-fraternity race. Harry Adams, director of intramural athletics, and Marion McCarty, minor sports manager, directed this season's league.

At the first of the season, a team from the Independent group was entered in the Inter-fraternity competition, but after a few games, the Barbs withdrew from the league and organized a league of their own. The Independent league had several teams representing South Hall, West Wing; South Hall, East Wing; Student Co-Op, and the Missoula Independents. That league which played during the fraternity race was won by the South Hall, East Wing team by default from the West Wing Club. After a long, close season in which every team scored victories, the two South Hall teams were tied for the championship. West Wing failed to show up for the title playoff, however, and the East Wing Club won the championship of the league.

UP WITH MONTANA

Up with Montana, boys, down with the foe,
Old Montana's out for a victory;
She'll shoot her backs around the foemen's line,
A hot time is coming up now, brother mine;
Up with Montana, boys, down with the foe,
Good old Grizzly will triumph today,
And the squeal of the pig will float on the air
From the tummy of the Grizzly bear.
