

Greeks and Living Groups

Eddie Templeton, an Independent, studies in his dorm room while Carol Frankovich and Ed Hall, members of Greek houses show the Homecoming spirit by riding on the float sponsored by their houses.

The student life of the Greeks, and the Living Groups (composed primarily of Independents) is basically the same. Both set their goals toward high scholastic achievements, sponsor quarterly functions to include all their members, and strive to promote and strengthen the academic standards of the University.

Bruce Bagbee and Dick Everett participate in the revelry of a football game while Eddie Templeton seems to be caught in a villainous magical trance as he tries to contemplate the thoughts of Plato.

Greek Activities

Miss Linda Rhein, a Delta Gamma, brought recognition and praise to herself and her sorority. Here Linda is placed in the spotlight once again as she appears in the Homecoming Parade.

The projects . . .

The royalty . . .

Miss Rotalie Manzenrider was crowned Esquire Queen of Alpha Tau Omega at their Winter Formal. She is only one of the many co-eds chosen by fraternities each year to preside over the functions sponsored by the houses.

The Phi Delt-Theta float showed that Greek spirit was high during the Homecoming activities. The float with band, car, and costumes, brought a smile to the viewers on the street as well as to those who rode—or danced—on the float.

The entertainment . . .

The Delta Gamma sorority presents a skit featuring Connie Graham as "Luella Lott-a-Pottie"; Cheryl Kosak, Social Chairman, demonstrating the best social manners; and Sally Hewitt, Scholarship Chairman, showing the proper attitudes for "Quiet Hours."

Bonnie Pfeifle dances during a rush party for her house, the Delta Delta Delta sorority. Each house has their own form of entertainment to amuse the raibees.

The formal and very informal . . .

The highlight of the Sigma Phi Epsilon social calendar is their Queen of Hearts Ball. Putting their best foot forward (or backward), David Davies and Mikal Morgan enjoy the formal atmosphere.

During the traditional painting of sorority pledges, unwillingness soon turns to submission as the brothers use the technique of subtle persuasion.

The ATOs welcomed the national television audience to the Idaho-Montana football game with this banner. The fraternity turned out in full force for most of the home games.

The ATOs take great interest in community service and in helping those less fortunate than they. During Christmas, the ATO house sponsored a Santa Party and gave their guests a marvelous time by having Santa Claus there "in person." All the members of the fraternity and the Little Sisters of the Maltese Cross were present for the occasion.

Living Group Activities

The Miller Hall Dance was organized by Ben Hurwitz, Social Chairman of the Men's Dorms. The dance was held in the Lodge and free food and music were available to anyone who was interested.

Sandwiches were served to some while others danced to the music or watched the band and their light show.

The Gingerbread Band performed for the Men's Spring Social Function. Chuck Vick, the lead singer, added to the band's performance with his expressions and his musical talent.

As the name "independent" implies, most of those living in a dorm have ideas which do not necessarily agree with others living in the same building. Here, two ambitious campaigners for Ed Leary designed large signs that were hung from the Knowles Hall balcony and in Craig Hall windows. It is debatable whether this type of campaigning produces any definite results but the effort that goes into any project in order to support a certain belief is well worth the time spent.

Jesse Hall

The eleven stories of Jesse Hall became the home of the freshmen girls last Fall Quarter. Combining modern furnishings and personal knick-knacks, Jesse Hall soon became the center of activity as the year progressed. The elevators, which quickly speed to the upper floors were an improvement over the slower elevators in the other dorms.

As the seasons changed, the women living in the upper floors of the dorm were given a clear long-distance view of Missoula and the surrounding area. From their vantage point, they can see all the activity on campus and now can find a good reason to day-dream between study hours.

One of the ceremonies which included a living group was the SAE pinning ceremony. Here, Mark Eicholtz and Kirby Toffley, John Moran and Diane Taylor, Rod Young and Cathy Brown, and Scott Wink and Holly Holms stand as they are serenaded in front of Jesse Hall during Spring Quarter.

Eating in the Food Service offers a variety in menus and atmosphere. Here, the Food Service treated the students to an old-fashioned Steak Fry in the Oval, where members of the women's living groups enjoyed one of their last meals before going home to "home-cooked" food.

Junior Sponsors

Junior Sponsors have a big responsibility and only those women who have shown outstanding ability in campus activities and scholastic achievement are eligible.

Knowles Hall

Knowles Hall, the upperclass women's dormitory, is a center of activity. The dorm faces the Lodge and is the main thoroughfare for those living in dorms behind Knowles and for those parking in the Knowles Hall parking lot.

Sue Wambach and Sandy Kimes attend to the duties of the Knowles Hall desk. The women who work here are responsible for the dorm as they are left in charge by the housemothers.

Senior Residents

The housemothers and the officers of Knowles Hall keep the systems running as smooth as possible. The dorm has a "closed night" once a week to conduct special business at floor meetings.

The lounges of many of the dorms on campus are a place for study, for conversation, for listening to records, or for playing a piano.

Liz Towne braves one of the all too frequent Spring storms.

Below, many a bewildered parent has gone through the exciting chore of packing his child's belongings and wondering how in the world it is all going to fit.

The Knowles Hall Lounge is used for many purposes and here it serves as a study place for Sandy Kimes and her date who seem unconcerned by the Sentinel photographer.

Turner Hall

Turner Hall, the smallest of the women's dorms, had four senior residents this year. These women provided a good reference for all the underclass students living in the dorm.

Officers

All students at one time or another are involved with the student dispensary at the Health Service. Here, Becki Deichamps, Mrs. Carol Mesnard, and Roger Gorton help with the pharmaceutical needs.

Living Groups Activities

The Sadie Hawkins Day Dance is a big event for the living groups because it is an all school function which is widely advertised and very popular. Here, Rita Donahue and Gary Thogersen pose for a picture in their costumes. The costumes provide an extra amount of revelry to the function.

Final week affects all enrolled students on campus and reminders of "quiet hours" can be found posted on many bulletin boards.

As the snow melts, the lawn behind Brantly Hall becomes known as "Brantly Beach" and the traffic there between classes becomes strangely heavier as more swimming suits appear.

Men's Dorms

Aber Hall

The Resident Assistants of Aber Hall have a demanding job. Aber, the freshmen men's dormitory, is new this year and the RA's have the tedious chore of keeping all the inhabitants from destroying the new furnishings. Although the RA's are expected to maintain their high grade point and good class standing, they have the additional challenge of the incoming freshmen and their problems.

Music was provided for the Food Service Steak Fry on the Oval.

As the various residents of the living groups pursue their individual interests, many make a name for themselves in many fields. Jim Noon, the Sentinel photographer can be credited with quite a few of the outstanding pictures in this book.

By Spring Quarter the members of the living groups find it hard to stay inside.

The Oval provides a place to study, to hold classes, or merely to carry on a casual conversation.

With the shift to Aber Hall in January, many of the Resident Assistants of Craig Hall found their job considerably easier. Craig Hall had many empty rooms during Spring Quarter and these RA's did not seem to mind at all.

Duniway-Elrod Halls

The bulletin boards of the various dorms also seem to be quite interesting.

Spring Quarter and a $9.00 parking fee for 1967-68 brought pavement to the Elrod parking lot.

The old and the semi-new combine in the Duniway-Elrod complex. The complex houses many men and requires much additional work from the Resident Assistants. Possibly the most lively group of RA's, these men handle any problem that may arise with ease.

Ah, the times at Miller Hall. The Resident Assistants of Miller are required to handle any "practical jokes" that the men in the dorm may try. As the majority of residents in Miller are seniors, by the end of four years, many jokes have been tried and the best are usually perfected so that no one takes the blame. These RA's have a tough job but they seem able to carry the burden well.
