FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, AUGUST 22

Dr. James J. Munro and Frances F. Hanson have been appointed to the staff of the School of Education at Montana State University, Missoula, announced Dr. Linus J. Carleton, dean of the School.

Dr. Munro will be an assistant professor teaching courses in counseling and educational psychology and will guide graduate research in special education. Dr. Munro, head of special education for the Missoula public schools for four years, has been a visiting instructor at MSU for the past four summers. Previous to this time, he taught an extension course in adult reading improvement at the University of Washington for two years. He also has taught at the Baker, Ore., high school for two years. He received his B.S. from Iowa State College, M.S. from Cornell University, and Ed. D. from the University of Washington.

Miss Hanson will be an assistant professor and will teach courses in child growth and development, methods and materials of elementary school teaching, remedial reading, early childhood education, and assist with the supervision of student teachers training for elementary positions. She has been a supervisor and school psychologist at Fairmont, Minn.; a school psychologist at Austin, Minn.; consultant and director of child study at Fargo, N.D.; and teacher in grade schools in Fargo, N.D. She has served as supervisor of student teachers during summer sessions at the State Teachers College at Minot, N.D. and Moorhead, Minn.; the University of Wisconsin; and the College of Education, Marquette, Mich. She also has been a kindergarten supervising teacher at the University of Wyoming; taught an extension course in human growth and development at Moorhead State Teachers College; and held a high school psycho-education clinic at the University of Minnesota during summer sessions. She was awarded a diploma and B.S. from State Teachers College, Moorhead, Minn., and M.A. from the University of Minnesota. She is working on her Doctor of Philosophy Degree at the University of Minnesota this summer.
