

CLASSES

The courses offered at MSU reach into all walks and interests of life. Above, a skiing class makes use of Montana's scenic mountains to learn an age old sport.

Finals, midterms, research papers, and quiz sections filled the academic life of the student body. It was a hard fight to pull a passing grade out of the scholarship minded professors when one had so many other activities to think of—committees, dances, traditions, athletics, and fine arts all took their toll.

ACADEMIA

MSU has many proud academic traditions which are maintained by a responsible faculty and student body. Each year new gains are made in the various fields. A new doctoral program was started in Geology. Dr. Munoz started the Stella Duncan Research grants. The Montana Press Hall of Fame was established. The honor sections in certain lower division courses were continued and there was talk of a course challenging system. Someone began to talk of Saturday classes and semesters but no one was listening with a great deal of enthusiasm.

Graduate Dean Dr. Ellis Waldron inspects new equipment in the Geology graduate program handled by Chairman Fred Honkala.

The library was the center of learning on campus as the student body made almost daily pilgrimages to its protecting solitude and educational facilities.

Test time may bring a smile to some, but for the majority of us brings a deep seated feeling of "why didn't I study?"

Dwight Anderson, President Castle, and John Gesell meet to discuss their chances in the Rhodes Scholarship Competition. Dwight and John were chosen as MSU's candidates after an elimination round on the local level.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Once again, Montana State University had a fair share of the scholastic honors achieved by American college students. The list of awards at the annual Awards Convo was long and impressive. Scholarships and grants were the rewards attained by the scholastically elite. Pictured below is just a few of the outstanding minds found in our college community.

Anne Morrison
Woodrow Wilson Award

TERRY CARPENTER

The University was represented in every field by outstanding students with noted achievements.

Doug Beigle won the Harvard Law School Fellowship. The Foresters passed out awards to five of their top students. Claudia Hooper received the Lehn and Fink award for the highest scholastic rank in pharmaceutical subjects. The Home Economics faculty award went to Ruth Ann Dwyer. Thomas Granbois won the Grizzly Cup in athletics. The Mortor Board Cup was won by Elma Knowlton. Thus, many finished the year with tangible evidence of their achievements.

FRESHMEN

The enthusiasm was a fever pitch as a new class invaded the campus and began to build the myth that would become the Class of 1962. They were one of the largest classes since post war days and the dormitories were hard put to find rooms for them all. The Orientation Week testing previewed the high academic abilities that they would attain. Each year a new class enters and another departs and one begins to realize as he notes all the new faces that the composition of a university is forever changing and bettering itself, as are these students pictured here.

With one year of experience, the avid class of 1961 began to make their mark at MSU. Life became more than an academic grind. It was Spurs and Bearpaws, Greek or Independent, office hours at the Lodge, and looking ahead with assurance.

It was hard to realize that two years had gone by so fast. They had been years of a great deal of achievement. We had proven ourselves and now were to accept the mantle of authority as the new campus leaders while those ahead of us worked drearily to bring this unforgettable passage of their lives to an end.

JUNIORS

By the Fall of 1958, the Class of 1960 was aware that this was their big year.

They had made it past those treacherous academic hazards and were now ready to show that without them there would be no university.

SENIORS

Only a step from graduation, a new world opened to the Seniors. Their's was the life of "now or never". A close world of books, friends, academic fatigue, and college "daze" was soon to be left behind. The mark one would have to make in this world was beginning to mean a great deal to them. It's usually at this time that they realize how little they really know.
