ORIENTATION WEEK AT MSU BEGINS SUNDAY

The president's reception for parents of new students, scheduled for Sunday (September 22) from 2 - 4 p.m. at the Lodge, will launch orientation week at Montana State University, Missoula, MSU officials announced.

Orientation week, which precedes the opening of fall-quarter classes on Monday, September 30, serves to introduce new students to campus life and to get them officially registered. University administrative officers, faculty members, and students will be on hand during the week to help the newcomers become adjusted to their new environment.

On Monday freshmen will be briefed on registration procedures and other activities planned for them during the week. On the agenda are placement and aptitude tests, physical examinations, conferences with faculty advisers, campus tours, and social events, including fraternity and sorority rush parties. Actual registration will take place on Friday.

New students are urged to arrive on the campus as early as convenient on Sunday, according to Andrew C. Cogswell, dean of students. Transfer students from other colleges or universities should arrive on Tuesday, he added.
