Montana State University Weekly News Roundup

FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, JANUARY 9

The Iowa Legal Aptitude Test, which measures capacity for the study of law, will be given at Montana State University, Missoula, on January 18, according to Dr. Ray V. Phillips, director of the MSU Counseling Center.

Persons considering entrance into any law school should plan to take this test, Dr. Phillips said. Admission to the test will be restricted to the first 50 applicants, so anyone interested who has not yet applied should do so immediately at the Counseling Center (room 209 of University Hall), he said. There is no fee for taking the test, he added.

Dean Robert E. Sullivan of the MSU Law School recommends that students planning to enter any law school take the Iowa Legal Aptitude Test; but he stresses that it is not a substitute for the Law School Admissions Test, which is required for admission to most law schools, including the MSU Law School.

Montana's champion cherry pie baker will be selected from among winners of six district contests at the state bakeoff in the Montana State University Home Economics Laboratories on Saturday, Mrs. David Knoyle of Missoula, state contest chairman, announced.

The state champion will represent Montana in the national contest in Chicago, Ill., in February. The national event is sponsored annually by the National Red Cherry Institute in celebration of Washington's Birthday. The state winner will receive an expense paid trip to Chicago to compete for national prizes, Mrs. Knoyle said.
